He knew full well that the Lord by the hand of Samuel had anointed him to be the successor of Saul. He had learned the essential lesson which the School of Providence was designed to teach, namely, that the position now open to him was no easy one to fill. His exile and sufferings gave him self-control. He had the good sense to know that promotion to the throne did but bring "harder duties and multiplied perplexities." He threw himself upon God and asked for guidance. He rendered instant obedience to the Lord's answer. If we are to enjoy God's fellowship and blessing we must render quick obedience. He made a right beginning, therefore God prospered him. When he reached Hebron the men of Judah came and anointed him king over them. Thus a part of the nation recognized him as king and ratified the work which Samuel did many years before. When David went up he took with him all who had been with him in exile and suffering. They are now sharers with him in the kingdom. When David's great son, Christ, shall enter upon his glorious reign, those who have been faithful to him in his rejection shall reign with him. "If we suffer we shall also reign with him." (II Tim. 2:12); "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my father in his throne." (Rev. 3:21).

II. David's Behavior Toward the Men of Jabesh-Gilead (2:4-7).

The men of Jabesh owed much to Saul (I Sam. 11), and they showed this recognition of debt by making a daring dash to rescue his body from the ignominious exposure at Bethshem. David's act of sending men to Jabesh with a message of good will for their affectionate remembrance of Saul is an exhibition of his noble generosity. His love for the unfortunate king survived all the injuries which he suffered at his hands. He forgave and forgot them all. This was an act of political shrewdness as well as a generous one. In fact the only policy which proves effective is that which proceeds from a generous heart. He deftly follows this generous commendation with a solicitude for the men of Jabesh to transfer their loyalty to himself, since he is now their legal king. Since Saul is now dead, he urges them to be valiant for him. In view of the civil war which was to follow he knew it would require valiant men to stand by God's king. This appeal to be valiant is needed now, for we are all called upon to take sides between God's appointed king, Jesus Christ, and Satan, the pretender to the throne. May Christ's appeal result in making us faithful and valiant for him.

III. The Dual Kingdom—War Between the House of Saul and the House of David (2:8-4:12).

This period of civil war lasted seven and a half years. Most of the tribes of Israel clung to Ishbosheth, Saul's son, whom Abner had proclaimed king at Mahanaim. Feuds continued between the rival generals. David's power increased while that of Ishbosheth's waned.

IV. David Crowned King Over United Israel (5:1-5).

Though the struggle for supremacy lasted long and was a bitter one, Abner's death and Ishbosheth's assassination put an end to David's opposition. David's behavior during this time gradually won for him the confidence of the tribes so that they all came to him at Hebron and anointed him as their king. They accepted his divine right to rule (v. 3). The reasons for anointing him their king were:

1. He is their brother (v. 1). This is true of Christ our King. Through the incarnation he has become one with us.
2. He was their true leader ever, even in Saul's time (v. 2).
3. He was the Lord's choice (v. 2).

Procrastination.

Procrastination is helping the devil in retarding righteousness in the world. Remember that legend of how he summoned his imperial staff and offered a reward to the member who would suggest the best way to destroy a human soul. One said, Convince him there is no God. Another said, Prove there is no immortality and no truth in the Bible. But still another suggested, Convince him that there is no hurry about his accepting the good resolutions. And the devil gave [illegible]

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

How to Treat A Torpid Liver

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 35c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

Gained Ten Pounds

Before Taking ZIRON, Alabama Man Was Weak Nervous, Had No Appetite, But Is Now Strong.

EVERY man and woman, who is in a run-down, weak condition, with bad complexion and poor appetite, due to lack of iron in their blood, should find Ziron helpful and strength-building.

It is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, composed of ingredients recommended by leading medical authorities.

Describing his experience with Ziron, Mr. George W. S. Lanier writes from Jones, Ala.: "Some time back, I was in a terrible condition. I was weak and nervous, and had a tired feeling all the time. My skin was muddy. I had no appetite, and at morning I didn't feel like getting up. I was reading of Ziron and decided I would try it . . .

"Will say that Ziron is a good medicine. I have gained ten pounds in four months. Am strong and have a good appetite."

Ziron is a mild iron tonic, good for young and old. It helps to restore the system, when run-down by overwork, under-nourishment, caused by stomach and bowel disorders, or as a result of some weakening illness.

Get Ziron from your druggist. He sells it on a money-back guarantee.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

MRS. BROADHEAD HOSTESS

One of the loveliest of the week's social gatherings was a pretty porch party at the home of Mrs. Hugh Jones when Mrs. Grady Broadhead entertained the Wednesday evening Bridge Club and a few extra guests.

At the conclusion of the game, Mrs. Luckie held highest score and was presented a lovely hand-embroidered handkerchief, while during the cut for guest prize Mrs. Mary L. VanDerveer was awarded a box of stationery. A tempting salad plate with iced tea was served to the following club members: Mrs. Harvey Chandler, Mrs. V. J. Heard, Mrs. Watts Moore, Mrs. Luckie, Mrs. H. Simpson, Mrs. Hance Alred, Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mrs. Eric Hart and Mrs. N. S. Johnson. MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

On last Monday evening at 4 o'clock the Womans Missionary Society held their regular social and business meeting with Mrs. W. W. Fox. After the business lovely refreshments were served.

MRS. WYATT HOSTESS

Enjoyable in every detail was the Embroidery Club of last Thursday when Mrs. Mack Wyatt proved a most gracious hostess. A pleasant evening of fancy work was spent and late in the afternoon a delicious ice course was served.

EDWARDS - ROBERTS

A simple but pretty wedding occurred on last Wednesday evening at four o'clock at the Methodist Parsonage, when Miss Mae Roberts became the bride of Mr. Willie Edwards of Pittsburg, Pa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. C. Maye, in the presence of a few relatives.

The bride was beautiful in her dark blue traveling suit of tricotine.

After a few weeks visit to relatives here they will leave for Pittsburg, where Mr. Edwards holds a responsible position with the Westinghouse Electric Company.

A most enjoyable affair of the past week was the chicken broil, given at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. William Sandlin on Monday night. A large table was placed on the lawn, where a regular picnic feast was enjoyed. Afterwards a water melon cutting took place. Those who enjoyed this lovely outing were: Mr. T. C. McSwain and family, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Allen and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thad McSwain and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hann and family, Mr. and Mrs. Halley Frauls and family, Mr. and Mrs. Macey Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. W. Worn Down, Out of Heart

Georgia Lady, Worn-out and Tired, Tells How She Was Helped by Ziron Iron Tonic.

THE personal experience of Mrs. Nannie Phillips, of Powder Springs, Ga., is printed below in her own words:

"I was in a worn-out condition. My stomach was out of order. I didn't sleep well. I was tired all the time. I couldn't half eat, and didn't rest well at night.

"I would get out of heart and hope. I would feel like I was going to be down in bed. Yet I kept dragging around.

"We heard of Ziron, and from what I read, I was sure it wouldn't hurt me, if it didn't help me. But after taking it, I found it really helped me, and I sent back for more. I ate better, felt much stronger. I am sure Ziron is a splendid tonic."

Many people, who are worn down and discouraged, due to stomach disorders and nervous ills, find relief by toning up their blood with Ziron Iron Tonic.

Tell your druggist you want to try Ziron or your money back guarantee.

THE UNION-BANNER

L. IX. CLANTON, ALA., JULY 29, 1920. NUMBER 18

GOV. COX HAS SURRENDERED TO THE WILSON RULE

COL. HOUSE REVEALS CAUSE OF FAILURE OF THE TREATY

President Wilson's Intimate Friend Begins to Discuss the Mistakes of the Foreign Policy of the Administration.

Colonel Edward M. House was for years President Wilson's most mate friend, and during six years his confidential messenger in dealwith foreign governments. They ived information of the Presi's intentions oftener thhu Colonel se than from his Secretary of te.

When President Wilson returned Paris in June, 1919, with the e Treaty, and the League Covet signed, he left Colonel House re as his personal representative, ough there had been a breach ween the President and the four er peace delegates, Colonel House, cretary Lansing, General Bliss and Ambassador White.

All these chosen advisers had forted the President's confidence by ering to differ from him about ntung, Russia and other phases the Peace Treaty.

fter the return to America of the sident's four collaborators in mak the Peace Treaty, President Wilson refused to receive or to talk with y of them, the breach between them d become too wide.

Now Colonel House is again in Euope, this time in an unofficial capaity, and he has begun publicly to discuss the mistakes of President Wilson. In an authorized statement he says:

"A suggestion was made in Paris t after the armistice to proceed once in the making of a preliminary treaty of peace with Germany ose, based upon broad general lines ld concerning four subjects—army, vy, reparations and deliniation of ndaries. The boundaries need not ve been so drawn as to give Gerany the assurance that her loss of rritory would not be greater than ticipated. Such a treaty could have en made by Christmas of 1918 and ould have been not only the usual t the obvious thing to do. There as at that time facing Germany the ntire allied army, militant and flushed with victory, and there would ave been no delay or evasion of erms."

It was President Wilson alone who reject that programme. He had declared during his first visit to Europe in December, 1918, that the League of Nations covenent MUST have the right of way over any peace treaty.

He returned to the United States in February, 1919, to address the new Congress. In his absence from Paris ipal Powers agreed to hasten the paipal Powers agreen to hasten the paification of Europe, and preliminary terms of peace must be settled first. The plan on which the delegates of all nations in the Conference agreed in the absence of President Wilson was, in the words of Colonel House:

"A careful survey should be made of Germany's resources and ability to pay and a sum assessed which the bankers of the world might be willing to underwrite. If this view had prevailed, the French and Belgians could have received their allotment in cash, which would have been of untold benefit to their respective countries."

But President Wilson, as soon as he returned to Paris, again upset this plan. He was determined that the League Covenant should be settled first, and Lloyd George and Clemenceau, finding any progress impossible without him, finally consented.

The Wilson programme greatly prolonged the agony of Europe, The delay was injurious to all the allies. As it has worked out it has been to the advantage of Germany, which after a year has not paid one penny of indemnity. Colonel House now adds:

"It is doubtful whether Germany has it in mind to pay anything at present, and it may be that she contemplates letting the future care for itself."

Colonel House sees a hiedous mess in the war debts owed by European powers, one to another. France thinks that she should be relieved entirely of her debt to England because she bore five-sevenths of the loss in a war directed not more against her than against England.

England is willing to cancel the debt of France to her provided the United States will cancel Great Britain's greater debt to America. Andre Tardieu, the French High Commissioner, understood from the American peace delegation that such an agreement would be made. Colonel House says of the situation to-day:

"And this leads to the thought that the lending of funds by one government to another should never be done unless under unusual circumstances. It is always provocative of ill feeling and the forerunner of trouble. In the last analysis, if the debtor government declines to pay, it means war.

"Great Britain being closer to the European continent and in more intimate touch with it understands this difficulty better than we do. She is embarassed by it, for she is conscious of the difficultes into which she may be led. She is confronted by unpleasant alternatives, one her domestic situation in regard to excessive taxation and the natural disinclination of her people to replenish any such substantial part of the national assets as their foreign loans; second, if she insists upon payment from her allies, bad relations are certain to ensue, and it is by no means probable that anything like full collection can be made. It is possible that her government will finally conclude to face the domestic situation and preserve her prestige and good relations with her continental neighbors."

Finally Colonel House evidently regards the present situation in Europe as more critical than at any time since the armistice. He says:

"Conditions in Poland are rapidly approaching a crisis. If Poland succumbs to the Russian invasion, Germany will be the next to go, and largely for the reason that Germany will elect to go. There may be a passive resistance, but a majority of the Germans will welcome the Russians as deliverers.

"The Russian army will be enormously strengthened by recruits from the late German army, and together they will make a formidable force, a force that will take all the resources of the western powers to reckon with.

"If this should happen, and it is well within the bounds of probability, what will England, France and the United States do to counter? If they raise large armies to oppose, can they be transported? Will labor furnish the motive power?"

No one ever uttered finer sentiments for the rule of democracy than President Wilson. But no American in such high place ever ACTED more autocratically or more unwisely in foreign affairs.

SHOULTS NEWS NOTES

Everybody in this community is through work, and enjoying the good meeting at Pleasant Grove this week. Protracted meeting started Sunday, Rev. James Adams helping Rev. J. D. Martin. His sermons are grand; he held the congregation spell bound Sunday morning and Sunday night. We feel that great good is going to be accomplished this week.

Mr. Holland Hicks who has been in Birmingham hospital is at home now, and visited his brother, Mr. W. P. Hicks last Friday night.

Mrs. Oscar Shoults from Selma has been visiting her relatives here last week, she left Friday to visit her sister, Mrs. Lum Williams near Clanton. Mrs. Shoults is making preparations to move back here, but her husband will work on in Selma for a while.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Wheeler is at home sick. He was working for the M. & O. R. R. Co.

Mrs. John Mitchell has been to Selma again to see the doctors, but she is doing nicely now.

We are so glad Miss Fannie Moore has returned home from Selma hospital, and glad that she is doing so well.

Mr. Ben Head and family from Birmingham has been visiting his cousins, Mr. C. T. Walker and Mrs. Mollie McGee.

Mr. Fred McGee and family from near Randolph attended preaching service at Pleasant Grove Sunday and Sunday night.

Mr. W. P. Collins from Lawley motored to Mr. John Mitchell's Sunday afternoon.

Mr. C. T.Walker is painting his new house. This will add greatly to the looks and last of his house.

Miss Eliza Hall is spending a few weeks with her niece, Mrs. T. C. Snead at Centerville.

Mr. Dalton Hicks spent a few days last week with his uncle, Mr. W. P. Hicks.

The many friends of Rev. Buford Lawrence from Birmingham were delighted to see him again at church last Sunday night at Pleasant Grove.

We are having plenty of rain and the crops are looking fine.

Mr. Lawyer McGee is on the sick list; we hope he will soon recover.

COX'S UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

Washington, July 26.—Candidate Cox's surrender to the Wilson League idea makes more certain Democratic disaster, declares the Republican Publicity Association, through its president, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in a statement issued from its Washington headquarters today, as follows:

"If anything was needed to make more certain the disaster that is impending for the Democratic party it has been furnished in the White House conferences between the president and Gov. Cox, with Mr. Roosevelt an interested listener. In the generally accepted meaning of the term, the meeting was a 'conference' in name only, but it had all the characteristics of every so-called conference in which Mr. Wilson has taken part. The president spoke, and Gov. Cox, like all the others who have been there before him, bowed his head and said, 'Those are my sentiments too.'

"After the president had satisfied himself that the candidate thoroughly understood the part he is expected to play, the meeting adjourned to the dining room where Cox and Roosevelt were permitted to lunch with two of the executive triumvirate, Messrs Tumulty and Grayson, the third member, Mrs. Wilson, being absent. Prepared statements from all three participants at the conference were handed to the press, testifying to the complete harmony that had prevailed. 'I found,' said the president, 'that he and I were absolutely at one with regard to the great issue of the league of nations.' 'What he promised,' pledged candidate Cox, 'I shall, if elected, endeavor with all my strength to give.' 'I wish,' reverently echoed Mr. Rooevelt, 'that every American could have been a silent witness to the meeting between these two great men.' Fortunately Americans were spared the humiliation of actually hearing the schemers plotting to betray their country.

"It is fortunate from every point of view that the issue has been drawn thus early and so clearly. No platform planks have approached the Wilson and Cox statements in bluntness, and the candidate's speech of acceptance cannot add nor detract from the definite obligations which he has assumed. The President makes it clear that he considers the honor of the nation bound up in acceptance of the league of nations and Gov. Cox is equally uequivocal in his stand for the same policy. The candidate, like his mentor in the White House, takes the stand that the honor of the United States has been in the keeping of Wilson the individual, and that the promises he has personally made at home and abroad have become, ipso facto, obligations upon the nation, and that the specific pledge that he made when he appended his signature to the league covenant must ,if national honor is to be preserved, be accepted by the people.

"To that position the Republican party and candidates take violent exception. They declare that the obligations contained in the league covenant originated and have remained as only the individual utterance of Mr. Wilson. Never have the people given their assent to them either by popular ballot or through their elected representatives at Washington. On the contrary, the Senate has specifically rejected them twice, and the people in November, 1918, when the league idea was being first discussed, refused to endorse the president's earnest plea for support, and returned a Republican Senate and House.

"Mr. Wilson promised that Congress would obligate itself, whenever certain circumstances should arise, to wage war in any part of the world. To a man, the Republicans of the Senate refused to enter into such contract. That is the issue of the presidential campaign: Shall we or shall we not solemnly agree to spend our billions and sacrifice our lives 'to preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence 'of all members of the League?' Cox and Roosevelt answer 'Yes.' Harding and Coolidge answer 'No.' It is up to the voters next November to give the nation's answer in a way that the world and Wilson cannot misinterpret."

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE CANNOT DODGE THE ISSUE

Harding Demands that Cox Give the American People His True Position on Questions Confronting the Country.

Assuming that the conference between Governor Cox and President Wilson would result in their complete agreement, Senator Harding issued the following statement before word had reached Marion regarding the outcome of the Washington conference:

"The President and the Democratic nominee for his successor are in conference today, and at the conclusion it will inevitably be announced that they found themselves in complete accord, that harmony reigns, and unity is established in the Democratic party.

"The significance of that announcement will not be missed. There is just one way that can establish accord between himself and the President—that is by yielding his own opinion at every point to that of the President. When the nominee establishes accord with the President, it means that the latter is in charge of the campaign and will be the real force of the next administration, if it is Democratic.

"Therefore, in connection with the announcement of harmony between the president and the Democratic nominee, it will be pertinent to inquire the basis of the agreement. The country is very anxious to know if any unqualified acceptance of the League of Nations program is agreed upon.

"Second—Has Governor Cox pledged himself to ratification of the treaty and League without essential modifications?

"Third—Has Article X been accepted? It has repeatedly been declared that Article X is the 'heart of the treaty', and that to cut it out would 'break the heart of the world.' Is the Democratic ticket still for Article X?

"Fourth—The President, naturally, has stipulated that Gov. Cox must assume, underwrite and liquidate all international commitments in which the present administration involved itself and the naton.

"The president could not possibly demand less. A Democratic successor could not possibly grant less, because he stands upon a platform that makes the same guarantees.

"It becomes, therefore, timely to ask: 'What are the various, 'mysterious, uncertain obligations to which the President has committed us?

"Somebody must tell us, because the people are wanting to know.

"Has Governor Cox undertaken, in case he is elected, to renew demand that this country take a mandate over Armenia? Has he undertaken to maintain the administration policy in the Adriatic, where we have wellnigh forfeited the friendship of the great Italian people, brought Italy to the verge of revolution and almost wrecked the establishment of peace?

"Has he pledged himself to insist that Thrace shall be joined to Bulgaria, instead of to Greece, regardless of the wishes of the Thracians, the Greeks and our allies?

"Broadly, has the nominee taken over the various and unknown commitments of the present administration's foreign policy in order to establish harmony between the president and himself?

"To these questions the American people are entitled to an answer. They will insist on knowing what they are assuming.

"It is perfectly apparent that President Wilson's foreign policy involves the need of a great army and navy, for the administration demanded that we build by 1925 a navy equal to Britain's. It also demanded the creation of a regular army twice as large as we ever had in peace.

"What did the president want of these vast armaments, unless to fight with them? Governor Cox will know now, for he is in complete accord with the president.

"It is earnestly to be hoped that Governor Cox will frankly and promptly answer these questions, because the Republican party wants the country to know it rejects all these ill-considered commitments and pledges its administration against them."

CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association will be held at the court house in Clanton, Ala., August 23. We will have three State workers with us, and we hope to have the best convention Chilton has ever had. We expect every Sunday School to report to our county Secretary, Della Williams.

Meet us in Clanton on August 23.

D. J. FLUMMER, Pres.

BEAT ONE IS CHAMPION

Tom McKee of Beat One calls our attention to the fact that his Beat was the only one in the county that cast a solid vote in favor of the ten year three-Mill tax for public school purposes.

This is a distinction of which any Beat might be proud, and as Mr. McKee suggests, we think it shouldn't be overlooked. The properties of the Alabama Power Co., at Lock 12 are located in Beat 1.

Judge Reynolds, M. D. Foshee, Jim Grant and Walter Gillespie attended the meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee in Birmingham the first part of this week.

We are very glad indeed to state that Rev. W. J. Armstrong has returned from the West where he went some months ago in search for health. He says he feels as well as he ever felt in his life, and we hope his recovery is permanent. Mr. Armstrong has been one of our most useful citizens in the past, and we sincerely hope he may enjoy a future as long and useful among his people even as his past has been.

Mr. T. M. Dunlap and family, companied by Mr. Raymond A motored down and spent the with Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley Sunday.

Messrs J. R. Holley, Jr., and D McArrel of Birmingham, accomp ed by Misses Thelma Boyd and A Barkley visited the former's par Sunday.

COAL SUPPLY IS CAUSING CONCERN

STATE BOARD OF CONTROL EMPLOY MEASURES NECESSARY TO OBTAIN FUEL.

SENTENCE COMMUTED TO LIFE

Alleged Murderer of Davis Simpson, Farm Overseer, Is Removed to Wetumpka.

Montgomery.—Provision of an adequate coal supply for Alabama's state institutions during the coming Fall and Winter, is a problem which is causing the state board of control and economy serious concern. C. B. Rogers, chairman of the board, states that the coal supply situation in Alabama is acute, and although he hopes that supply of fuel for all institutions can yet be arranged through ordinary business channels, if this is found to be impossible, then the state may be compelled to take extraordinary measures in order that inmates of the state prisons and other eleemosynary institutions may not suffer when freezing weather arrives. He states he is using every means in his power to assure the delivery as soon as possible of enough coal to supply the anticipated needs of the state through the coming season. The difficulty encountered at the present time in obtaining coal is attributed by Mr. Rogers not solely to transportation facilities or conditions at the mines, but to a combination of both.

The reply of the Russian Soviet government to the British note concerning an armistice with Poland rejects in substance the British peace proposals. The document is a very lengthy one. The Russians decline to come to London for the suggested peace conference, because it is hinted that Great Britain is not impartial. They further object to the admission to the conference of delegates from the Baltic States, because they contend they have already concluded peace with the Baltic States.

In replying to the British government, anent Poland, the Russian government points out that the proposed armistice line is unfair to Poland and that with direct negotiations the Bolsheviki are preparing to grant Poland a much more favorable frontier. The reply refuses flatly to entertain any conditions regarding the forces of General Wrangel and the refugees in south Russia and demands the unconditional surrender of these.

The management of the Mexican railway has appealed to Gen. P. Elias Calles, minister of war, to prevent strikers at Vera Cruz and Mexico City from interfering with the movement of petroleum trains between the two cities and has been advised that the general can not send forces against the strikers.

Maj. Gen. John L. Chamberlain, U. S. A., inspector general, has arrived at Geneva, and will be officially received at a later date by the authorities of that city. He will inspect the Red Cross and other international institutions.

The cornerstone of the first of the French Protestant churches to be rebuilt in the devastated regions of France has been laid at St. Quentine. The funds for rebuilding the churches were furnished by a New York woman, a Presbyterian.

Washington—

Without official information regarding the decision of the allied powers to furnish military aid to Poland in her struggle with the Bolsheviki government, officials refrained from formal expression of opinion, but unofficially professed to see in the new situation most of the elements of a European war on a broad scale.

Apprehension as to the safety of foreigners in Crine, China, resulting from the fighting in progress between the forces of the two rival factions is lessened by advices received by the state department from the United States legation at Peking.

MUST SIGN OR QUIT EUROPE FOREVER

ALLIED REPLY TO TURKISH OBJECTIONS DELIVERED TO SULTAN'S PEACE DELEGATION.

THE ULTIMATUM DELIVERED

"Time Has Come to Put End, Once and for All, to Empire of Turks Over Other Nations," Says Note.

Versailles.—A threat to drive the Turks from Europe "once and for all" was contained in the allied reply to the Turkish objections to the peace treaty delivered to the Turkish peace delegation here. Such action might follow Turkey's refusal to sign the treaty or her failure to give it effect, the reply states.

The Turks were informed in the reply that they must make known their decision within 10 days. If by July 27, they were told, they had not signified their willingness to sign the peace treaty, "the allied powers will take such action as they may consider necessary."

The allies made some minor modifications in the treaty after the Turks had presented their protests, but it is understood these modifications do not materially affect the original draft.

The allied reply is couched in the bluntest language, and says:

"If the Turkish government refuses to sign the peace treaty, still more if it finds itself unable to re-establish its authority in Anatolia or give effect to the treaty, the allies, in accordance with the terms of the treaty, may be driven to reconsider this arrangement by ejecting the Turks from Europe once and for all.

"The allies are clear that the time has come when it is necessary to put an end once and for all to the empire of Turks over other nations."

The reply says the Turkish government would appear to think its responsibility in war is less than that of its allies and that Turkey therefore is entitled to lenient treatment but the allies cannot accept that plea. The note maintains "Turkey entered the war without a shadow of excuse or provocation," and by closing the straits in the face of the allies "Turkey certainly prolonged the war by not less than two years and caused loss to the allies of thousands of lives and thousands of millions of pounds."

HOT WEATHER

Hits the Stomach Hardest

Chicago, Ill.—Hot weather hits the strongest stomach and causes serious trouble for the weak ones, so word is now going out to thousands of eatonic users that they should, during this hot weather, be on the safe side and take one eatonic after about half an hour before meals as well as after eating. Do this and keep the excess acids and poisonous gases from forming in stomach and bowels. Eatonic acts quickly; it will help the appetite and take away the hot-weather, feverish, thirsty feeling from mouth and stomach, because it takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases and carries them out of the body and, of course, when the cause of the trouble is removed, there can be no bad feeling. Eatonic is like a bit of candy, and is recommended to all as a safe, sure remedy these hot days for stomach and bodily troubles, caused from overeating and drinking cold things. Adv.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

Jud Tunkins says one beauty about votes for women is that the system brings politics into the home and gives the folks something to talk about besides their relations.

FOODS FOR HOT WEATHER.

When preparing the breakfast coffee in a hot morning, add enough to make two or three extra cupfuls, which may be served for dinner at night, iced, or for a cool drink at noon. There are so many kinds of cool drinks, from iced tea, coffee and cocoa, to all the fruit juices which one may put up at home or purchase in the market.

To make iced coffee, take the beverage of the usual strength served when hot, add ice and sugar and cream as desired for each glass.

A chicken sandwich with a dish of head lettuce with a French dressing, or a more elaborate Thousand Isle dressing, makes a meal with a glass of chilled milk or iced tea, which is sufficiently satisfying for the most exacting appetite.

Lemon Sirup.—Grate the rind of one lemon, add the juice of six, with four cupfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of water. Boil all together for ten minutes; cool and put into a bottle in the ice chest. When serving, pour a little of the sirup into a glass, add chipped ice and fill the glass with cold water. This is such an easy way to have lemonade always ready to serve.

Gelatin Pie.—Bake a flaky crust on the bottom of a pie plate and, when cool, stir in a pint of any flavored gelatin, beaten until foamy and thick. Cover with whipped cream and serve cut in the usual way. Let stand on ice to become firm and ice-cold before serving.

Velvet Sherbet.—Take the juice of three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar, a quart of rich milk and the grated rind of one lemon. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then freeze as usual. This makes a most delicious frozen dish.

Tomato Salad.—Arrange one thick slice of tomato for each cover on heart leafs of lettuce. Over the tomato heap very finely minced celery, cucumber and onion which has been mixed with a French dressing to marinate. Top the salad with a small spoonful of mayonnaise and serve at once.

Labor is man's great function. He is nothing, he can be nothing, he can achieve nothing, he can fulfill nothing, without working.—O. Dewey.

DISHES FOR OCCASIONS.

When making cake for company try the following:

White Cake.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of milk, the whites of four eggs, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted in one-half cupful of flour. Cream the sugar and butter and add one and one-half cupfuls of flour alternately with the milk, beating and mixing until smooth; then add the half cupful of flour sifted with the baking powder. Fold in the stiffly beaten white the last thing. Bake in a loaf.

Pineapple Pie.—Prepare a rich pastry and line a pie plate. Fill with the following: One cupful of shredded pineapple, one tablespoonful of butter, the yolks of two eggs, one cupful of powdered sugar. Beat the sugar and butter to a cream, add the beaten yolks and the pineapple. Cover with a meringue prepared from the whites or they may be added before baking and the pie served with whipped cream.

Imperial Muffins.—Add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar to one cupful of scalded milk. When lukewarm add one-third of a yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth of a cupful of lukewarm water. Add one-half teaspoonful of salt and one and one-fourth cupfuls of flour. Cover and let rise over night. In the morning fill the buttered muffin rings two-thirds full. Let rise until the rings are full then bake thirty minutes in a hot oven.

Maple Parfait.—Beat four eggs slightly and pour on slowly one cupful of hot maple sirup. Cook until the mixture thickens then remove from the heat at once. Cool and add a pint of cream beaten until stiff. Turn in a mold, and pack in ice and salt. Let stand three to four hours.

Mint Sangaree.—Crush three sprigs of mint with a lump of sugar. Put into a glass half full of cracked ice. Add four tablespoonfuls of grape juice and fill the glass to the brim with charged water. Shake thoroughly and strain into another glass. Serve garnished with a sprig of mint.

top That Backache!

Those agonizing twinges across the small of the back, that dull, throbbing ache, may be your warning of serious kidney weakness—serious, if neglected, because it might easily lead to gravel, stone in the kidney, bladder inflammation, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. So if you are suffering with a bad back, have dizzy spells, headaches, nervous, despondent attacks or disordered kidney action, get after the cause. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has been tried out for you by thousands.

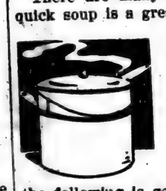
QUICK SOUPS.

There are many occasions when a quick soup is a great convenience. A stock pot is helpful but not necessary and for a small family not practical. A good soup stock can be made of beef extract and vegetables of which the following is good:



Slice a large onion into a deep granite dish, add a slice of turnip cut fine, a large carrot sliced, three stalks of celery, including the tops, three dozen peppercorns, six cloves, a stick of cinnamon, three bay-leaves, the same of parsley, sage, thyme and summer savory. Fill the pan with cold water, bring to the boiling point and simmer slowly until the vegetables are well cooked—about one and one-half hours. Strain through a coarse muslin and measure the liquor. For each quart add one teaspoonful of beef extract. Dissolve the extract in a little of the soup stock and add to the rest. Boil up once and serve. From this stock aspic jelly may be prepared by using gelatin.

For corn soup add one cupful of cooked corn that has been pressed through a sieve to six cupfuls of the stock.

Carrot soup may be prepared in the same way, using one cupful of minced carrots put through a sieve after cooking. Beans, peas, cabbage, onion or any vegetable may be used in the same proportion.

Split Pea Soup.—Soak one cupful of split peas over night and boil until tender, then drain. Add a sliced carrot, a sliced onion, and half a turnip. Brown the vegetables in a little butter, cover with beef stock, boil up, rub through a sieve and re-heat. A ham bone or a little piece of salt pork may be cooked with the soup.

Peach Soup.—Peel, stone and cut fine a quart of peaches. Break three or four of the stones, pound the kernels fine and add to the peaches, with sugar to taste. Cover with orange juice and one teaspoonful of almond extract; let stand one hour, then put on ice and serve very cold in sherbet cups, with cracked ice.

I tell you the future can hold no terrors
For any sad soul while the stars revolve,
If he will stand firm on the grave of his errors,
And instead of regretting, resolve, resolve.
—E. W. Wilcox.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Of course there is nothing nicer in a corn dish than corn cooked on the cob and eaten from it with a bit of butter and a dash of salt; but for variety corn may be served in many substantial dishes, furnishing a main dish for the meal.

Squaw Dish. — Sometime when you cannot think of what to eat, cut the corn from half a dozen ears, put into a frying pan two tablespoonfuls of bacon fat and when hot turn in the corn. Stir and cook, adding salt and pepper, adding more bacon fat if needed. Canned corn is very good served in this manner.

Raspberry and Currant Soup.—Bring to the boiling point two cupfuls each of raspberry and currant juice, sweeten to taste, thicken with three teaspoonfuls of arrow root, smoothed in a little cold water. Add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and serve cold.

Any fruit such as cherry, strawberry, pineapple or rhubarb may be prepared for a cooling fruit soup.

Ginger Punch.—Take a half-pound of Canton ginger, chop, add three tablespoonfuls of sirup. Cook together and cool one quart of water and one cupful of sugar 15 minutes with the ginger added; cool, strain, add one-half cupful each of orange juice and lemon juice and one quart of ginger ale. Chill and serve.

Lemon Soup.—Add the juice and grated peel of a lemon to four cupfuls of water. Bring to the boiling point and thicken with three teaspoonfuls of arrow root mixed in a little cold water. Cook until smooth, cool and serve with cracked ice and bits of candied ginger in each glass.

Date Crumbles.—Take two eggs well beaten, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful each of chopped dates and walnut meats. Mix all together and spread on two greased pie tins. Bake in a slow oven three-quarters of an hour. Crumble and serve in tall glasses topped with whipped cream, or mix with whipped cream and serve.

THERMOMETRIC SCALES.

The scale employed by a thermometer is indicated by one of the initial letters, F., C., R., or by the name, Fahrenheit, Centigrade, Reaumur. The degrees of one thermometric scale are readily converted into those of another. Following is their relationship: 180 degrees F. equals 100 degrees C., equals 80 degrees R. Therefore 1 degree F. equals five-ninths of a degree C., equals four-ninths of a degree R.

CALOMEL DYING FAST IN SOUTH

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Is Taking the Place of Dangerous, Sickening Drug.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's Dodson's guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate so let them eat anything afterwards.—Adv.

Step by Step.

"Supposing," said the man who wants to see everybody happy, "that we somehow arrange to give you a six-hour day. Are you sure that you will be contented?"

"For the present. Of course, I shouldn't think of asking for less than six hours' work to the day. But I have an impression that in the course of time our chronological system will need revision so that we'll have 25 or 30 minutes to the hour."

MOTHER!

"California Syrup of Figs" Child's Best Laxative

Accept "California" Syrup of Figs only—look for the name California on the package, then you are sure your child is having the best and most harmless physic for the little stomach, liver and bowels. Children love its fruity taste. Full directions on each bottle. You must say "California."—Adv.

A Foreboding.

"Henrietta and I have had some pretty warm arguments about public questions," remarked Mr. Meekton.

"Married people should not sacrifice their independence of thought."

"Of course not. But I hope they'll never revise the laws so as to grant divorces on the grounds of incompatibility of politics."

The troubles of her neighbors are apt to worry a woman.

DO ALL MY HOUSEWORK

Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly stand, says Mrs. Kwarcinski.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered with displacement and irregularities and I did not know what to do. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and use the Sanative Wash so I took her advice and used these remedies and cured myself. I feel fine and do all my housework which I could not do before, as I could hardly stand up and I have three healthy children. You can use this letter if you wish, for your remedy is certainly wonderful for sick, run down women."—Mrs. A. KWARCINSKI, 3627 W. Oakdale Ave., Chicago, Ill.

For forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration, and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularities and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Women who suffer are invited to write for free and helpful advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

FORESHADOWING AUTUMN STYLES

NO ONE turns away from the beautiful and too-brief summer of the North, even to consider its glowing autumn, except from necessity. But those who must think ahead in the matter of the styles, have already given time and attention to frocks for early fall, because they must be ready for the young woman whose school work is resumed in September. They are fore-handed and blaze the trail that mothers from one ocean to the other will follow, in outfitting their daughters who are still in school.

Even when materials have gravitated to something like normal in price, only those of substantial quality and plain texture are chosen for school girls. Reliable fabrics and simple designing are for them. Many schools prescribe a uniform for everyday wear, and this makes easy sailing for those who must outfit the student. But there are other things besides the uniform to consider, among them frocks to be worn on the street and on occasions when the student is not in school.

Two new models that are pretty and practical ought to please their youthful owners, for they are becoming to lithe young figures. Brown is a favorite color and the frock at the left is successfully made in this color of any of the plain wool fabrics that can be depended on for service. It is a one-piece affair having a blouse ornamented with braid in the same color, that has the effect of embroidery. There are flaring sleeves with handsome braiding and a plain skirt set onto the blouse about six inches below the normal waistline. Covered buttons are set on in a loop at each side of the skirt. The plain round neck which youth may venture to wear, is slashed at the front with a tiny vestee inserted made of lace, and there is a heavy silk cord finished with a knot, about the easy waist.

The vogue for accordion plaiting is to hold over into the fall, according to the pretty dress shown at the right. This is also a one-piece model with plaited skirt set onto a plain bodice having a short jacket with long sleeves over it. A very wide girdle, finished with pointed ends falling from short loops, fastens at the left side. The jacket is outlined with two rows of narrow braid in white and the frock, in this instance, dark blue. There is a small sailor collar at the back. These are pretty frocks that will serve without a wrap for fall, and with a warm coat will last out the winter.

Caps for Morning Wear

THE woman who meets the acid test of the breakfast table and the bathing beach and succeeds in looking attractive at these places, is the envied of her sisters. It is no small undertaking, yet there are many who succeed—and there are many who fail in it. Almost everyone can manage the garb for early morning successfully—but the bathing suit is more difficult and takes considerable study. It is of less importance than the dress for the beginning of the day.

Morning dress must be suited to the morning's occupation. In these serviceless days most women must engage themselves with the business of getting breakfast ready or helping to get it. It is not the hearty meal our forbears indulged in, for most modern households have learned the wisdom of a light breakfast, but it requires very practical dressing. Besides the one-piece, simple cotton frocks that come from the weekly laundering looking crisp and sprightly, there are popular breakfast sets that include a skirt and a jacket, or blouse, made of the same washable materials. These are the only wear for early morning working hours.

The woman who needs to concern herself with housework may indulge in silk breakfast jackets of crepe or georgette or chiffon. Pretty as they are they are not more pleasing than those crisp cotton frocks made by her own clever fingers.

Whatever the sort of dress, a pretty breakfast cap worn with it is the strongest ally of fair woman at the breakfast table. These little affairs of ribbons and laces and all other gay and frivolous fabrics are made in unending variety so that there is a cap for every face. One has only to experiment to find it, and this experimenting is more worth while than we are likely to imagine.

The breakfast cap is the least expensive of luxuries and the easiest bit of finery to make, as may be gathered by looking at the samples shown in the picture. One of them is made of wide satin ribbon fitted to the head by rows of shirrings. It has two bands of shirred lace across the front bordered with narrow flutings of ribbon and a rosette of this narrow ribbon at each side. A frill of lace all around the cap finishes it. Satin ribbon about two and a half inches wide, and lace cut in triangles form the crown of the other cap. The ribbon is placed in a band extending from back to front and from side to side with the spaces between filled in with lace. Ribbon is shirred in a band about the head, finished with bow and ends at the back.

HARDING'S MASTERPIECE

If there were any doubts lurking in the minds of independent political thinkers, if there were any disgruntlements yet to be found among disappointed partisans of unsuccessful candidates for the presidential nomination, if the slightest trace of factionalism persisted, all doubts, all disgruntlements, all factional feeling vanished with the reading of the truly marvelous exposition of Americanism which breathes in every line of Warren G. Harding's speech accepting the Republican nomination for the Presidency. Henceforth, the struggle to restore constitutional government to our people, to save us from the toils of European and Asiatic intrigue, to deliver the nation from the rule of organized minorities, will be unitedly waged without respite until the forces of one-man government, internationalism, and class-pandering are dissipated and the triumph of the Harding-Coolidge type of nationalism will bring the bitter struggle to a close.

The question which every reader of that splendid document must ask himself is, Am I for party first, or for America first. The speech is a benison to that man who would break away from the bondage instituted by Wilson, and which would be perpetuated by Cox, and who longs for the restoration of those American principles which transcend mere party differences. Nothing which Mr. Cox may say can add to or subtract from the intense patriotism, the breadth of vision exhibited by Mr. Harding. No rhetorical design which that craftsman of fine phrases, Mr. Wilson, may weave upon his typewriter can curb the appeal which Harding's words make to the American heart. After all that has been said and done, the vast majority of us are Americans first. Those staunch disciples of Thomas Jefferson who have hesitatingly followed Woodrow Wilson in his political meanderings of the past few years, and who have recently been assured by Mr. Cox that he is but the shadow of his leader, may find in Harding's nationalism a signal for a parting of the ways; a refusal further to jeopardise American institutions by Wilsonian bell-wethering into a fool's paradise.

Harding's speech gives to the Republicans the assurance that they have done far more than to clinch a party victory by nominating such an exemplar of American thought. It convinces them that they have named the man who will save the nation from embranglement without, and disruption within, for there is nothing in Harding's career as a statesman that has ever given the lie to the sentiments he has uttered. As he promises, so will he perform, and the promises to be read in his acceptance speech are the performances which will meet the approval of the people.

In the call of the conscience of America is peace, peace that closes the gaping wound of world war, but it is better to be the free and disinterested agent of international justice and advancing civilizaton, with the covenant of conscience, than to be shackled by a written compact which surrenders our freedom of action and gives to a military alliance the right to proclaim America's duty to the world. "I wish the higher wage to abide," says he, "on the explicit condition—that the wage-earner will give full return for the wage received." He voices his belief in the budget system, more business-like federal departments, in the protective tariff policy—"we will be calling for its saving Americanism again"—for a great merchant marine, our eminence in trade, standards of immigration, unshackling child labor, stamping out lynching, ample and becoming housing, the revision of taxes, and the guarantee to every citizen of his rights of citizenship. Mexico is deserving of help, but she must respect our boundaries and American lives, the laws must be enforced, but they must harmonize with the Constitution.

Breathes there an American with soul so dead who will not subscribe to sentiments like these? Harding's acceptance address is but the prelude to his inaugural address on the 4th of March, next.

"WHAT HE PROMISED I SHALL ENDEAVOR TO GIVE."

(From the Democratic Montgomery Advertiser)

The President has availed himself of his position as a Democrat, twice elected as the candidate of his party, to force the issue of the League of Nations as the paramount question of the campaign. Whether it was or was not wisely done, we cannot tell until the morning after the November election.

We do know now, and we can tell now, that the President's interview with Governor Cox and his announcement that Governor Cox was in "hearty accord" with him and would make his fight for the League of Nations was exactly what the Republican candidate and the Republican party wanted.

The conference held Sunday at the White House between the President, Governor Cox and Franklin D. Roosevelt, was called at the initiative of the President. We rather suspect, that the candidates on the Democratic ticket would have preferred not to have held so public a meeting and not to have so materially assisted in the making of the League of Nations the dominant issue of the campaign. We suspect that the great majority of the Democratic leaders who were assembled in San Francisco Convention would have preferred that no such emphasis be put upon the league of nations as an issue, or upon the President as an issue in the campaign. The Democrats had heartily endorsed the President and his Administration, as they had to do and as they should have done. They had, however, been unwilling to accept the plank he sent to the convention on the League of Nations; a committee had to redraft it before the convention which did not want to go as far as the President did, would accept it.

The convention rejected, one by one, all candidates who were before it as distinctly Wilson men. The assembled Democrats, after trimming the League of Nations plank, chose as their nominee the candidate before the convention, who was farthest away from the Wilson administration.

Then when the Democratic campaign is going swimmingly there came to Governor Cox, as the Democratic candidate, an invitation from the White House, an invitation which he could not ignore nor refuse. As the party leader, making the fight for a Democratic victory, he needs the President's support and the active aid of the President's friends. The ticket could not win unless the President and his following supported it loyally and energetically. He might not and probably did not care to have the power of the President and the Administration's policies emphasized at this time as constituting a political issue. But he met the situation boldly, made the trip, held the inevitable conference, and stood fairly forth to say that he and the President were agreed on "the meaning and sufficiency of the Democratic platform, in the face of the threatened bad faith to the world in the name of America." And concluding Governor Cox, loyal Democrat that he is, says, "What he promised, I shall, if elected, endeavor with all of my strength, to give."

But was all this necessary? Nobody but the Republicans have been pleased.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR A REPUBLICAN.

Our good friend, Pate Parrish, of Route 3 came to town Wednesday, and brought the Union-Banner force the finest watermelon we have had this season. "Jeff" said if we had not been Republicans he would have brought us one of his biggest melons. If he should bring us one of his Democratic melons it might be bigger than the one he gave us, but we don't believe it could be any better in the quality.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

It is charged by Democratic journalists and party leaders that the Republican platform adopted at the natoinal convention in Chicago is weak and equivocal. They claim that it cuts and covers; that it says what it doesn't mean—and means what it doesn't say. Is all this true? No! Is any of it true? No! It is a typical Republican platform; therefore it is a truly American platform. The candidate for President and Vice-President are tried-and-true Americans; and they stand with both feet firmly and sturdily planted upon the platform as framed, approved and adopted.

Let's examine a few declarations and provisions of the Republican platform—and see how "equivocal" they are.

"We recognize the justice of collective bargaining as a means of promoting good will, establishing closer and more harmonious relation between employer and employes, and realizing the true end of industrial justice."

Anything "equivocal" about that?

"The strike or the lock-out, as a means of settling industrial disputes, inflicts such loss and suffering on the community as to justify government initiative to reduce its frequency and limit it consequences."

Anything weak or tricky in that?

"We deny the right to strike against the government; but the rights and interests of all government employees must be safeguarded by impartial laws and tribunity."

Anything vacillating about that?

"We condemn the Democratic administration for failure impartially to enforce the anti-profiteering laws enacted by the Republican Congress."

Any dodging of the issue there? A Republican legislative body placed anti-profiteering laws upon our national statute books; but a Democratic executive adminitsration failed to enforce these laws.

"There is urgent need of improvement in our naturalization law. No alien should become a citizen until he has become genuinely American, and tests for determining the alien's fitness for American citizenship should be provided for by law."

Anything evasive about that?

"The equality of all citizens under the law has always been a policy of the Republican party. Without obedience to law and maintenance of order, our American institutions must perish. Our laws must be impartially enforced and speedy justice should be secured."

Anything uncertain in the sound of that?

I might go on—and on—indefinitely.

It is an American platform.

American candidates stand upon it.

Its speaks for equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

It is frank.

It is firm.

But it doesn't suit our friends, the Democrats.

Why?

Because it spells defeat for them.

—Marion (O.) Star.

PITY THE POOR DEMOCRATS

It appears to be the plan of the Democrats to attack the Republicans on what they term the destructive economies of the last Congress. Already seemingly inspired stories have been given out from various Democratic bureaus that their work has been curtailed as a result of the denial by Congress of funds alleged to be necessary for their continuance. It is understood that in the annual reports that will soon begin to appear, many Democratic officials will emphasize their inability to keep their work at the level of efficiency because of the lack of funds.

Republicans refuse to be alarmed at the prospect of attack on the financial record of Congress. They declare that every appropriation bill was framed and passed only after the closest attention to every item with a view to providing sufficient money to support the necessary activities of the Government. Of course Republican retrenchment has meant the discharge of many employees and the cessation of a lot of work that could easily be postponed or omitted altogether. But such curtailment is exactly what Congress aimed to secure, bringing with it a saving to the people of the country of almost a billion and a half dollars for the present fiscal year alone.

THE HAMMER-THROWER

Presented with a gavel made from the handrail of the President's yacht Mayflower, F. D. Roosevelt announces that he "will back the league (of nations) with a hammer." Gosh! What will Woodrow think of that? Senator Reed backed the League of Nations with a hammer and they would not let Saint Woodrow's catchism float in San Francisco.

JUDGE REYNOLDS NOMINATED FOR U. S. SENATE.

The Republican State Executive Committee, at its meeting in Birmingham on Tuesday, nominated Judge L. H. Reynolds as the Republican candidate for United States Senator from Alabama, in opposition to Oscar W. Underwood, the Democratic nominee.

The honor bestowed upon Judge Reynolds by this nomination is a fitting attest to the record he holds in the ranks of the Republican party leaders in Alabama. All over the state his ability as a leader is thoroughly recognized and appreciated, and his unselfish loyalty to the cause of the Republican party in the state entitles him to the highest honors of his party.

If the people of Alabama will send Judge Reynolds to the United States Senate, they will have a real representative in that body, and not a tool of the big interests to misrepresent them as the mighty Osker has been doing for lo these many years.

MRS. E. H. SMITH DEAD.

Mrs. E. H. Smith of Siluria died suddenly Monday at the home of her son, Albert Smith, in Autauga county. She had gone to the home of her son on a visit, and was apparently in good health up till the time of her death. She attended church on Sunday. The deceased lady was the wife of Mr. E. H. Smith, a Confederate veteran, and they lived at the home of their son in law, Wesley Billingsley, at Siluria.

Mr. Edmund Davis of Mississippi is spending a few days in our county.

You can make this surprising experiment in our store—

The Test of the Two Violins

Violins differ subtly in tone! Test the New Edison Realism by that fact.

We have an "Ave Maria" Re-Creation played by Albert Spalding with his Guarnerius. This famous violin has a brilliant, singing tone. We have a second "Ave Maria" Re-Creation played by Carl Flesch with his genuine Stradivarius. This violin has a rich, mellow tone.

Come in and compare these two Re-Creations—tone for tone. If the New Edison makes clear the distinction between the singing Guarnerius and the mellow Stradivarius, you know it has perfect realism for you.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Albert Spalding himself recently took part in a test of the New Edison's Realism, at New York City. He played in direct comparison with the Re-Creation of his performance by the New Edison. Mr. Henry Hadley, one of the jury of the three distinguished musicians who listened from behind a screen, said: "The Re-Creation matched Mr. Spalding's performance tone for tone."

The New Edison is the only phonograph which has given this conclusive proof of its perfect realism. It has triumphed in 4,000 such comparison-tests.

PRICES! HALT!

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title which an abstract would set out. Therefore when buying land or in lending money thereon, demand of the seller or borrower that he furnish an Abstract of Title. It is the safe way to transact business. The Clanton Abstract Co. prepares abstracts of land titles carefully, with-out delay, at reasonable prices.

Seed Selecting

Much Interest is Being Taken in this Important Matter, but there is Still Necessity for More.

Interest of surprising intensity has been shown in the past two years in the use of high grade planting seed for Alabama farms. Farmers are beginning to realize as never before the importance of seed selection and the value of high grade seed for planting. The Alabama Experiment Station and Extension Service have been for several years encouraging and demonstrating the practice of seed selection among farmers, and it has been largely due to this work that farmers have come to know the value of good seed.

A representative of the Alabama Experiment Station for six years has been breeding different varieties of cotton for wilt-resistance, working in co-operation with farmers in different sections of the wilt infected land of Alabama. In this work each breeder is assisted in making selections of individual plants having the desired qualities. Large yield, wilt-resistance earliness and good quality of lint are some of the important qualities in mind when selecting. Each plant is ginned separately and in the spring the seed are planted on rows side by side, one plant to the row on wilt infected land. In the fall individual selections are again made from the plant to row test. The best rows are then picked and ginned separately. The seed from the best rows are planted on increase plots. The seed from the increase plots are used to plant the entire farm. The seed from the entire farm are carefully ginned to prevent mixing and then sold as high grade seed at a reasonable price to farmers who do not care to go to the trouble of breeding cotton for themselves.

Many farmers buy a small quantity of high grade seed from local breeders and plant in a separate patch. They gather the seed from this patch separately and plant their entire crop the following season.

All popular varieties of wilt-resistant cotton are tested in the locality with the breeding plots. The best varieties from these tests are the ones bred and recommended to the farmers of the locality. In a few communities almost all of the farmers grow the same variety of cotton. This plan prevents mixing of the seed at the community gin and renders a uniform product for the market. We hope to induce all communities to grow one variety of cotton. The variety to grow can be determined from the local variety tests.

Work along the same line is being encouraged with corn and peanuts. In order that the market may be supplied with a uniform product, making possible and profitable, cooperative marketing, every community should grow the same variety of corn and peanuts. One or two farmers in each community should carry on the breeding work and sell planting seed to the rest of the farmers.

The Extension Service of the Alabama Experiment Station will assist any farmer who wishes to begin seed selection for himself or his community.

STEM END ROT OF WATER MELONS.

By A. F. Thiel, Associate Plant Pathologist.

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

Now is the time to attend to your watermelons. The stem-end rot is going to reduce the yield materially unless the necessary precautions are taken. Stem-end rot is a fungus disease, closely related to the fungi which cause a decay of sweet potatoes, a cotton boll-rot, and other plant diseases.

The fungus causing the stem-end rot will not attack a healthy vine It is advisable, therefore, to protect the vines and melons from other diseases of less importance which nevertheless weaken the plant and make it susceptible to the fungus causing the stem-end rot. By spraying the watermelon field with Bordeaux mixture, such diseases will be controlled.

Bordeaux mixture is made up in the following proportion:

Copper Sulphate	4 pounds
Quick Lime	4 pounds
Water	50 gallons

In making the spray for immediate use put 4 pounds of copper sulphate into a cloth sack and hang it in a barrel containing 25 gallons of water Being suspended, the copper sulphate will dissolve much more readily than if resting on the bottom of the barrel. Now slake carefully 4 pounds of quick lime, using just enough water to make 25 gallons. Stir it carefully, and then pour together the copper sulphate solution and the milk of lime, so that the streams mix in pouring. A slight excess of lime is desirable, as it prevents any injurious action of the copper salts. This excess will always be present if the lime is of good quality. If there is an excess of copper, foliage injury is likely to result. Therefore, simple tests may be made to determine whether or not the mixture is safe to use. Put a piece of newly filed iron or steel into the mixture for about a minute; if it has a copper coating when it is taken out, there is an excess of copper, and more lime should be added. To determine whether or not there is enough lime in the mixture, pour some of it into a flat dish and blow on it for a few moments. If a film forms on the surface, enough lime is present, if not, more should be added. Bordeaux mixture should be used the same day it is made.

VISITOR FROM KENTUCKY.

Rev. Mr. Duncan of Covington, Ky., an uncle of the late L. J. Duncan of this city, is here this week on a visit to Mrs. L. J. Duncan and family. Mr. Duncan speaks very highly in praise of what he has seen of Clanton and surrounding country. He voices a note of surprise to see corn growing in our fields that is on a fair average with that seen in Kentucky. Our town also comes in for its part of the praise from this visitor, as he is particularly pleased with our magnificent oaks and other shade trees so numerous along our residence streets. The many friends of the Duncans in Clanton are glad to meet their uncle.

Mrs. Nuna Kicker of Tuscaloosa and Mrs. Laura Peak of Montgomery, visited their brother, James Anderson, at the Soldiers Home Sunday.

MONEY TO LOAN

I have succeeded in arranging with one of the largest Fire Insurance Companies in America, with millions and millions of capital and surplus, for the above amount —and more if needed, to be loaned to farmers of this section, including Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton, Coopers, Verbena and surrounding territory.

The loans will be made in this way: We inspect and estimate your property, including dwelling and contents, barn and contents, smoke house, feed stuff, mules and cattle, and insure you for three fourths value against fire, lightning and wind storms, figuring you up for five years for only four and one-half years premiums, you paying one-fifth cash and the other four-fifths in four annual installments, without interest.

This strictly applies to farmers and good risk. If you will insure your home, we will also carry your tenant houses for you.

If interested, please write, phone or call on me, and I will be glad to consider your application. I also write old line Life Insurance and sell Singer Sewing Machines.

Now listen, people! You do not owe me one cent, neither do you owe my company anything, but you do owe yourself and your wife and children protection against Fires, Lightning, Wind Storms and Death.

The Aim and Value of Boys and Girls Clubs

Boys' and Girls' Club Work is one of the important features of the Agricultural Extension Work conducted by the State Relations Service, United States Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the State Agricultural Colleges and local agencies for the purpose of improving agricultural conditions and practices throughout the country. These clubs are organized to improve farm and home practices by instructing the boys in correct agricultural methods and the girls in home making; to assist them in demonstrating these methods for the improvement of the farm and home; to aid in the development of co-operation in the family and in the community; to create a more favorable attitude toward the business of farming and home making by encouraging property ownership and the feeling of partnership and to make rural life more attractive by providing organization which tends to diminish isolation and develop leadership.

These objects are in process of attainment. Wherever Club Work has been pushed by our agents, larger yields have been obtained, better pigs have been raised and finer cattle, both dairy and beef, have been grown. The motto of the clubs is "To Make the Best Better." Registered animals are now common where only a few years ago they were unknown, and there is a systematic effort to cull out scrub live stock and poultry. Large yields of crops have been made by club members on lands which were considered worthless, and little girls are vying with the best packers in canning and preserving fruits and vegetables, and are becoming a potent factor in helping to make the farm home more attractive and enjoyable.

The average yield per acre made by club members in the growing of field crops is two to three times as large as the average yields made in the States where the members are located. Many people, seeing a boy or girl here and there engaged in club work, do not realize the value of the products produced by these young folks in the aggregate. In 1918, while under the stress of war and responding to an appeal made to club members in the furrows "over here" to help feed the boys in the trenches "over there," the records in the office show that these young people produced food and feed to the value of more than $20,000,000.

The money value of the products of club members is only a small part of the value of club work. Many boys and girls have had their vision of life enlarged by club membership. Many have taken and are taking college training. The Agricultural Colleges of the country especially, have profited in enrollment from the clubs. Many boys and girls have made their own money to defray their college expenses in club activities. Many after graduation have returned to the farms or have engaged in Extension Work as county agents. Rural life has been greatly enriched in recent years by the trained leadership obtained from agricultural clubs. The results obtained in this work justify many times the expenditures made in securing them, and appeal strongly for a larger development of this very useful work.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING OF WOOL.

By M. H. Pearson, Marketing Specialist.

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

After successful experience in the Co-operative Marketing of various farm products, it was thought wise to undertake the marketing of wool.

The Extension Service began work along this line more than a year ago and held two co-operative wool sales in July and August of 1919. These two sales were considered successful by the wool growers and extension workers, since the growers received from five to eight cents per pound more through these sales than neighboring growers who had sold locally.

A meeting of county agents and specialists was recently held in Mobile for the purpose of making some definite plans for the selling of this year's clip. At this meeting three counties of Southeast Mississippi were represented by the county agent and four counties of Southwest Alabama.

Plans were worked out for pooling wool for sale in the counties represented at this meeting. There will be a circuit of co-operative sales held, the wool will be pooled and sold at auction. The sales will be so arranged that no two will occur on the same date. In planning the dates for sales railroad connections will be figured out so that buyers may make all the sales in the circuit without loss of time.

There will be approximately twenty cars of wool to be sold through this circuit of sales and since the wool market is very low this year

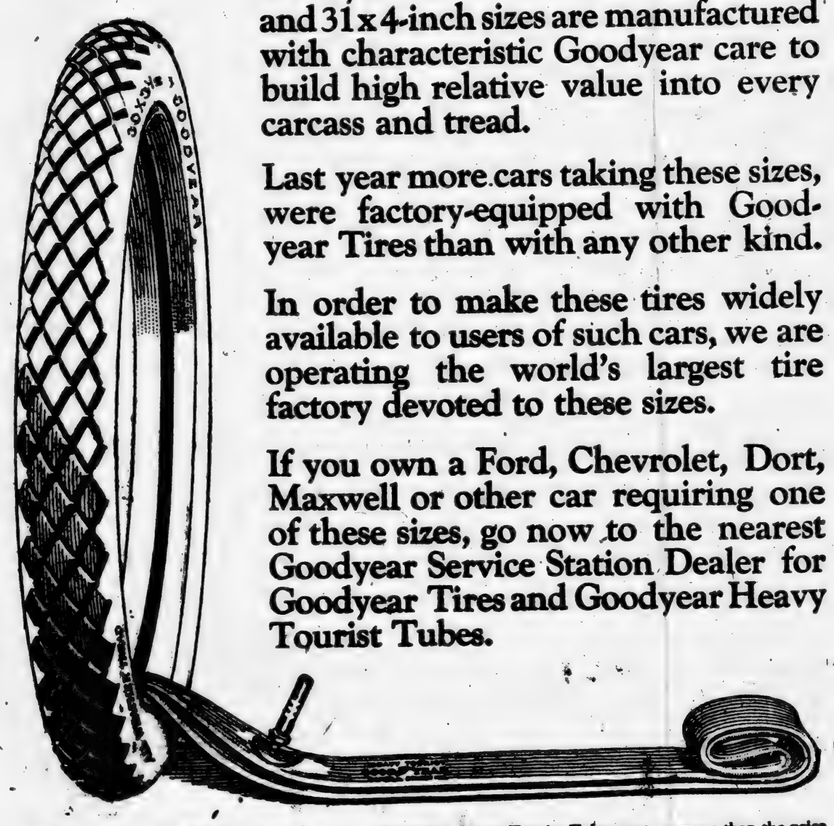
Equip Your Small Car With Goodyear Tires



Goodyear Tires in the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes are manufactured with characteristic Goodyear care to build high relative value into every carcass and tread.

Last year more cars taking these sizes, were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

In order to make these tires widely available to users of such cars, we are operating the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car requiring one of these sizes, go now to the nearest Goodyear Service Station Dealer for Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50

EMBROIDERY CLUB.

The Embroidery Club met on last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. D. Woods. After the business meeting the ladies enjoyed a pleasant afternoon sewing. Delicious ice and salad course was served to those present as follows: Mrs. A. Johnson, Mrs. E. Plier, Mrs. Elmore, Mrs. Martin Nix, Mrs. Wyatt, Mrs. Nabors, Mrs. G. Broadhead, Mrs. Roy from Montgomery, Mrs. E. Hart, Miss Mamie Woods, and Mrs. T. D. Woods. The Club will meet next Thursday with Mrs. Grady Broadhead.

Mrs. Carrie Mullins and Miss Maud Mullins are visiting Mrs. J. M. Shepard in Birmngham this week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Polk and children motored to Columbiana Saturday.

CHICKEN BARBECUE.

An excellent chicken barbecue was given by Mrs. Hugh Jones last Thursday evening complimentary to her sister, Mrs. Roy, of Montgomery. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Watts Moose, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Collier, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Macey Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Renfro Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. T.C. McSwain, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Broadhead, Mrs. Roberts of Mobile, and Mrs. Roy of Montgomery.

TACKY PARTY ENJOYED.

Invitations were received by about twenty of the younger set during the past week to a tacky party given by Miss Lola Sanford at her home on Wednesday night.

After several games were played the guests were judged to find that Miss Sally Parrish and Mr. Jack Hays were the winners of the prizes. Late in the afternoon a lovely ice course was served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Sophia Mullins. This merry party was composed of Misses Sophia Mullins, Gladys Kemp, Anice Kemp, Eudora White, Maud Wagner, Jewel Armstrong, Estelle Littlejohn, Elizabeth Duncan, and Sally Parrish. The gentlemen present were Jack Hays, Leonard Parrish, Arthur Littlejohn, Hoyt Reynolds, Norman Roberts, Ferman Gore, Howard Vinson, and L. C. Henley.

WEDNESDAY BRIDGE CLUB.

A bridge party given Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Luckie proved to be a most enjoyable occasion. The home was prettily decorated with cut flowers. Interesting games of bridge were played. The club prize a dainty handkerchief, was won by Mrs. T. C. McSwain, and the guest prize, a cut glass vase, was cut for and fell to Mrs. John Newell. Tempting refreshments were served after the game. Besides the club members present, the following were guests: Mrs. Clark Harper, Mrs. Bun Roberts, Mrs. John Newell, Mrs. Clyde Jones, Mrs. P. D. Wilson, and Mrs. John D. Armstrong.

E. C. MAYE CLASS MEETS.

Mrs. Herbert Nabors proved a most charming hostess on Friday evening when she entertained the E. C. Maye S. S. Class. Her home was made bright by attractive vases of spring flowers. An interesting program was enjoyed. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Roberts, President. A scripture reading by Miss Mabel Thomas. Prayer. Solo by Miss Willie B. Sartor. Reading, The Detached Life, by Mrs. Eric Hart. Reading, Does God Mean What He Says? by Mrs. Collier. Reading, The Power of Prayer by Mrs. Nix, Reading Pray All Ye One for Another, Mrs. Maye. Solo, Sweet Hour of Prayer, by Mrs. Armstrong. At the conclusion of the program a lovely salad course was served those in attendance.

MRS. HUGH JONES HOSTESS

Mrs. Hugh Jones entertained Tuesday evening at one of the loveliest of the week's social functions, at a swimming party, as a special courtesy to her sister, Mrs. Victor Roy, who is her house guest. The party motored to Mims' pond, and after a refreshing plunge a picnic luncheon was served, followed by the cutting of ice cold watermelons. Those enjoying this unusual affair were Mr. and Mrs. Macy Jones, Mrs. Watts Moore, Mrs. V. L. Roy, Mrs. Grady Broadhead, Mrs. T. C. McSwain, Mrs. Ervin Luckie, Mrs. W. M. Wyatt, Mrs. F. B. Collier, Mrs. Hugh Simpson, and Misses Kathleen Mullins and Roberta Curry.

Mrs. Hugh Jones delightfully entertained for Mrs. Victor Roy Monday morning at a bridge party. The tables were placed on the veranda, and roses and cornicopias filled with bright flowers made effective decorations. The score prize, a pair of silk hose, was won by Mrs. Eric Hart, and a similar gift was presented to the guest of honor. At the conclusion of the game a salad course was served. Those present were Mesdames Victor Roy, Watts Moore, Hugh Simpson, Harvey Chandler, R. E. Luckie, Macy Jones, Thad McSwain, Eric Hart, and Grady Broadhead.

Miss Leona Pipes has returned to her home after a pleasant visit of two weeks in Montevallo.

FOR TWENTY YEARS HE SUFFERED RHEUMATISM

HAS SPENT $500 SEEKING FOR A RELIEF AND NOW DECLARES DRECO HAS DONE MORE GOOD THAN ANYTHING.

"I have suffered for twenty years from rheumatism of the joints, and no one who has not had this dreaded disease can realize the tortures I've gone through. I have spent five hundred dollars on medicines seeking for relief. I have taken everything recommended to me as being good for my trouble, but all have failed.

"I saw the new medicine—Dreco—advertised, so I gave it a trial, and it has done me more good than all of the other medicines I have taken put together.

"I most earnestly recommend Dreco to those who have rheumatism, and urge them to get at once and get a bottle and begin the treatment. Don't hesitate but take my word for it. Dreco certainly has proved its merit in my case."

These are the words of the Rev. J. J. Snow, a well respected colored minister, who resides on his farm just outside of Montgomery, Ala.

All druggists now sell Dreco, and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by the Upchurch Drug Co.

The House of Whispers

By WILLIAM JOHNSTON

Copyright by Little, Brown & Co.

"YOU HEARD WHISPERS?"

Synopsis.—Circumstances having prevented Spalding Nelson, clerk, from joining the American forces going to France, he is in a despondent mood when he receives an invitation to dinner from his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. On the way to the house he meets, under peculiar circumstances, a young girl, apparently in trouble, to whom he has an opportunity to be of slight service. She lives in the same apartment building as Rufus Gaston, and he accompanies her to the house. Gaston and his wife are going to Maine for a trip and want to leave Nelson in charge of the apartment. He accepts. Gaston and his wife tell their great-nephew of mysterious noises—"whispers"—which they have heard in the house. On his way to the Gaston apartment the next Sunday Nelson again meets his accidental acquaintance of a few days before, Barbara Bradford. She urges him not to allow the fact of their being acquainted to be known. At the apartment Nelson meets the superintendent, Wick, and instinctively dislikes him. In a wall safe he finds a necklace of magnificent pearls, worth a small fortune. Next day Nelson finds the pearls have disappeared from the wall safe. His first idea of informing the police is not acted upon because of peculiar circumstances. He has been discharged from his position without adequate explanation or reason, and feels himself involved in something of a mystery. He decides to conduct an investigation himself. That night Barbara signals from the window of her apartment, which is opposite his, and they arrange a meeting for next day. In the morning he finds a note in his room, asking him why he had not informed the police of the loss of the jewels. Barbara tells Nelson her sister Claire had some years before made a runaway marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone knowing of her escapade has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment.

"Oh, no, she must never know. Dad did not want her ever told anything about it. We talked it over, Claire and I, and decided to put a personal advertisement in the papers. It simply said, 'Liberal reward and no questions asked for return of important papers.'"

"Were there any answers?"

"Yes and no. One morning there was a second note."

"Delivered like the first?"

"Yes, I found it, too, on the floor of my bedroom. Here it is."

More amazed and perplexed than ever by the growing ramification of the plots of the thieves that seemed to involve us both, I took the paper and read:

"Ten thousand is our price for the papers. Pay it or you'll never marry Thayer."

"Did you go then to meet the man in the park?"

"Not until after I got a third note, more threatening than the first and second. Claire and I talked it over and over, trying to think who could have taken the papers. We only keep two servants now, Sarah and Mary, and they both have been with us since we were children. It could not have been either of them. They think as much of us as our own mother does."

"Do you suppose the man that she married may have learned of your father's death and have returned from France to try to blackmail her?"

"We thought of that. The notes did not come from him. They do not read as if a Frenchman wrote them."

"Who could it be?" I said more to myself than to her.

"Then there was another note," she went on. "It demanded that Claire wear a red carnation and meet the writer in the park and bring ten thousand dollars. That was the time I first met you. Your presence must have frightened them off, for we had no more demands until night before last."

"Did you have ten thousand with you that night I first met you?"

She shook her head.

"We haven't ten thousand dollars in the world. Outside of our furniture and our jewels and our motor, we have very little. If all the bills we owe were paid, we'd have almost nothing at all."

"What did you propose doing when you met the man—or men?"

"I didn't know. I was going to try to plead with them to give me the papers. I would have promised anything to have gotten them back."

"But the man—the men—might have harmed you."

She smiled incredulously.

"Hardly. There was little danger of their attacking me there in the park so near the avenue, with people constantly passing, and besides, I carried this."

She reached again into the pocket of her habit and brought forth a vicious-looking automatic.

"It was Dad's," she said. "He taught me to shoot with it, though I don't think either of us thought then there would come a time when I might need it."

"What did the last note say?"

"Here it is."

This was written and folded as the others had been, on the most ordinary kind of writing paper. It read:

"Unless we get the money Wednesday, Thayer gets the papers Thursday. No wedding then for yours. Same bench at six-thirty."

"What can I do about it?"

"I'll go in your place," I suggested.

"Oh, no, I couldn't permit that."

"Let me explain," I hastened to say. "I'm in this mystery as deep as you are. Only last night I discovered that all the Gaston jewels which had been left in my custody are gone."

"Not stolen!" she cried. "The Gaston pearls!"

"Yes," I replied, "the pearls, too."

"Why, they are worth two hundred thousand dollars, at least. What have you done about it? Have you notified the police?"

"No, as yet I have told no one of the robbery but yourself."

"Why not? You must notify the police at once."

I hesitated. It was hard to explain my actions without telling her the whole miserable story, without admitting to this girl on whom I was most eager to make the best of impressions that I was a young man out of a position, discharged in disgrace. Yet she had given me her confidence. It was only fair to her and to myself that there should be no secrets between us. I began at the beginning. I told her of my coming to New York and how I had seen my great-uncle Rufus only once or twice. I related the departure of Roller and Birge for the war front and told her how eager I had been to go with them. I even went into detail as to the reason I had not gone with them, my debt to the mother.

She did not seem greatly interested in the first part of my narrative but when I began telling of the proposition the Gastons had made to me and of the mysterious warnings each of them had separately given me, I could see her interest kindling.

"There is something wrong in that apartment house," she explained. "We have had nothing but trouble ever since we lived there. I wonder if there is anything in the theory that evil deeds make bad karma, which spreads its effects all about. I know I feel there is a sinister atmosphere about the whole place."

"I'm beginning to feel it, too," I said bitterly.

I told her then of my unexpected and unwarranted discharge without explanation the day before.

"How do you account for it?" she asked perplexedly.

"You must have some enemy, some malicious person, who has spread some terrible tale about you."

"I haven't any enemy in the world," I replied, yet even as I spoke there flashed across my mind the malevolent glance the scar-faced man had given me in the restaurant a few evenings before.

"I wonder," said Miss Bradford thoughtfully, "if the same people who are trying to blackmail us are not trying to involve you with us in some way?"

"Why should they?"

"They may have been watching and have seen you enter the house with me twice. They may think that you and I are friends and that you were there in the park purposely that first time."

"But the Man—the Men—Might Have Harmed You."

"Even so," I replied, "that doesn't explain this."

I pulled from my pocket the note I had found on the floor of my bedroom and showed it to her.

"Where did you get that?" she gasped in astonishment.

"Last night I heard footsteps and whispers. I thought at the time I was dreaming. This morning I found this note on the floor."

"You heard whispers," she cried excitedly, "whispers that seemed to come from up near the ceiling?"

"I thought I heard them. I wasn't sure."

"I know," she said, shudderingly. "I've heard them—twice."

We looked at each other despairingly. We both of us realized that we must be surrounded with some potent evil forces working to accomplish our ruin. The motive in the anonymous letters that Miss Bradford had been receiving had plainly been blackmail. But what was the motive in my own case? Why had someone stolen the Gaston pearls and then in an anonymous letter to me spoken of the theft? I wondered, too, if the successful attempt to discredit me at my place of business had not originated from the same mysterious source.

Was my great-uncle Rufus to blame? The suspicion of him rose in my mind and would not be downed. I recalled the unusual pretext on which he had sent for me after having paid no attention to my existence for nearly a year. I recalled his curious warning and that of his aged wife. I remembered that they had insisted on leaving the jewels behind against my urgings, and that they had been insistent on my having the combination of the safe. Could it be possible that they also had some grudge against the Bradfords, their neighbors, and in some way had got hold of Claire Bradford's secret?

"I think you said," I asked Miss Bradford, "that your family and the Gastons were not acquainted in any way."

"No," she replied, "we don't know them at all. Why do you ask that?"

"I was wondering if it could be possible that my great-uncle Rufus could have had any hand in all this. He's a queer, secretive old chap."

"It's probable that he and my father might have known each other. Both were in business here in the city for many years. I never remember, though, of hearing Dad speak of him—wait, yes, I did once."

"When was that?"

"It must have been six or eight years ago. There was something in the papers about Mr. Gaston retiring from business."

"What was it he said?" I asked eagerly, wondering if some old feud between the two men might not give us a clue to unravel the web of mystery.

"As nearly as I can recall his words were, 'I see that old pirate Gaston has retired with his ill-gotten gains.'"

"To whom was he talking?"

"I don't remember that, probably some man who was visiting at the house. Dad always used to have a lot of men about."

"Did he say anything else?"

"That's all I remember, but I don't think the Gastons could have anything to do with it. This threatening my sister is more the sort of thing a discharged servant would do."

"Yes," I admitted, "but find the discharged servant. Yours have been with you for years."

"Oh, what are we going to do?" she cried in desperation. "If I don't get those papers back, we'll all be ruined. They'll give them to my sister's fiance. Her engagement will be broken. My mother will die of disgrace and shame."

"Don't be discouraged," I cried, trying to inspire in her a confidence I was far from feeling myself. "This is only Sunday. We have until Wednesday evening. I'll find some way of trapping those rascals and making them surrender those papers. Leave it to me."

In spite of my reassuring words, distress was still written on her countenance. As I debated how best to comfort her, she glanced at her wrist watch and exclaimed:

"I must be going. They'll be alarmed about me if I stay longer."

"When am I to see you again?"

"I don't know. That's hard to arrange. My sister and I are so much together."

"Can't I telephone you?"

"No, that wouldn't do at all. Mother and Claire would both want to know all about it and besides—".

"Besides what?"

"I don't trust that girl at the switchboard. I think she listens to everything that is said."

"They are a prying lot," I admitted, "including Mr. Wick, the superintendent."

"I don't like him a bit."

"Nor I, but we must communicate with each other somehow. If you find out anything more you must let me know at once. If I learn anything, I'll let you know, and I'm going to discover a lot."

"There's always our windows," she suggested, "they are close together. I can signal you when I'm alone, and we can talk."

"I'll be there in my room every evening from ten o'clock on," I said, "waiting to hear from you. I'll put a handkerchief on the sill when I'm there."

"And I'll do the same."

Having reached this understanding, I walked with her to the park entrance within sight of the house. All the way we had been talking over the puzzling circumstances of the anonymous notes and of the strange way in which they had been found on the floor. Miss Bradford had spoken again of the

"The voices were vague—just like a ghost's might be," she said.

"Yes," I admitted, "that's what they sounded like. But there aren't any ghosts. If those whispers were real, some human being was making them. I'm going to find out who it was, and when we've learned that, we'll have learned a lot about—"

I hesitated.

"About whom?" she questioned.

"I don't know yet," I answered.

I was wondering about my great-uncle Rufus.

CHAPTER V.

I was determined to let the disappearance of the jewels alone until I had found some way of getting the Bradfords out of their troubles. The key to the mystery surely lay in the notes that had been found on the floor in both apartments. If I could discover how the notes had been put there and who put them there, I would be on the trail of the miscreants.

The placing of the notes indicated the necessity of a confederate in the apartment house. Could it be that one of the employees was in league with the plotters? Was one of the Bradford servants betraying them?

Under Ordinary Circumstances I Would Have Hesitated to Examine Them, but Now I Felt No Scruples.

Was my aged great-uncle in hiding somewhere, playing malevolent pranks on us? How had that note gotten into my own apartment? Nobody had access to the place but myself—yes, and Mrs. Burke, my great-aunt's trusted old laundress. I determined to return to the apartment and lie in wait for her until she came in to do up my room. In the week that I had lived there I had not even laid eyes on her, although each evening when I came in I found my bed neatly made.

While I awaited her arrival I busied myself with studying anew the different rooms in the apartment, hoping ever to find some new clue to the methods by which the anonymous notes had been delivered. I went to the back of the house and looked out of the rear windows. An ornamental ledge of stone, perhaps eighteen inches wide ran along apparently on the level of the flooring. Any agile person might easily have crept along it if they dared risk falling six stories to the ground, but there was no means of access to it save from either my bedroom or the sitting room or from the corresponding rooms in the Bradford apartment. Certainly no one from my apartment had been flipping mysterious notes into the other apartment. Could the converse be true? Was there some unbalanced person in the Bradford family who was doing it? Could it be one of the servants, or possibly Claire Bradford? She always had been flighty, according to her sister's description. Had her troubles unbalanced her to such an extent that she was playing mysterious hysterical pranks on all of us?

I sat down at my uncle's desk. The pigeonholes crammed full of papers caught my eye. Under ordinary circumstances I would have hesitated to examine them, but now I felt no scruples. Old Rufus had warned me that there was some mystery about the place. The pearls had strangely disappeared. I faced the accusation of having stolen them. Surely I was entitled to examine anything and everything in my efforts at solving the mystery.

Pigeonhole after pigeonhole I examined without result until at last I came to a little leather-covered diary. I read it with interest, noting that it was for the present year and that the last entry had been made only the day before he had departed for Maine. About six weeks previous to the present date I found this amazing entry:

"Heard whispers last night."

A week later there was another entry, "Whispers again." There could be no question as to what he meant. The ghostly noises that had been heard by both Miss Bradford and myself had been heard by him, too. No wonder the old man had been so terrified. Other entries in the book recorded hearing the whispers at intervals of about one week.

Nelson and Barbara agree to meet frequently.

CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENT PLAN TO CONDUCT UNLIKE CAMPAIGNS.

LACK OF COAL CARS LOOMS

Transportation Shows Slight Improvement, But Conditions Are Far From Normal—How to Keep Women on Farm Subject of Federal Inquiry.

By JAMES HORNADAY.

Washington.—Unlike campaigns will be conducted this year by the rival candidates for president of the two big political parties. Senator Harding, the Republican nominee, will stay at home in Marion, Ohio, while Governor Cox, the Democratic candidate, will take to the stump.

These announced programs make of interest the experiences of the rivals in the past, and yet a comparison does not prove the efficacy of either. What has been victorious for one, may have meant defeat for the other.

When Washington was first elected president in 1788, the campaign, such as it was, was confined to a strip of country 200 miles wide, from Massachusetts to Georgia. Then, the population was four million, and now the country, ten times as great in area, is more than twenty-five times as large in population. But this difference in territory and population is more than offset by improved transportation, and the accessibility of the people through the daily press.

Twice Washington was elected unanimously. When he left office, the political parties had lined up, but it was for Andrew Jackson, the fighting Democrat, to be the first candidate for president to change the method of campaigning, which before his time was conducted with considerable decorum.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson did not try the stump, because, we are told, neither was an orator. Henry Clay, however, was a great speaker, but was silent while a candidate. Jackson and Harrison toured their own states, but did not attempt long tours. Cass, Scott, Fillmore and Buchanan made a number of speeches, but in 1856 Fremont kept still and let his friends do the campaigning.

Too Much Speaking.

On a number of occasions too much speaking has embarrassed candidates—sometimes the candidates did the talking themselves and sometimes their friends, the most conspicuous case probably being in the Blaine campaign of 1884. Then, it was the remark of a friend that proved unfortunate for Mr. Blaine.

In 1880, Stephen A. Douglas, candidate of the more conservative Democrats in the northwest against Breckinridge, the choice of the slave states, undertook a whirlwind campaign throughout the country against Lincoln, the Republican nominee. Douglas toured every state, except a few in the South, his trip being the most sensational stumping tour ever staged up to that time. He was on the road for two months, sometimes speaking as often as twenty times a day.

Lincoln remained at home in Illinois, made no important speeches and wrote no letters on political topics that found their way into the public prints. Senator Seward of New York, however, took the stump for the Republicans and toured most of the country. For Breckinridge, a tour was made of the country by William Yancey. President Buchanan, Democratic incumbent, made one speech from the White House, and it was widely published.

With the passing of time, the candidates have more and more come to take charge of the campaigns themselves. The personal element has entered into the campaign more and more, and the parties in a measure have been shoved into the background. Bryan, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson, have been great travelers. In 1896, Bryan stumped the country, but McKinley, his opponent, remained at home.

Steps for Coal Supply.

Although the temperature is sufficiently high in the national capital during the summer months to put out of mind the wintry blasts of January, government officials are having it impressed upon them daily that great suffering will ensue this winter unless steps are taken which will assure the northeast, the middlewest and the northwest an adequate coal supply. Not a day has passed in recent weeks but that representatives of the various sections of the country have not pressed their case before the bar of the Interstate Commerce commission and other governmental agencies.

The car shortage looms large in the coal situation. It may be said that as the result of action taken by the Interstate Commerce commission some improvement has been observed in the movement of cars used for the transportation of coal, but conditions are far from normal. Without a supply of cars the coal mine is helpless; coal being transferred directly from the mine to the waiting car. When there is no supply of cars, the mine shuts down.

Members of the Interstate Commerce commission believe that one solution of the coal supply problem which confronts the country arguably to a more or less serious degree lies in the establishment of seasonal freight rates on coal—a lower rate in the summer months to induce movement of that commodity and a higher rate in the winter months.

Seasonal Coal Rates.

On the recommendation of Chairman Edgar E. Clark of the commission and the other members also a subcommittee of the senate committee on interstate and foreign commerce, the chairman of which is Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, reported favorably a bill establishing seasonal coal rates. This bill and the report of the committee are now before the whole committee and will be brought up for consideration when congress reconvenes.

Widespread opposition developed to the proposed legislation among coal operators, coal dealers and consumers' organizations. The opposing interests cannot see that the proposed legislation would accomplish the desired result—that of inducing the movement and storage of coal in the summer months so that a minimum of coal would have to be transported in the winter months.

In the opinion of George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, to allow present conditions in the coal industry to continue will be to invite industrial [illegible]. "The seasonal fluctuation [illegible] coal] put comes from a seasonal [illegible] in demand," he says. "The remedy must be hitched on to the [illegible] giving the mines more orders for the spring and early months and [illegible] ing both mines and railroads of the extra heavy burden in the fall and winter months. In a normal year the country over this seasonal [illegible] of demand calls for 35 per cent to 40 per cent more coal being mined in November, the peak load month, than in April, the usual month of greatest slump in mine operation. Uneven demand thus requires more mines and more miners, both working a 75 per cent year, and conditions of unequal seasonal demand are also [illegible] for the railroad, especially when combined with crop movements and winter interference with traffic."

Figures compiled by the Geological Survey disclose that the entire world is suffering from reduced production of coal and that the production of 1919 dropped back to the level of 1910. The total output of coal of all kinds in 1919, preliminary estimates show, was 1,290,000,000 net tons.

Menace to Rural Life.

How to keep the women down on the farm is the subject of special inquiry that is being made by the department of agriculture.

Already the survey of the farm home has been made in 33 states in the North and West, and the deduction made from it by department specialists is that waste of woman power is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation.

Records covering more than 10,000 farm homes, averaged by taking typical communities of the county in which the survey was made, have already been tabulated by the department. Much of the information was gathered personally by home demonstration agents.

Admittedly, the survey thus far shows only the dark side of the farm life of a woman. It does not consider the many compensations that come with the woman's daily round of work for the comfort of the family, and anyone who has experienced the satisfaction of living in the open country knows that the average farm woman is more fortunately placed than her average city sister, the department says.

But what is to be done?

Miss Florence E. Ward, in charge of the extension work of the department of agriculture under whose direction the survey was made, answers the question.

Benefits From Conveniences.

"The interest of the department of agriculture in the returns from these studies as to labor, working equipment and compensation of the farm woman," says Miss Ward, "are as practical as its interest in farm studies regarding labor, machinery and crop returns for the same general reasons.

"The farm woman's working hours might be shortened, if the principles of modern business were applied to the farm home. Running water in the home for the 52 out of every 100 that must carry it into the house would lighten the woman's labor and add to her comfort. Labor could be lessened if the farm homes were as well equipped as the up-to-date barn, which the farmer looks upon as so much currency with which to buy efficiency.

"The installation of modern lighting systems would release some of the women in 79 per cent of the homes where kerosene lamps are still used, and the installation of heating systems would release some of the time of the 54 per cent who care for coal or wood stoves.

"Forty-eight per cent of the farms are showed by the survey to have power for operating farm machinery, but only 22 per cent have this advantage for the home. That is a singular fact when we consider how frequently it is a simple matter to connect the engine used in the barn with household equipment.

"The washing machine is another labor saver, and selling cream, instead of churning it at home is another. In short, the same sort of intelligence and a fraction of the money applied to making field and barn work convenient would, if applied to the home, save untold drudgery to the women of the farms and would add both to the profit and comfort of the home."

HOW TO PREVENT BEES SWARMING

Advice and Suggestions on Subject Given by Professor Conradi of Clemson.

BROOD CHAMBER TOO SMALL

Operation of Honey Gatherers Can Be Greatly Reduced by Proper Management—How Swarm May Be Hived to Best Advantage.

One of the problems of the beekeepers Prof. A. F. Conradi, entomologist is how to prevent bees from swarming. The following questions and answers taken from information sheet No. 9, published recently by the extension service of Clemson college, are in brief form expert advice and suggestions on this subject:

Why do bees swarm?

The bee colony is divided into workers, drones (or male bees), and queen. Normally the queen alone lays eggs, and to perpetuate their race new colonies are necessary. This is the natural way of increase.

What are conditions that induce swarming?

(a) The brood chamber may be too small, allowing too little egg-laying space. (b) There may be too little storage space. (c) There may be lack of ventilation. (d) There may be too many drones.

At what season is swarming most frequent?

Mostly in early spring, but it may occur at any time during honey flow when conditions named in No. 2 are not corrected.

Can swarming be entirely prevented?

No, but it can be greatly reduced by proper management.

Why should swarming be prevented as far as possible?

It keep the working force together. A hive full of bees is worth more than any number of weak colonies.

Are there two queens in the hive during swarming time?

Generally not. The young queen does not yet come out of the queen cell. The old queen leaves with the swarm.

How may swarming be reduced or possibly prevented?

(a) If the brood chamber becomes crowded, add another brood chamber. If bees cluster out, it may be due to overcrowded condition, or lack of ventilation. Ventilate the hive and add room when necessary. If possible remove drone comb and also queen cells.

How may a swarm be hived to best advantage?

When the swarm has settled, brush or shake it into the new hive.

Swarming Bees.

Remove the old hive from which the swarm came and place it where you want it to remain in the future. Place the hive containing the new queen on the old stand. The first bees returning home will enter the new hive on the old stand; by night the majority of bees are again in the new hive on the old stand, making a strong colony.

POISONING GOPHERS IS EASY

Strychnine Sulphate on Pieces of Vegetable of Some Kind and Shove in Hole.

The easiest way to poison gophers is put pieces of strychnine sulphate, about the size of half a wheat grain, in pieces of potato, carrots or turnips. Then take a sharp stick and push it down into the soft earth around the mounds. Put the pieces of poisoned food down into these places and the gophers will get it. This way keeps stock and children from getting it up. It has been proven to be efficient in ridding the field.

SOIL FOR LATE GARDEN

To Withstand Summer Heat and Drought Plants Must Have Well-Prepared Seed Bed.

Late garden seeds should be planted in very rich and well-prepared soil. To withstand summer heat and endure severe drought the plants must have a deep, rich soil, and it must be kept in good condition, if possible.

USE AX IF DISEASE DEVELOPS IN FLOCK

Chicks Will Not Grow Properly if Not Healthy.

Far Better Plan to Prevent Ailments Than to Attempt to Cure an Ailing Fowl—Give Good Attention to Their Houses.

Disease is one of the handicaps to successful poultry keeping and should be guarded against at all times. Unless kept in a healthy condition, chicks will not grow properly and mature fowls will lose their vigor and vitality and become unproductive and unprofitable.

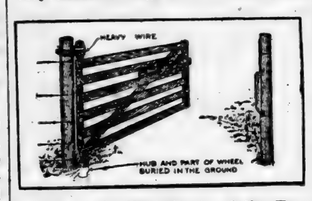
It is far better to prevent disease by proper care and attention than to attempt to cure a bird after it is sick. Therefore it is important to watch the flock closely at all times for any signs of disease, so in case an outbreak occurs it may be checked at once. Prevention is always better than cure, and all those who wish to succeed with poultry should give their birds such good care and keep their houses so well cleaned and disinfected that both fowls and chicks will keep hardy and vigorous.

Some diseases may be treated successfully, while others of a more serious nature usually prove fatal. If only one or two birds of a flock become sick it is usually advisable to kill them immediately (unless they are choice specimens) and burn or bury the carcasses, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture. If the birds are kept and an attempt is made to doctor or cure them the disease may prove contagious and spread throughout the entire flock.

AXLE USEFUL AS GATE HINGE

Illustration Shows How Discarded Part of Wagon or Other Implement May Be Utilized.

On almost every farm can be found an old wagon or implement wheel with its axle. The illustration shows how it can be made to form one side and a very effective hinge for the farm gate.



An Old Axle, With Parts of the Two Wheels Remaining Upon It Forms an Essential Part of This Easy-Working Farm Gate.

The axle is set upright with the slats of the gate bolted to it. The lower end of the axle should be fitted with an old hub to serve as a bearing. The hub on the upper end should have at least one spoke remaining in it, so that the latter can be thrust through a hole bored in the gate post. Some stout wire, or iron strips, will be necessary to hold the hub up against the post.

PRODUCE BEST CAULIFLOWER

Tie Leaves Over Head to Protect It From Sun or Weather—Three Cuttings of Crop.

When the cauliflower head is about the size of a dollar, the leaves should be tied or twisted over the head to protect it from sun and weather. This method should produce a perfectly white product. The leaves should be so tied that snow or rain that enters may find a ready exit at the bottom, as an accumulation of moisture on the head or curd will cause dark spots and eventually ruin the product. There are usually three cuttings of the crop. If the earliest heads are tied with string, the second with raffia and the last have the leaves broken over, the grower will be aided at cutting time and will not have to examine all the plants.

HIRE LABOR ON HOUR BASIS

Specialist Says Farmers Will Find Employing Hands on That Plan Advantageous.

Experience the last several seasons, says W. L. Cavert, farm management specialist of the Minnesota College of Agriculture, indicates that farmers will find it advantageous to employ harvest and threshing labor on the hour basis instead of the day basis. "The hour plan," says Mr. Cavert, "is absolutely fair to both farmer and laborer and has the advantage that the help is not likely to object when it seems necessary to put in long hours."

FEW WEEDS ARE DESIRABLE

Detailed Purity Test Will Enable Farmer to Decide Whether He Wants Weeds or Not.

Not all weeds are equally undesirable in fields, hence a detailed purity test showing the various weeds in a sample will enable the farmer to decide whether he is willing to plant the weed seeds his sample contains or whether he will look farther for pure seed. Clean seed is always obtainable, usually at a somewhat higher price. The decision must be made on an accurate and detailed test of the seed under consideration.

Speedy Relief From Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

ROAD BUILDING

PACIFIC COAST GOOD ROADS

Interest Centers Particularly in Highway Extending From California to Washington.

(By HERBERT NUNN, State Highway Engineer of Oregon.)

The Pacific coast is particularly interested in our national highway; that is the Pacific coast highway extending from California to Oregon and Washington. This when completed will have approximate length of some 1,400 miles, and the large part of it is now completed or nearing completion.

Mr. Fletcher of California stated to me that his state had completed 525 miles, extending from Los Angeles north to Sacramento, and we are now under contract to complete the road. Oregon now has under contract on this road some 400 miles of construction, all of which will be completed by the middle of next year, 200 miles of which will be paved and the rest macadam or gravel. Washington has completed this road to Seattle, and next year its entire length will be complete.

I am unable to say at this time just how much money was expended during the year 1919 in the three states, but in Oregon approximately $7,000,000 was expended. The three states, however, are pretty well fixed financially.

California has a new bond issue for $40,000,000 and previously has expended some $33,000,000. Oregon has some $32,000,000 available and roads to cost $19,000,000 to $20,000,000 under construction. Washington has less money. They failed to carry the bond issue there this year, but have between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 available for next year.

The eastern connections with the Pacific highway are the Santa Fe trail, the Lincoln highway, and the Midland road. I think the Santa Fe is pretty well cared for. It connects with southern California. In Oregon we are connecting with the southern highway and with the Columbia river highway.

Labor conditions on the Pacific coast are about the same as in the East.

Improved Road in Oregon.

The pay is about $4.50 with $7.50 for teams. We don't expect better labor conditions next year. Material conditions are better. In Oregon we have sufficient local material and don't require much rail transportation. Washington is fixed similarly. So is northern California. Southern California is in worse condition as to transportation.

MOTORTRUCK IS INSISTENT

War Brought It Into Prominence as Commercially Practical Form of Transportation.

The value of the motortruck as an the war, sprang into prominence as a commercially practical form of transportation and while the fighting has ceased, the need for the motortruck remains with us, more insistent than ever before. Within certain limitations the freight car of the highway is more efficient than the rail carrier, and, because it is, it may be taken as a permanent form of transportation and one destined to have a large influence on the movements of trade in the future.

PUSH GOOD ROADS BUILDING

Construction Work Retarded by War Should Now Be Resumed to Facilitate Transportation.

Good roads construction retarded by the war should now be pushed vigorously and nothing should be permitted to interfere with the expansion and development of these important arteries of transportation and trade which can serve to materially reduce high living costs by facilitating the movement of foodstuffs from the farm to the table.

Significant Auto Fact.

Observers are said to regard it as significant that the states which will spend most freely for better highways and which manufacturers depend upon to buy the most motortrucks in 1920 are states in which farming is the predominant occupation.

Value of Motortruck.

The value of the motortruck as an aid in marketing farm products is now well established. In bringing this about improved roads have been an essential factor.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Cold Water Has Odd Use.

For years steam has been used for thawing the frozen soil of mining claims in Alaska, in spite of difficulties. Now it has been discovered that cold surface water, which of course is warmer than the ground, is a much better thawing medium than either steam or hot water, states Popular Mechanics Magazine. This seeming paradox is explained by the fact that the superabundant heat units of steam rise rapidly around the pipe, and are wasted, while the few heat units carried by the cold water remain in the ground and do their work slowly but thoroughly. In one test in the Nome district, a 2-inch pipe was inserted in a 6-inch drilled hole, and fed with 20 gallons of water a minute at a temperature of 52 degrees F., the ground being at 28 degrees. In 36 hours an 8-foot cylindrical thaw had been made.

o a more or less serious degree than in the establishment of seasonal freight rates on coal—a lower rate in the summer months to induce movement of that commodity and a higher rate in the winter months.

Seasonal Coal Rates.

On the recommendation of Chairman Edgar E. Clark of the commission and the other members also, a subcommittee of the senate committee on interstate and foreign commerce, the chairman of which is Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, reported favorably a bill establishing seasonal coal rates. This bill and the report of the committee are now before the whole committee and will be brought up for consideration when congress reconvenes.

Widespread opposition developed to the proposed legislation among coal operators, coal dealers and commercial organizations. The opposing interests cannot see that the proposed legislation would accomplish the desired result—that of inducing the movement and storage of coal in the summer months so that a minimum of coal would have to be transported in the winter months.

In the opinion of George Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, to allow present conditions in the coal industry to continue will be to invite industrial paralysis.

"The seasonal fluctuation in coal output comes from a seasonal fluctuation in demand," he says. "The consumer must be hitched on to the problem of giving the mines more orders for the spring and early months and of relieving both mines and railroads of their extra heavy burden in the fall and winter months. In a normal year the country over this seasonal inequality of demand calls for 35 per cent to 60 per cent more coal being mined in November, the peak load month, than in April, the usual month of greatest slump in mine operation. Uneven demand thus requires more mines and more miners, both working a 75 per cent year, and conditions of unequal seasonal demand are also bad for the railroad, especially when combined with crop movements and winter interference with traffic."

Figures compiled by the Geological Survey disclose that the entire world is suffering from reduced production of coal and that the production of 1919 dropped back to the level of 1910. The total output of coal of all kinds in 1919, preliminary estimates show, was 1,290,000,000 net tons.

Menace to Rural Life.

How to keep the women down on the farm is the subject of special inquiry that is being made by the department of agriculture.

Already the survey of the farm home has been made in 33 states in the North and West, and the deduction made from it by department specialists is that waste of woman power is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation.

Records covering more than 10,000 farm homes, averaged by taking typical communities of the county in which the survey was made, have already been tabulated by the department. Much of the information was gathered, personally by home demonstration agents.

Admittedly, the survey thus far shows only the dark side of the farm life of a woman. It does not consider the many compensations that come with the woman's daily round of work for the comfort of the family, and anyone who has experienced the satisfaction of living in the open country knows that the average farm woman is more fortunately placed than her average city sister, the department says.

But what is to be done?

Miss Florence E. Ward, in charge of the extension work of the department of agriculture under whose direction the survey was made, answers the question.

Benefits From Conveniences.

"The interest of the department of agriculture in the returns from these studies as to labor, working equipment and compensation of the farm woman," says Miss Ward, "are as practical as its interest in farm studies regarding labor, machinery and crop returns for the same general reasons.

"The farm woman's working hours might be shortened, if the principles of modern business were applied to the farm home. Running water in the home for the 52 out of every 100 that must carry it into the house would lighten the woman's labor and add to her comfort. Labor could be lessened if the farm house were as well equipped as the up-to-date barn, which the farmer looks upon as so much currency with which to buy efficiency.

"The installation of modern lighting systems would release some of the women in 79 per cent of the homes where kerosene lamps are still used, and the installation of heating systems would release some of the men of the 54 per cent who care for coal or wood stoves.

"Forty-eight per cent of the farms are showed by the survey to have power for operating farm machinery, but only 22 per cent have this advantage for the home. That is a singular fact when we consider that frequently it is a simple matter to connect the engine used in the barn with household equipment.

"The washing machine is another labor saver, and selling cream, instead of churning it at home is another. In short, the same sort of intelligence and a fraction of the money applied to making field and barn work convenient would, if applied to the home, end untold drudgery to the women of the farms and would add both to the profit and comfort of the home."

HOW TO PREVENT BEES SWARMING

Advice and Suggestions on Subject Given by Professor Conradi of Clemson.

BROOD CHAMBER TOO SMALL

Production of Honey Gatherers Can Be Greatly Reduced by Proper Management—How Swarm May Be Hived to Best Advantage.

One of the problems of the beekeeper says Prof. A. F. Conradi, entomologist, is how to prevent bees from swarming. The following questions and answers taken from information Circular No. 9, published recently by the extension service of Clemson college, are in brief form expert advice and suggestions on this subject:

Why do bees swarm?

The bee colony is divided into workers, drones (or male bees), and queen. Normally the queen alone lays eggs, and to perpetuate their race new colonies are necessary. This is the natural way of increase.

What are conditions that induce swarming?

(a) The brood chamber may be too small, allowing too little egg-laying room. (b) There may be too little storage space. (c) There may be lack of ventilation. (d) There may be too many drones.

At what season is swarming most likely to occur?

Usually in early spring, but it may occur at any time during honey flow when conditions named in No. 2 are not corrected.

Can swarming be entirely prevented?

No, but it can be greatly reduced by proper management.

Why should swarming be prevented as far as possible?

It keeps the working force together. A hive full of bees is worth more than any number of weak colonies.

Are there two queens in the hive during swarming time?

Generally not. The young queen does not yet come out of the queen cell. The old queen leaves with the swarm.

How may swarming be reduced or possibly prevented?

(a) If the brood chamber becomes crowded, add another brood chamber. (b) If bees cluster out, it may be due to overcrowded condition, or lack of ventilation. Ventilate the hive and add room when necessary. If possible remove drone comb and also queen cells.

How may a swarm be hived to best advantage?

(a) When the swarm has settled, brush it into the new hive.

Swarming Bees.

(b) Remove the old hive from which the swarm came and place it where you want it to remain in the future. (c) Place the hive containing the new colony on the old stand. The first bees returning home will enter the new hive on the old stand; by night the majority of bees are again in the new hive on the old stand, making a strong colony.

GOPHERS IS EASY

Strychnine Sulphate on Pieces of Vegetable of Some Kind and Shove in Hole.

The easiest way to poison gophers is to put pieces of strychnine sulphate, about the size of half a wheat grain, pieces of potato, carrots or turnips. Then take a sharp stick and push it into the soft earth around the hole. Put the pieces of poisoned food down into these places and gophers will get it. This way saves stock and children from eating it up. It has been proven to be efficient in ridding the field.

SOIL FOR LATE GARDEN

Withstand Summer Heat and Fall Plants Must Have Well-Prepared Seed Bed.

Late garden seeds should be planted in very rich and well-prepared soil. To withstand summer heat and endure severe cold the plants must have a deep soil, and it must be kept in good condition, if possible.

USE AX IF DISEASE DEVELOPS IN FLOCK

Chicks Will Not Grow Properly if Not Healthy.

Far Better Plan to Prevent Ailments Than to Attempt to Cure an Ailing Fowl—Give Good Attention to Their Houses.

Disease is one of the handicaps to successful poultry keeping and should be guarded against at all times. Unless kept in a healthy condition, chicks will not grow properly and mature fowls will lose their vigor and vitality and become unproductive and unprofitable.

It is far better to prevent disease by proper care and attention than to attempt to cure a bird after it is sick. Therefore it is important to watch the flock closely at all times for any signs of disease, so in case an outbreak occurs it may be checked at once. Prevention is always better than cure, and all those who wish to succeed with poultry should give their birds such good care and keep their houses so well cleaned and disinfected that both fowls and chicks will keep hardy and vigorous.

Some diseases may be treated successfully, while others of a more serious nature usually prove fatal. If only one or two birds of a flock become sick it is usually advisable to kill them immediately (unless they are choice specimens) and burn or bury the carcasses, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture. If the birds are kept and an attempt is made to doctor or cure them the disease may prove contagious and spread throughout the entire flock.

AXLE USEFUL AS GATE HINGE

Illustration Shows How Discarded Part of Wagon or Other Implement May Be Utilized.

On almost every farm can be found an old wagon or implement wheel with its axle. The illustration shows how it can be made to form one side and a very effective hinge for the farm gate.

An Old Axle, With Parts of the Two Wheels Remaining Upon It Forms an Essential Part of This Easy-Working Farm Gate.

The axle is set upright with the slats of the gate bolted to it. The lower end of the axle should be fitted with an old hub to serve as a bearing. The hub on the upper end should have at least one spoke remaining in it, so that the latter can be thrust through a hole bored in the gate post. Some stout wire, or iron strips, will be necessary to hold the hub up against the post.

PRODUCE BEST CAULIFLOWER

Tie Leaves Over Head to Protect It From Sun or Weather—Three Cuttings of Crop.

When the cauliflower head is about the size of a dollar, the leaves should be tied or twisted over the head to protect it from sun and weather. This method should produce a perfectly white product. The leaves should be so tied that snow or rain that enters may find a ready exit at the bottom, as an accumulation of moisture on the head or curd will cause dark spots and eventually ruin the product. There are usually three cuttings of the crop. If the earliest heads are tied with string, the second with raffia and the last have the leaves broken over, the grower will be aided at cutting time and will not have to examine all the plants.

Good roads construction retarded by the war should now be pushed vigorously and nothing should be permitted to interfere with the expansion and development of these important arteries of transportation and trade which can serve to materially reduce high living costs by facilitating the movement of foodstuffs from the farm to the table.

Significant Auto Fact.

Observers are said to regard it as significant that the states which will spend most freely for better highways and which manufacturers depend upon to buy the most motortrucks in 1920 are states in which farming is the predominant occupation.

Value of Motortruck.

The value of the motortruck as an aid in marketing farm products is now well established. In bringing this about improved roads have been an essential factor.

Man and Wife, All Run-Down From Farm Work, Were Greatly Helped by Ziron.

"MY WIFE and I, after a hard spring on the farm, were tired and run-down," says Mr. E. B. Mulkey, of Route 1, Acworth, Ga. "We neither felt well. I knew my blood was bad, as I had little boils on the back of my neck.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Ziron is a safe, reliable, tonic medicine, good for men, women and children, when an iron tonic is indicated. It is easy to take and contains no habit-forming drugs.

Multiplies Too Fast.

At one of the army schools the perspiring aspirants for knowledge were going through the intricacies of arithmetic. One raw youth was having particular difficulty with fractions.

"It's very simple," encouraged the instructor. "See this rule, now. How many tenths are there in it? Ten, of course. Now, how many hundredths? One hundred. Now, how many thousandths?"

"D——n!" explained the sufferer. "There must be millions of 'em."—American Legion Weekly.

Cold Water Has Odd Use.

For years steam has been used for thawing the frozen soil of mining claims in Alaska, in spite of difficulties. Now it has been discovered that cold surface water, which of course is warmer than the ground, is a much better thawing medium than either steam or hot water, states Popular Mechanics Magazine. This seeming paradox is explained by the fact that the superabundant heat units of steam rise rapidly around the pipe, and are wasted, while the few heat units carried by the cold water remain in the ground and do their work slowly but thoroughly. In one test in the Nome district, a 2-inch pipe was inserted in a 6-inch drilled hole, and fed with 20 gallons of water a minute at a temperature of 52 degrees F., the ground being at 28 degrees. In 36 hours an 8-foot cylindrical thaw had been made.

Garden Pride.

Neighbors of J. W. Applin were surprised one night recently about 12 o'clock to see him with a flashlight looking for something in his garden. He appeared to have another man along with him.

It was thought that perhaps he had lost something valuable and was looking for it and a solicitous neighbor said the next morning: "Lose something in your garden last night, Mr. Applin?"

"No," was the reply. "I was just showing a caller our first tomato."—Indianapolis News.

Colored American Put Algerian to the Supreme Test and Then Delivered Stern Verdict.

The total lack of comprehension between the American negro and his Algerian brother will go down in history as one of the outstanding features of the war.

There was, for instance, the case of the dusky stevedore at Brest and one of the colored French troops on duty there. Long and laboriously the Yank tried to establish some means of linguistic communication, but there was no response.

Then a brilliant thought struck the boy from Georgia. He produced a pair of ivory cubes and rolled them enticingly under the Algerian's nose. Intelligence still registered zero.

Traveled Far for Wedding.

Before the war, a couple, both hailing from Auckland, New Zealand, came to a little village church in Cumberland to be married. It was the church where the bride's parents had been married just 25 years before. The couple had come 13,000 miles to be married in that church, and they set off on their honeymoon back to Auckland.—London Tit-Bits.

Tells How Ziron Iron Tonic Helped His Daughter After Operation for Appendicitis.

AFTER any serious illness, the first thing you notice when you begin to get around is your lack of strength and energy—a tired, weak feeling.

The sooner you get your strength back the better. The thing to do is to eat plenty of good, nourishing food, get all the fresh air you can, exercise moderately, and take Ziron Iron Tonic three times a day.

Your doctor will tell you this is sound advice, and urge you to follow it.

Read this letter from Mr. J. B. Kelly, vice-president of the First National Bank, Graceville, Fla.: "My daughter had been in bad health since last April. She was operated on for appendicitis. She has been taking Ziron for two weeks. Her appetite is better than it has been. Her nerves are better, and she says she feels better . . . I know that Ziron is good for weak and feeble people."

Ziron is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, prepared from valuable strength-building ingredients, for weak people with thin blood. Druggists sell Ziron on a money-back guarantee. Try it.

REVIVAL AT FRIENDSHIP

Beginning last Saturday night, a very successful revival is being conducted at the Friendship Baptist Church, just north of town.

Rev. J. D. Hand of Newton, Ala., is assisting the pastor, Rev. W. P. Lowery, and this able minister and evangelist is doing a great work for that community.

Rev. Hand has with him his son to conduct the musical part of the meeting, and he is a very talented soloist and choir director.

Several additions have been made to the membership, and this church, while yet young, promises to be one of the livest and most progressive churches in the county.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION

The Chilton County Singing Convention met at the Co. High School building Saturday, July 17th. Called to order at 3:00 o'clock p.m. with song by James Franklin, prayer by S. M. Yates. Motion carried that we elect officers for ensuing year, which resulted as follows: President, Jas. Franklin; Vice-President, S. M. Yates; Secretary, J. M. Smith; Chaplin, A. H. Glasscock; Executive Committee, F. I. Popwell, Mrs. L. O. Vickers and W. M. Boswell. Motion adopted that we suspend publication of minutes for coming year.

Resolution attached herewith was adopted and ordered published.

The Resolution.

Whereas, there has arisen among some of the people of our County an idea that all music leaders who are not members of a church should be denied the privilege of directing sacred music in our siggings; and

Whereas, we believe that such an idea or practice will prove detrimental to the advancement of the cause of music, therefore, be it

Resolved, that it is the sense of the Chilton County Singing Convention that all men and women of recognized moral and upright character in our county, who are interested in the advancement of the cause of sacred music, be fully privileged and invited to take part in our singings throughout the county, as directors, or otherwise, as they may see fit or be called upon, without regard as to whether they are members of a church or not. Be it further

Resolved, that this Convention would suggest that the Committee for arranging musical programs at any time or place in our county, use every effort to distribute as widely and effectually as possible, the names of those who may be selected as leaders, in order that the greatest diffusion of ideas and interest may be affected looking to the broadening of the sphere of musical progress, and not be limited or biased toward any person or leader because he or she may not be a member of the church.

This Convention further appeals in this regard, for the most hearty and cordial support for the cause of music in our county, from all leaders and lovers of music, both inside and outside of the church. We believe that music is one of the greatest moral refining agencies in our land, and we hope that no one may be denied the privilege of executing his or her talents in this respect.

Resolved, further that these resolutions be printed in the Union-Banner.

REYNOLDS WILL SPEAK AT ANNISTON

Judge L. H. Reynolds has accepted an invitation to speak at Anniston on August 12, the ocacsion being the annual meeting of the State Farmers Union. We do not suppose that this will be a political speech, but Judge Reynolds will be able to give the farmers at that meeting some food for thought, and we expect that if they are observant enough they can find some politics between the lines of what he says.

CAMPAIGN FOR AMERICANISM

An active campaign with Americanism as its keynote, as opposed to internationalism, is being waged by the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, according to Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington, the chairman of the committee. Senator Poindexter said that the states in which the campaign is centering include Idaho, Utah, Oregon, California, Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Maryland, and Kentucky. "The great issue in Senatorial campaign especially is the issue of Americanism," Senator Poindexter stated. "The maintenance of complete American sovereignty, the withdrawal of our military forces from Europe, the co-operation of the nation for the preservation of the peace of the world and the re-establishment of peace and commercial relations with Germany without compromising American independence are all peculiarly involved in the Senatorial campaign."

MR. DAVID VINES

No, he is not dead,—he is not even sick. But we simply want to let everybody know what has become of him. Several people have been asking where he has gone to; so we are going to tell you about him.

Most everybody in the county are acquainted with David, and his friends are no less numerous than his acquaintances. He is an admirable young fellow, and no one can know him without liking him.

You will remember Mr. Vines as the veteran rural carrier on Route No. 5 from Clanton before the war. During the war he served in the United States Navy. Since being discharged from the service two years ago he has been at work for the Alabama Power Company at Lock 12.

But the first of this month he landed safely back in Clanton, and is now permanently located with the Chilton Hardware Company in the capacity of salesman. He invites his many friends to call on him there and let him sell them something that is hard to wear.

Mr. Willie Logan of Ensley spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Logan.

Mrs. J. M. Popwell and children spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Mims.

Misses Leara Johnson, Bertha and Nettie Dennis, visited Miss Elner Holley and sisters Sunday.

Mr. James Johnson of Chambers county has been visiting his brother, W. T. Johnson south of Clanton.

Mr. Thomas Bosworth of Thorsby was a visitor to The Union-Banner office on Wednesday. Mr. Bosworth is on old-time Republican from Indiana, and has been living at Thorsby for about twenty years. He follows politics with a close interest, and expresses great hopes that the Republican ticket will be a success in this country next November.

MONEY TO LOAN

I have succeeded in arranging with one of the largest Fire Insurance Companies in America, with millions and millions of capital and surplus, for the above amount —and more if needed, to be loaned to farmers of this section, including Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton, Coopers, Verbena and surrounding territory.

The loans will be made in this way: We inspect and estimate your property, including dwelling and contents, barn and contents, smoke house, feed stuff, mules and cattle, and insure you for three fourths value against fire, lightning and wind storms, figuring you up for five years for only four and one-half years premiums, you paying one-fifth cash and the other four-fifths in four annual installments, without interest.

This strictly applies to farmers and good risk. If you will insure your home, we will also carry your tenant houses for you.

If interested, please write, phone or call on me, and I will be glad to consider your application. I also write old line Life Insurance and sell Singer Sewing Machines.

Now listen, people! You do not owe me one cent, neither do you owe my company anything, but you do owe yourself and your wife and children protection against Fires, Lightning, Wind Storms and Death.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The revival services of the church are now in progress, and large congregations are gathering each day at the court house to listen to the wonderful sermons being delivered by Dr. W. F. Frazier and to the fine singing of Mr. James W. Jelks.

A splendid chorus choir of adult people, and a fine Sunshine Choir of children are some of the attractions of the meeting.

Some have already been received into the membership of the church, and a very fine spirit is manifested which promises one of the greatest revival meetings the church has ever experienced. Dr. W. F. Frazier is one of the experienced workers of the Baptist Home Board of Evangelism. He is a thoughtful, earnest, eloquent preacher with a good deal of humor and some pathos. He is logical in his conclusions and direct and forceful in his appeal. He makes a specialty of working with the men, being a great lover of men. Dr. Frazier and Mr. Jelks make a good team for evangelistic work.

Singer and Director.

In an interesting editorial The Birmingham News has the following to say about "Sunshine Jelks": Sunshine Jelks is a wonder when it comes to children. At 7 o'clock every night his Sunshine Choir meets him for a story hour. The choir is divided into two parts—the Mocking Birds and the Nightingales, and these two sides are working to win the contest which closes Friday night. Mr. Jelks says that he organized his first children choir after his graduation from the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, but at first he did not like children. After his own baby won her way into his own heart however, he began to really love them and his orginal way in handling them has gained for him remarkable success.

"You can't fool a child," smiled the sunshine singer. "You have simply got to enter into the spirit of their play with them and let them know that you really love them to win their confidence."

Mr. Jelks has organized sunshine choruses from Panama to the Canadian Border in about 150 of the leading cities and towns. Sometimes he has 500 in a choir and he says he has been back to a city years after organizing them to find that they are still alive and the children always rememberng him.

Mr. Jelks' popularity does not stop with the kiddies. The grown-ups like him equally as well, and it is almost an impossibility to sit in church he he is leading the singing and not sing. His motto with the cheildren is "Its sunshiny weather when we are together."

Many of the leading pastors and evangelists of the country speak equally well of him.

The services of this week will be as follows:

Preaching services at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. each day.

Street service on Saturday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. led by evangelists.

Sunday afternoon a great mass meeting for men and boys only in the court house at 3:00 p.m.

The women of the church are holding daily prayer meetings in their various circle gatherings and are being assisted by Miss Ida Belle Ray, who is a very capable volunteer worker, a splendid scholar, teacher and speaker.

We cordially invite the public to these services and urge the Baptist people of the community who are living in the city to put their membership into the church, and thus help to make their influence felt in the community in which they live.

The meetings will continue every day this week and probably through the next closing on Sunday, August 15th. P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

With an earnest appeal to every Sunday School worker of every denomination to be present, the Chilton County Sunday School Association announces an annual county convention to be held at Clanton, Ala., on August 23rd, 1920.

A program, replete with interesting and instructive details has been prepared by expert workers, who have included every phase of modern Sunday school work for consideration at the convention. "The Sunday School of Today," an address by one of the state association workers, will introduce an open forum discussion.

The convention will open in the morning at 9:30 o'clock and will continue through an afternoon session, adjourning at 4 p.m. Dinner will be served in the open. Two of the field secretaries of the Alabama Sunday School Association will appear on the convention program.

This convention is of vital interest to every Sunday school worker and devotee in the county and is expected to be largely attended.

Pate Parrish brought us one of his Democratic watermelons Monday, and the only supremacy it held over the Republican brand was that it was bigger. We invited a friend of ours (and also a friend of "Jeff") who is a Democrat, to help us eat the melon, and when we told him it was one of Pate's Democratic melons, he said he did not believe it was a Blackmon Democrat. We don't now why he said that, but we will ask Pate and see if he knows.

Mrs. J. W. Kicker and grand-daughter, Lillian Dennis, are spending this week with relatives in Montgomery.

A MANDATORY LAW

Because of the Secretary of Labor in making futile the arrests of anarchistic and revolutionary aliens for deportation, the Republican Congress during the recent session so amended the deportation law as to leave no doubt as to its intent. "These aliens are here only because of our good grace and the courtesy of the United States," says Representative Albert Johnson ,chairman of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. "Some government officials think our present laws do not reach these aliens. This bill will reach them. They are welcome here no longer. Not only is the bill necessary because many of these alien reds are now in the United States but because many thousands are at the ports of the world seeking passage to the United States to do propaganda work for world revolution."

WHAT CITIZENSHIP IMPLIES

Washington, Aug. 3.—(Special correspondence)—Speaking as a member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization in the House of Representatives, Representative Isaac Siegel, of New York, says that the United States typifies love of country. "Citizenship implies desire and will and obligation to give all you possess in behalf of the country in which you live. As far as the Immigration Committee is concerned, it is determined upon one thing—that in the United States there is not going to be room for a living creature, no matter how small he can be, if he is not willing to stand by America 24 hours a day. It is only in the last two years that the immigration law really provides for illiteracy test and examination both physically and mentally. It gave the government all the power it could ask for to effect the deportation of undesirables. The astonishing feature of our investigation has been that we find that the man cannot read English or any language in fact, is the very man who is willing to listen to people who have no love for America."

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE AWAKENING OF HELENA RICHIE

By MRS. MARGARET DELAND

Condensation by Miss Sara Ware Bassett

Margaretta Wade Campbell was born at Allegheny, Pennsylvania, Feb. 23, 1857. When only 16 she went to New York to study drawing and design, and later taught them. In 1880 she married Lorin Deland, famous as sometime football strategist against the enemies of Harvard.

In 1886 appeared "The Old Garden," a collection of verse. It is a characteristic title; for many years Mrs. Deland has each winter grown in her own house in Boston great numbers of Dutch bulbs, which she sells at an annual function to her friends and the public, for the benefit of her favorite charities. As she does all the labor herself, it is a singularly personal form of good works.

Only two years later came "John Ward, Preacher," a book which won the author wide recognition. There have been many others between that and "The Awakening of Helena Richie" in 1906, including "Old Chester Tales" in 1898, in which she made famous her childhood home. "The Iron Woman" appeared in 1911.

IN 1906 Margaret Deland, after having written several other books, gave to the public the fruit of her maturer skill in "The Awakening of Helena Richie."

The story is simple.

Stripped of the charm of its setting, and the subtle delicacy of its treatment, we have a tale presenting few characters, and with no very extended scope for action.

The scene of the novel is the same small Pennsylvania town in which Mrs. Deland has placed two previous books: "Old Chester Tales" and "Doctor Lavendar."

At the opening of the story Mrs. Richie has come to Old Chester and taken up residence in the "Stuffed Animal House," so called because its former owner was a taxidermist. She is little known to the villagers, living an isolated existence, and shunning any intimacy with the townsfolk; nevertheless she is universally respected. There is, to be sure, an atmosphere of mystery enshrouding this beautiful stranger who is possessed of a culture and poise that place her a stratum above the simply bred inhabitants of the sleepy little settlement, but since she goes to church, is quiet and decorous, and gives herself no airs, she furnishes no cause for criticism.

Her only visitor is Mr. Lloyd Prior, known to Old Chester as her brother.

As the story proceeds, however, we are made aware that Prior is not her brother, but is a Philadelphia widower with one daughter whom he idolizes; and that he and Mrs. Richie have for thirteen years been living together awaiting the death of Frederic, Helena's husband, whose demise will leave them free to marry. Frederic has been a dissipated man who, when not himself, has been responsible for the death of the Richie baby; and he is now living a dissolute life in Paris. The tragedy of the baby's death has been the culminating factor in turning his wife's hatred and contempt for him into revulsion, and determining her to desert him and go to Prior. To her lover she gives all the affection which the loss of her child and the destruction of her hopes have turned back into her nature.

Prior, on the other hand, has loved her in the past, but now, after thirteen years of deferred happiness, his passion is burned out. He is tired of her. Alice, his daughter, is growing up, and he realizes the indiscretion of the entanglement; furthermore his business demands his time; it is less and less convenient to come to Old Chester; and he is no longer young. He is a selfish, sensual being, with the typical masculine distaste for everything that renders him uncomfortable either in mind or body. While he is willing, in an indolent sort of way, to continue his relation with Mrs. Richie; is even honorable enough to marry her if he must, it is obvious that he would gladly be rid of the whole affair.

But to Helena Richie this incident is not an "affair." It is her life. She loves Prior with a devotion engendered by her lonely, heart-starved existence, and she looks forward to the moment when Frederic's death shall release her from her present precarious position, and allow her to confront the world with a clear name. That an ultimate marriage between them will wipe out the blot on their past she does not question. In the meantime she can only possess her soul of patience, and make the best of her enforced seclusion. No one knows her secret. No one can know it. Therefore she feels quite secure—that is, as secure as is possible in the face of the ever-present danger of exposure.

Into this fevered life of hers three important characters project themselves: Doctor Lavendar, the minister of Old Chester; Dr. William King, the village physician; and David, an orphan child whom the rector has befriended, and for whom he is desirous of finding a home. Of all Mrs. Deland's creations none, perhaps, is more beloved than is Doctor Lavendar. Wise, benign, humorous; yet just at all times—a man who is never to be turned aside from a principle by idle sentimentality. Doctor King is not unlike him in this unflinching fealty to duty and to honor.

These two persons put their heads together to decide that since Mrs. Richie leads such a solitary life and is abundantly able, she is the one to take the homeless David. The conspirators proceed with extreme caution. The child is brought to Doctor Lavendar's house, and Mrs. Richie is given the opportunity to see him.

He is a quaint, winsome, appealing little fellow—a decided personality, and one of the most delightful and consistent child portraits in modern fiction. His greatest attraction lies in the fact that one can never be sure what he will say next. Once, when Doctor Lavendar is telling him a story he keeps his eyes fixed so intently on the man's face that the old gentleman is much flattered.

"Well, well, you are a great boy for stories, aren't you?" remarks the delighted minister.

"You've talked seven minutes," said David thoughtfully, "and you haven't moved your upper jaw once."

As can be imagined the child makes instant conquest of Mrs. Richie, who insists on fitting him out with tiny garments, and brings him in triumph to the "Stuffed Animal House."

Day by day the tie that binds her to David strengthens until we see this affection the dominant motif of her life. It even overshadows her love for Prior, although it is some time before she is conscious that it does so.

In the meanwhile, quite by chance, the security of her miniature world is shaken to its foundations. There lives in Old Chester a youth much Mrs. Richie's junior, Sam Wright, who has drifted into the habit of calling on her, and who falls in love with her. It is the blind worship of one who has never known passion, and in an attempt to break up the boy's infatuation his doting grandfather comes to Mrs. Richie, and half in irritation accuses her of not being a good woman. The shot is a random one, but the instant the charge is made the speaker realizes he has hit upon the truth Helena's anger at his gibes and sarcasm is like the whirlwind.

But the Lord was not in the wind.

It is Sam Wright's suicide that first brings home to her the gravity of defying social responsibility. What she has hitherto regarded as a scorn for convention she now sees to be a crime against humanity. All her being is rocked with self-reproach.

But the Lord was not in the earthquake.

It is not until Doctor King forces her to confess her guilt, and tells her she must give up David, that we reach the climax of the drama. Then all the wild mother instinct of the woman leaps into being. She is a lioness fighting for her young. She will give up Prior; in fact she does give him up. But she will not part with David. She begs, bribes, prays; but Willy King's conscience will not permit him to listen to her entreaties. She must send the child back to Doctor Lavendar, or he must acquaint the good minister with the entire story.

In an effort to forestall this action Mrs. Richie herself goes to the rectory and before she leaves it she looks into the face of her own soul and pronounces her doom.

"The whirlwind of anger had died out; the shock of responsibility had subsided; the hiss of those flames of shame had ceased. She was in the centre of all the tumults, where lies the quiet mind of God."

When Dr. Lavendar asks her if she thinks herself worthy to keep the child she humbly whispers: "No."

And after the fire, the still Small Voice.

At last the woman's conscience is aroused, her repentance is sincere, and we have the true "Awakening of Helena Richie."

How wisely Dr. Lavendar meets this crisis in the shattered life, allowing her to taste to the full the dregs of remorse and suffering; and yet how mercifully and gently he leads her upward toward hope and a desire for restitution constitute the remainder of the story.

The kind old man suggests that she make her future home in a distant city where her past will not follow her and where she may start anew, and he asks that on the morning of her departure she come to him for a package which he wishes her to take with her on her journey. The reader shares her shock of joyous surprise when David emerges from the corner of the stage-coach crying:

"I'm the package!"

"Dr. Lavendar took both her hands. . . . 'Helena,' he said, 'your Master came into the world as a little child. Receive him in your heart by faith, with thanksgiving.'"

So ends the novel.

To tear the skeleton of the plot from its exquisite setting is almost a sacrilege. It is like dragging the perfume from a flower. One must read the book to gain a true sense of its exceptional beauty and fineness.

It has been successfully dramatized and the title role ably and artistically portrayed by Margaret Anglin; there is also an "Anglin Edition" of the story attractively illustrated by pictures taken from the play.

Workers Meet at Auburn.

Auburn.—Many prominent people attended the annual conference of Alabama extension workers, which met at Auburn Aug. 2-7, inclusive. The meeting was in the nature of a round table conference. Representatives from the Washington office and others were introduced to the conference from time to time. Reduction in the high cost of living was the central theme of the meeting.

$18,000 Income Refund.

Montgomery.—Warrants for the refund of income taxes paid the state prior to the decision of the Alabama supreme court declared the income tax law unconstitutional, are being prepared in the state auditor's office. It is esttimated that the amount to be refunded will be close to $18,000, although it is impossible to arrive at exact figures in this connection at the present time owing to the fact that all applications for refunds are not yet in. Attention is again called to the provision that those wishing a refund must make application to the state tax commission, which passes upon all such reimbursements before the auditor is authorized to issue warrants for them.

Montgomery.—Alabama coal mining has caught its stride again, and output is equal to the heaviest of any period of the year. The production during the week ending July 24 was 327,989 tons compared with 283,000 in the week ending July 17 and 242,000 in the week ending July 10. Last week's production was an increase of 34,000 tons over the preceding week and an increase of 75,000 tons over the next preceding week. The production in the week ending January 31 was 320,000 tons and that of the week ending February 14 was 320,000 tons. That of the week ending March 6 was 308,000 tons. It appears that the production has gotten back to the maximum of output that preceded the domestic mine strikes. They began early in May. The increase in output is credited to three causes: (1) More cars at the mines; (2) Diminution of the strike owing to the reopening of domestic mines where there were, or are, strikes, and their increasing production; (3) Longer hours put in by the miners at large mines, where there are, and have been, no strikes. The mine situation is altogether better than it has been in several weeks and the trend appears to be upward.

Two More Convicts Held.

Montgomery.—Two other convicts have been arrested on chages of complicity in the murder of Francis Suddith, convict, at the Speigner prison, according to a report received by the convict department. They are Wayne Wright of Randolph, serving a life term for murder, and Robert Carter, alias Claxton, of Montgomery, serving an indeterminate term of from eight to nine years for grand larceny. Wright and Carter have been placed in the Elmore County jail with Clarence Bailey, who is accused of being the person who wielded the knife. No details which would indicate the cause of the killing have been obtained. As Wright is now serving a life sentence he can be convicted of only one offense, murder, and the punishment must be death. If he is not given a death sentence he must be acquitted.

What Is Taking Place In The Southland Will Be Found In Brief Paragraphs

Foreign—

Lloyd George, premier of England, says that whatever may happen, Ireland will never be permitted to break from the British empire.

The duke of Northumberland and Sir Edward Carson say that the Irish Sinn Fein is part of a world conspiracy to turn the world upside down.

The Turkish delegation which is to sign the peace treaty is in Paris. The signing will take place early in August.

Frank Brooks, wealthy country gentleman, a close friend of Viscount French, lord lieutenant and member of the committee on Irish reconstruction appointed last year by the viceroy, has been assasinated at Dublin. He was killed in the directors' room of the Dublin and Southwestern railway in Westland row, where he had gone to attend a meeting of the railroad's board of directors.

Three soldiers and three Sinn Feiners were wounded when a body of the latter disarmed a detail of military police in the heart of Dublin, Ireland. The coup is said to have been the most audacious and spectacular that the Sinn Feiners have yet accomplished in the matter of disarming the military.

Ronald Amundsen, Norwegian explorer, has arirved in Nome, Alaska, from the Arctic ocean, thus completing a circle of the globe in Arctic waters.

Col. Esteban Cantu, governor of Lower California, Mexico, is reported to be in open rebellion, following reports that troops are being sent to Ensenada on the west coast and to an unnamed point on the gulf coast. The governor says he will use every resource at his command to repel the invaders if they come without authority from Provisional President de la Huerta.

The German reichstag by an overwhelming vote approved the agreement recently made by the government at Spa with the representatives of the entente.

Francisco Vila has telegraphed to President de la Huerta offering to surrender unconditionally. The government reply instructed him to place himself at the disposition of Gen. Eugenio Martinez, chief of operations, and to repair the railway line. Villa replied that he had repaired the railway line and signed himself "Affectionately Francisco Villa."

The allies' demands upon Holland to guard the former German emperor closely have made it impossible for William to mingle with the Dutch country gentry who have estates about Doorn and the house where he is said to expect to spend his remaining days is just like "a little bit of Germany."

The suggestion that Germany has been tempted to join forces with Soviet Russia in order to escape her obligation is repudiated by Dr. Walter Simons, foreign secretary, in a recent speech to the reichstag. He reasserted Germany's neutrality in the Russo-Polish situation.

The former German emperor, William, while professing a desire to lead at Doorn, Holland, the quiet life of a country gentleman, has nevertheless created a little court around him—somewhat larger than he had at Amerongen, and Dutch newspapers have already begun calling Doorn "The Little Potsdam."

Washington—

The American government is understood to be giving close attention to Japanese relations and Japan's general policy in the far east because of the effect on the questions involved of the recent withdrawal of the American troops from Siberia the signing of the consortium relative to Chinese financial aid, the assumption of control of the Chinese eastern railroad by the Japanese and the Japanese occupation of northern Saghalien and the greater portion of the maritime province of Siberia.

As indicating that the United States has maintained a neutral attitude between Poland and Soviet Russia since the opening of the hostilities between those countries, Secretary Baker has made public the record of the sales by the war department to Poland with the explanation that nothing had been sold since the hostilities began.

Prior to the war between Poland and Russia, the wart department disposed of approximately $72,000,000 worth of materials to the Polish republic. Her total obligations to this government amount to at least one hundred million dollars.

A statement of railway earnings and expenses for the month of April, compiled by the interstate commerce commission, shows that the government lost because of railroad operation for service and not for profit for that month aproximately one hundred million dollars. Only the South showed an operations credit.

The league of nations will continue to be the principal campaign issue as far as President Wilson is concerned, no matter what course is pursued by Governor Cox. Whatever utterances the president makes will be based on the league of nations idea.

President Wilson, through the United Mine Workers of America, has appealed to the striking miners to return to work. When the strikers resume work, the president promises to have alleged inequalities of the wage scale probed.

"THE LITTLE PEOPLE."

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson receives an invitation to dinner from his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. On the way he meets Barbara Bradford and renders her a service. She lives in the same apartment building as the Gastons. They go there together. Gaston and his wife are going to Maine for a trip and ask Nelson to live in their apartments. He accepts. The Gastons tell him of mysterious noises about the apartment—"whispers" and noises that have scared them. Going to the apartment a few days later Nelson again meets Barbara, his accidental acquaintance. Nelson meets the building superintendent, Wick, and instinctively dislikes him. In a wall safe he finds a necklace of magnificent pearls. Next day Nelson finds the pearls have disappeared from the wall safe. His first idea of informing the police is not acted upon because of peculiar circumstances. He has been discharged from his position without adequate explanation or reason, and feels himself involved in something of a mystery. He decides to conduct an investigation himself. That night Barbara signals from the window of her apartment, which is opposite his, and they arrange a meeting for next day. In the morning he finds a note in his room, asking him why he had not informed the police of the loss of the jewels. Barbara tells Nelson her sister Claire had some years before made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone knowing of her escapade has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson and Barbara exchange confidences about the "whispers," mysterious noises and other queer doings, which are much alike in both apartments.

"Yes," said I," "I am Mr. Nelson Mr. Gaston's great-nephew."

"Sure and I'd have knowed ye anywhere. It's as like ye are as two peas barring the old gentleman's white hairs."

Her statement rather startled me for while I never had regarded myself as an Adonis, on the other hand never had supposed I looked anything like old Rufus.

"Was this my great-uncle's bedroom when he was here?" I asked, trying to make my inquiry seem casual.

"It was and it wasn't," Mrs. Burke replied. "He gets queer notions, the ould gentleman does. In the last few weeks he's slept in every room in the house."

"What made him do that?"

"It's not for me to be saying." Dubiously she crossed herself. "Some

"THE LITTLE PEOPLE."

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson receives an invitation to dinner from his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. On the way he meets Barbara Bradford and renders her a service. She lives in the same apartment building as the Gastons. They go there together. Gaston and his wife are going to Maine for a trip and ask Nelson to live in their apartments. He accepts. The Gastons tell him of mysterious noises about the apartment—"whispers" and noises that have scared them. Going to the apartment a few days later Nelson again meets Barbara, his accidental acquaintance. Nelson meets the building superintendent, Wick, and instinctively dislikes him. In a wall safe he finds a necklace of magnificent pearls. Next day Nelson finds the pearls have disappeared from the wall safe. His first idea of informing the police is not acted upon because of peculiar circumstances. He has been discharged from his position without adequate explanation or reason, and feels himself involved in something of a mystery. He decides to conduct an investigation himself. That night Barbara signals from the window of her apartment, which is opposite his, and they arrange a meeting for next day. In the morning he finds a note in his room, asking him why he had not informed the police of the loss of the jewels. Barbara tells Nelson her sister Claire had some years before made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone knowing of her escapade has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson and Barbara exchange confidences about the "whispers," mysterious notes and other queer doings, which are much alike in both apartments.

I wondered which had been his bedroom. It was hardly likely that he had occupied the room in which I slept. As I debated the matter I heard someone moving about my room and went to investigate. It was Mrs. Burke, making up my bed. She would know which room my great-uncle had been accustomed to occupy.

As I entered the bedroom for the purpose of cross-questioning her, my first impression—and philosopers tell us that the first is most likely to be the correct one—was of a simple-minded, kindly old Irish woman of the utmost honesty. I was certain just by looking at her that there wasn't a crooked hair in her head, even if she had had the intelligence necessary for crimes beyond the ordinary.

"It's Mr. Nelson I'm seeing at last," she exclaimed with satisfaction. "I was wondering when I would be laying eyes on ye."

"Yes," said I," "I am Mr. Nelson, Mr. Gaston's great-nephew."

"Sure and I'd have knowed ye anywhere. It's as like ye are as twe peas, barring the old gentleman's white hairs."

Her statement rather startled me, for while I never had regarded myself as an Adonis, on the other hand I never had supposed I looked anything like old Rufus.

"Was this my great-uncle's bedroom when he was here?" I asked, trying to make my inquiry seem casual.

"It was and it wasn't," Mrs. Burke replied. "He gets queer notions, the auld gentleman does. In the last few weeks he's slept in every room in the house."

"What made him do that?"

"It's not for me to be saying." Devoutly she crossed herself. "Sometimes I do be thinking the house is haunted. The old man was all the time mumbling about—"

She hesitated and looked furtively about.

"About whispers," I suggested. Instead of replying to my question she shot another one at me.

"And have ye been hearing them, too?"

"Sometimes I Do Be Thinking the House Is Haunted."

I laughed, trying to put a note of merriment into my tones.

"I don't believe in things like that."

The old woman nodded her head sagely.

"It ain't believing in them things that makes you hear them. Either you hear them or you don't. The old man heard them."

"How do you know?"

"Didn't I hear him asking meself about it? He heard them, many times."

"How about the others—the servants—did they hear them, too?"

"They may have that. Niggers is always hearing things anyhow. It's what the white folk hear that counts."

"How about the other apartments in the house? Do the people in them hear whispers?"

"Never that I've heard tell of, but how should I know? This is the only place in the house that I work."

"Did Mrs. Gaston ever speak to you about it?"

"She did and she did not. She never in so many words asked me if I heard them. All she says to me was, 'Nora, if ever you see or hear anything strange or unusual here, you're to let me know at once.' And I says, 'Yis, Mrs. Gaston, I will.'"

"And have you ever seen or heard anything?"

The old woman busied herself with making up the bed for a moment before she answered me.

"I'm not saying I've seen anything," she began, "but there's thiugs I could be telling if I was minded to open my lips."

"If you know anything," I said, "you must tell me, Mr. Gaston put me here to find out what was wrong."

"There's no doubt there's wrong here."

"What makes you say that? What have you seen? What do you know?"

"It's neither what I've seen nor what I know." She nodded mysteriously. "It's what I've been hearing myself."

"For heaven's sake, woman," I cried, losing patience, "what is it you've heard?"

"I've heard them walking," she announced with an air of triumph.

"You've heard who walking?"

"The little people, of course. Who else would it be doing it?"

"Oh, bosh!" I exclaimed. I was well enough acquainted with the superstitions of the Irish to understand who she meant by "the little people." It's the habit of the old crones from the Emerald isle to attribute anything they cannot understand to fairies.

"You may laugh," she retorted indignantly, "but I heard them, I tell ye."

"Where did you hear them, these footsteps?"

"Coming right out of the wall, here in this room, and in the kitchen, beyond."

"It was probably somebody in another apartment you heard."

"It was not. The floors do be deadened like, and it's nothing at all you can hear. It was somebody walking soft-like right there in the wall at me back."

"Well," I announced, "if there is anything like that going on, I am going to stay here until I hear it. I want to make sure no one can come into the apartment but myself, so I am going to ask you to give me your key. I'll be home here all the morning, so I can let you in when you ring."

"It's me key you're wanting, is it?"

She produced it from a pocket of her gown and handed it over, first unknotting it from a corner of her kerchief where she had tied it for safe keeping.

"And indeed if it's meself you're not trusting with a key after Mrs. Gaston letting me have it for these ten years back, it's your own bed you can be making. I'll not be coming near the place again."

In fine indignation she flounced out of the place. To tell the truth I was not sorry that she had announced her decision not to return. While my impression of her was that she was a simple-minded old woman of uttermost honesty, I was just as well satisfied that no one but myself should have entry to the apartment until I had finished my investigations and had made further progress in solving the mysteries that were so rapidly developing.

Left once more to myself, I sat down at my great-uncle's desk and made out a list of questions that must be answered:

1. Where was Rufus Gaston? Had the old gentleman really gone away or was he in hiding in the building?

2. Who had removed the Gaston pearls from the wall safe? It must be someone who knew the combination.

3. Who had written the note I found on the floor of my bedroom? How and when had it been placed on the floor there?

4. Who were the persons who were trying to blackmail the family next door?

5. How had the anonymous notes been delivered on the floor of Barbara Bradford's room? (Evidently the writer was the same as in my case.)

6. Was there anything in the past relations of Mr. Bradford and my great-uncle that would cause my great-uncle to plot against the Bradford family?

7. How were the mysterious sounds heard both by my great-uncle, by Barbara Bradford, and by myself to be accounted for?

8. How were the mysterious footsteps heard by Mrs. Burke to be explained? Were they merely the imaginings of a superstitious old woman?

The relations between Mr. Bradford and Rufus Gaston puzzled me. Miss Bradford's recollection of her father's remark about my great-uncle certainly indicated that he held no high opinion of him. My great-uncle's actions throughout had been peculiar. His suddenly sending for me and insisting on my coming here to live, his insistence on leaving his wife's jewels in my care, and on entrusting me with the combination of the safe, all now took on a sinister aspect. It certainly was peculiar that he had gone off without leaving me any address where he could be reached.

Then, too, there was my own unexpected and unwarranted discharge at my place of business. I was positive in some way it was connected with my having come to this place to live. Had my great-uncle himself brought it about for the purpose of discrediting me? Was it the work of the blackmailers to get square with me for having accidentally butted in on the meeting they had arranged with Miss Bradford?

The scar-faced man! Who was he? I was certain that he was in some way involved. It might have been he who had caused me to lose my job. Certainly the malevolent glance he had given me in the restaurant that night showed that he would have wrought me harm if he could. The next time I laid eyes on him I was determined to trail him with bulldog tenacity until I ascertained his identity and where he lived. I felt sure that the trail of the mystery would lead to his door.

I decided not to leave the apartment all day. I had laid in a plentiful supply of food the day before so there was no necessity for my going out. There was plenty of work for me to do. I must try to devise some way of examining the safe door and the jewel box that remained for evidence of fingerprints, and I must inspect the building both from within and without to see if I could learn how the notes were delivered.

From one of the toilet tables I obtained some fine powder and opening the wall safe again I took out the jewel box and carefully dusted it over with the powder. I hoped that the powder would reveal markings of hands on the box, but either I was too inexperienced or my method was wrong, for I succeeded in obtaining no sort of result, beyond finding out what my own fingerprints looked like on a sheet of paper prepared with some home-made lampblack. After an hour or two of experimentation I gave it up as a bad job, and turned to the study of methods by which the notes might have been delivered.

The Gaston apartment was on the sixth floor of the building, which was surrounded by ordinary three and four-story dwelling houses. It must have been someone in the building, if not in the apartment itself. It would be quite possible for someone on the floor above to have projected the notes through my window and that of Miss Bradford by attaching them to the end of a long stick. I made up my mind to ascertain who occupied the apartments above.

The mystery of the whispers did not seem to be of such easy solution. While I had been inclined at first to regard my own experience as a dream, the coincidence of Miss Bradford and my great-uncle having had the same illusion convinced me that it was some claptrap devised by the plotters for preying on the fears of their intended victims.

Eagerly I waited for the coming of evening and from half-past seven on I sat by my window waiting for Barbara's signal. It was nearly nine o'clock before I heard the three taps that had so startled me the evening before. Quickly I thrust my head out of the window and was rewarded by seeing hers appear at the same moment.

"We must not talk long," she warned me. "Someone might see us. Have you learned anything new?"

"Yes," I whispered. "In my uncle's diary I found several entries about the whispers."

"How strange!" she exclaimed. "Where is Mr. Gaston?"

"I don't know."

"That's funny."

"It's more than that. It is decidedly odd that he left no word where he could be reached."

"I don't blame him," she almost sobbed. "I wish we could all get away off somewhere, away from it all."

"Don't worry. Everything we find out will help discover the plotters. Tell me from what part of your room did the sounds come."

"Always from the same place, up in the corner, near the ceiling."

"I thought so," I answered. "That's where they came from in my room. That shows it is just some mechanical trick they are using in the hope of terrifying us. Do you know who lives on the floor above?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. Do you suspect them?"

"I suspect everybody until this mystery is solved," I replied almost savagely.

"Not so loud, they may hear you. Have you learned anything else?"

"No, nothing. I questioned old Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Gaston's laundress. She knew nothing, although she insisted that she had often heard footsteps when there was no one in the apartment. Of course it is only her imagination."

"I'm not so sure," Miss Bradford whispered. "I've heard them, too. They seemed to come right out of the wall."

"Why," I exclaimed in amazement, "that's just how she described them."

"Often, too, when I get up in the morning I have a strange feeling that there must have been someone in my room while I was asleep."

"How strange!" I muttered, more to myself than to her. "I wonder if it could be anyone walking in their sleep."

"You mean"—she hesitated—"my sister?"

"I don't mean anyone," I hastened to say. "I was only thinking aloud, wondering if it could be a possible explanation. I have heard of innocent persons doing all sorts of things under hypnotic influence."

"I've read of that, too," she said soberly, "I wonder—"

She left the sentence unfinished, but I felt that the same thought had flashed into her mind as into mine. Was it possible that the unscrupulous Frenchman who had wronged her sister years ago had in some way recently gained an interview with her and had gotten her once more into his power? Could it be that under the spell of another's mind Claire Bradford herself had taken away the papers concerning the annulment of her marriage and was placing the notes in the blackmail plot?

"Look here," I said determinedly, "we've got to see each other somewhere tomorrow and talk this over. Where can we meet?"

"I'm afraid I can't manage it tomorrow. I'm busy with my mother and sister all day long. Tuesday, perhaps. But we mustn't talk here longer. Good night."

"Good night," I called softly but her head had been already withdrawn, so quickly that I hardly knew whether she heard me. As I was about ready for bed I recalled that I had spent most of the money I had in my pockets, so I visited the bookcase where I had secreted my hoard and taking out a twenty-dollar bill, wrapped it about the three one-dollar bills I had left and put the roll in my trousers pocket.

The next morning, as I was dressing, I happened to draw forth my money. I gazed at it horror-stricken.

I distinctly recalled having wrapped the twenty-dollar bill about the three smaller bills. Now one of the dollar bills was on the outside.

There before me was indisputable evidence that someone had been in my room while I slept, someone had gone through my pockets and had examined my money. Someone had put the dollar bill on the outside of the roll.

Who had done it? How had they got into the room?

Find Value of Various Woods.

Investigations by the agricultural department show that one standard cord of well-seasoned hickory, oak, beech, birch, hard maple, ash, elm, locust or cherry wood is approximately equal to one ton of anthracite coal. A cord and a half of soft maple or two cords of cedar, poplar or bass wood are required to give the same amount of heat. One cord of well-seasoned mixed wood equals at least one ton of average grade bituminous coal.

Will Not be One Day Without PE-RU-NA

The Lady TELLS Her FRIENDS

MRS. MARY FRICKE

Mrs. Mary Fricke, 507 Bornman St., Belleville, Ill., is just one of the many thousands of ladies throughout the country who, after an agony of years, have at last found health, strength and vigor in PE-RU-NA.

Her own words tell of her suffering and recovery better than we can do it: "I suffered with my stomach, had awful cramps and headaches so I often could not lay on a pillow. Saw your book, tried PE-RU-NA and got good results from the first bottle. To be sure of a cure I took twelve bottles. I have recommended PE-RU-NA to my friends and all are well pleased with results. I will not be one day without PE-RU-NA. Have not had a doctor since I started with PE-RU-NA, which was about fifteen years ago. I am now sixty-three years old, hale, hearty and well. Can do as much work as my daughters. I feel strong and healthy and weigh near two hundred pounds. Before, I weighed as little as one hundred. I hope lots of people use PE-RU-NA and get the results I did." An experience like that of Mrs. Fricke is an inspiration to every sick and suffering woman.

If you have catarrh, whether it be of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or other organs, PE-RU-NA is the remedy. It is not new; it is not an experiment. PE-RU-NA has been tried. PE-RU-NA has been used by thousands who once were sick and are now well. To prevent coughs, colds, grip and Influenza and to hasten recovery there is nothing better.

PE-RU-NA will improve the appetite and digestion, purify the blood, sooth the irritated mucous linings, eradicate the waste material and corruption from the system. It will tone up the nerves, give you health, strength, vigor and the joy of living. Do what Mrs. Mary Fricke and thousands more have done—try PE-RU-NA. You will be glad, happy, thankful.

Stomach Troubles Made Him Feel Sick at Meal Times, But Now Always Enjoys His Meals.

DO YOU enjoy your meals? Eat without the dread of the after-effects?

Lack of appetite and a disagreeable, sick-at-the-stomach feeling after meals, usually indicate that your digestive organs are not working properly. As a result, you will feel weak, lose weight and lack the energy that is to be derived from well-digested food.

A valuable help in correcting such conditions is mentioned by the Rev. E. K. McKenzie, Route 1, Section, Ala., who writes: "I had stomach troubles. When I would go to eat, I would turn sick. I took one bottle of Ziron, and it cured me. Am always ready for my meals and enjoy them. I think it is a fine medicine."

If your food hurts you, if your appetite is poor, if you are pale, weak and run-down, and have other symptoms that indicate your system needs help, try Ziron. It will put iron into your blood and help build you up. Take it according to directions, and if not benefited by the first bottle, the money back guarantee will protect you.

Acts on the Liver, Regulates Kidneys, Purifies the Blood

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in the back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

Bamboo for Paper Making.

According to Sir Harry Johnston, the famous African explorer, the inexhaustible supply of grasses, reeds and rushes of tropical Africa can be utilized in making paper. William Raitt, the cellulose expert of the British government, points out many serious difficulties in making paper from these grasses, but says that these are not found in bamboo, which renews itself annually.

After Ten Years—Eatonic Proves the Best

"I say, God bless eatonic," writes Mrs. Delia M. Doyen. "I can truthfully say, after suffering with stomach trouble for ten long years, that I have never had anything do me so much good as this one box of eatonic."

We print these grateful words from this dear lady, so that sufferers everywhere may have hope and a little faith—just enough to give eatonic a trial. Why, folks, last year over half a million people used eatonic and found relief.

This is the secret: Eatonic simply takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases, and carries them right out of the body. Of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well. Stomach trouble causes about seventy non-organic diseases, so, if you are suffering any kind of misery, not feeling well, go right to your druggist today and obtain a big box of eatonic; cost is a trifle. Use it and find quick, sure relief.

Make this test—you will see, and then, if you are not satisfied, your druggist will hand your money back. He does not want one penny unless eatonic pleases you. Adv.

A LARGE ORDER

It is difficult to imagine how even a partisan Democrat can longer picture Governor Cox as a man of presidential caliber. Immediately upon the close of his conference with President Wilson relative to the League of Nations question the President announced that he and Governor Cox were "absolutely at one." Governor Cox announced that whatever President Wilson had promised he would exert his utmost to give.

Every observing and thoughtful man must know that on a subject of such importance and involving so many intricate problems it is practically impossible that any two men exercising independent minds could be "absolutely at one." It is not at all probable that there were any two of the ninety-six members of the United States Senate who were absolutely at one relative to the various phases of the League Covenant. Men of varying viewpoints, and of different lines of reasoning, would naturally find in a question of such large and complicated character, features of more or less importance upon which they both would differ. When, therefore, it is announced that two minds are "absolutely at one" the conclusion is inevitable that one of the minds has absolutely surrendered to the other. It is also a necessary conclusion that the mind that surrendered itself is not of sufficient caliber to guide the destinies of the United States so far as they are affected by the administration of the executive powers of the government.

An even more astounding declaration following the Wilson conference is the statement by Governor Cox that Whatever Woodrow Wilson has promised he will do his utmost to give. Every man who has followed the Wilson career not only in domestic affairs but particularly at the Peace Conference must realize that no man except Woodrow Wilson himself knows what all he has promised; nor is there any reason to believe that President Wilson has taken the American people into his confidence to the extent of revealing to them even the essential features of the promises he has made. It must be remembered that at the Peace Conference two treaties were negotiated, one of them a treaty of peace with Germany and the other a treaty of alliance between the United States, Great Britain, and France—an alliance of defense—which latter treaty President Wilson promised would be submitted to the United States Senate at the same time as the Treaty of Versailles. Notwithstanding that promise, which President Wilson carefully concealed from the American people, the treaty was not presented at the same time as the Treaty of Versailles nor was it made known to the American people until knowledge of its existence became public through other channels and the Senate forced the President to disclose the promises he had made.

This one instance of duplicity, to use no stronger term, justifies the assertion that President Wilson may very likely have made other promises which he still conceals and which may be embarrassing to the American people if they shall bestow upon Governor Cox the power and authority to carry out the Wilson pledges. By his declaration, Governor Cox has signed a contract in blank to carry out pledges yet to be disclosed. He has given to Woodrow Wilson carte blanche to fill in the blank spaces of that contract in any way that may appeal to the mysterious workings of the Wilson mind. Will any sound business man, any careful manager of his own business affairs, accept as a wise executive a man who thus binds himself to carry out promises the nature and extent of which he can not possibly know?

There are two incontrovertible evidences of weakness on the part of Cox—first, his being "absolutely at one" with Woodrow Wilson, and second, his unqualified pledge to carry out any promises Wilson may have made.

HARDING AND AMERICA UNAFRAID

Washington, July 3.—The keynote of Warren G. Harding's acceptance speech is to be found in the candidate's consciousness of his responsibility, declares the Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in the following statement:

"If Senator Harding's speech of acceptance had been the utterance of a President instead of a candidate for the Presidency it would rank as one of the greatest state papers that ever emanated from the White House. In its lucid discussion of the great principles upon which this government is founded, of the dangers that now beset it, and of the precautions that must be taken if disaster is to be avoided, Senator Harding's address is on a plane with the farewell address of President Washington; indeed, in its profound treatment of the complexities of American government it bears a marked resemblance to that famous document.

"In discussing in turn the problems that he will be called upo nto solve if he should be elected, Senator Harding adheres to that close attention to fundamentals that has characterized his record in the Senate. He sees clearly through the mass of unessential details that in others might becloud the issues of the hour, and emphasizes only those points that contain elements of danger to the basic structure of our government. It becomes apparent to the reader of the address that should its author become the nation's Chief Executive his every act would be performed with a view of preserving and strengthening the institutions created by the Constitution, which brought the country to the pinnacle of wealth and prosperity inherited by Wilsonism in 1913.

" 'If elected I mean to be a constitutional President,' declares Senator Harding, and he might well have begun his address by that pledge. That statement is all-embracing, and adherence to it insures the prosperity and contentment that have been so sadly lacking in the past seven years, and for the return of which every citizen yearns. As his first amplification under that declaration, Mr. Harding promises an end of autocracy and 'the restoration of representative popular government under the constitution.'

"The candidate's handling of our international relations and the covenant of the league is a model of American patriotism, combined with a profound realization of the duties and responsibilities of the United States as a member of the family of nations. 'Our party,' says the Senator, 'means to hold the heritage of American nationality unimpaired and unsurrendered.' But while he stands for America first and all rights preserved, Mr. Harding reminds us that the might of America must set an example of peace before the world. His position is epitomized when he says, 'It is better to be the free and disinterested agent of international justice and advancing civilization, with the covenant of conscience, than be shackled by a written compact which surrenders our freedom of action and gives to a military alliance the right to proclaim America's duty to the world.'

"In his treatment of the problems of industry, of transportation, of the high cost of living, and of the score of other questions of less importance with which he deals, Senator Harding exhibits a breadth of vision, a sympathy with both sides to every controversy, and a desire to reach solutions acceptable to every element, that insure the country of a President of all the people should he be elected. Throughout the entire address runs a consciousness on the part of the author of the tremendous responsibilities that will be his once he assumes office. A feeling of humility finds expression at the close. 'Mindful,' Senator Harding concludes, 'of the vast responsibilities, I must be frankly humble, but I have that confidence in the consideration and support of all true Americans which makes me wholly unafraid.'

"And America, too, is unafraid."

COX'S ARMY.

Washington, July 28—The Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., today gave out the following as a statement from Washington:

"Here are the camp-followers of the Democratic host; the internationalists who would surrender the sacred sovereignty of the American people to the dictation of a coterie of foreigners styling themselves as the 'league of nations'; Gompers and his fellow-members of an executive council in Washington who seek to dictate the hours and conditions of work of every laboring man in the country, and to elect a Congress subservient to their own bidding; members of the boodle-bund, known as Tammany Hall who have for years exploited the city of New York for their own private gain; those maripots of society who seek to lower production and to increase wages to points utterly beyond reason, and destructive to themselves as well as others if successful; those former policemen of Boston and their sympathizers who did not hesitate to turn the city over to the elements of disorder in order to compel compliance with their demands; the Plumb planners who seek to buy the railroads with the money of all the people and turn them over to the rail employees to be operated for their own profit; radical agitators who resent the punishment of convicted murderers such as Mooney and Hillstrom, and who believe that state executives should be coerced by the President into mitigating the penalties imposed upon such offenders; beneficiaries of the notorious spoils system under which the government offices at Washington and elsewhere are encumbered with a host of incompetents whose sole reason for receiving their appointments was that they rendered a service to the Democratic party; the pork-hunters seeking extravagant appropriations for the development of swamps and bayous into navigable waterways, the allotment of millions for nitrate plants and similar projects, and the construction of ornate government buildings at every hamlet in the country; destroyers of private initiative by means of government ownership and operation of every public utility; those patriots who have fattened from the orgy of federal extravagance that has marked the Democratic administration for a period of seven years; those gentlemen who conceived the cost-plus plan of performing work for the government, and succeeded in extracting hundreds of millions of dollars from the public treasury through its application; those pale-blooded people who on one pretext or another, dodged the draft and after a few weeks confinement were released by order of a Democratic Secretary of War, outfitted with new raiment, an honorable discharge from the military service, and their army pay in full to date; the hundreds of individual beneficiaries in his home state whose good will Gov. Cox, then a representive in Congress, sought to purchase at the expense of the people by means of special bills introduced in the House to pay them higher rates of pension than they were entitled to under the general law; those people of mature years who believe the rest of the public should support them thru bounties from the Federal treasury as contemplated in a measure introduced by Congressman Cox.

"This is the left wing of Cox's Army which will carry the banner of their leader in the coming campaign and marshal their forces at the polls in November in the vain attempt to put him in the White House. How many are the points of similarity between them and the personnell of Coxey's Army of 1893. That band of nondescripts directed their march toward Washington precisely as the political and economical heretics of to-day are wending their way. But when they reached the national capital they found the gates of government closed against them. They discovered that it was not so easy to stampede the people's government into a compliance with their views. Let the Cox's Army of 1910 take a page from the history of Coxey's Army of 1893."

Over the Top, and Then Some.

"I never felt better in my life than since takikng the first dose of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I had a bad case of indigestion and bloating and tried all inds of medicine. Mayr't Wonderful Remedy is all and more than is claimed for it. On my recomendation our postmaster's wife is using it with good results." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. YES, HE HAS A HEART

Mr. C. Fenn Jones, the bachelor hardware merchant of Clanton, was going the rounds of the offices and business houses in Clanton Tuesday afteroon with a batch of the Town School Bonds under his arm, in an effort to sell them and thereby secure the money for the erection of the additional story of the Clanton Grammar School building, which work of construction is now in progress.

In this connection we wish to call to your attention the fact that Mr. Jones is a bachelor; he is not what we might term a very wealthy man, but he has money and things of value sufficient to see him to the end of his earthly journey in comfort and ease. Personally it matters not to him whether we have better schools or not.

In the face of all these things, he was out openly at work for the interests of the children of our town and community, making an effort to help them have better educational facilities.

Verily, we say again: The X-Ray was right. C. Fenn Jones surely has a heart !

HOW GAMALIEL SAVED HIS PEOPLE

Washington, July 3.—Drawing a paraphrase from the 4th Chapter of Luke for its text, the Republican Publicity Association, through its president, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., sets forth the recent Wlson-Cox conference as follows:

"And the despot, taking Kox up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time, and the throne and the sceptre of Geneva.

"And the despot said unto Kox, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them; for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

"If thou, therefore, wilt worship me, all shall be thine.

"And Kox, lusting for power, fell on his knees before the despot, who was seated before the altar of internationalism, saying unto him, Get thee behind me Master, and push; thee and thy legion of officeholders, and thy sycophants and thy censer-swingers; and we will betray a nation that I may sit in thy place and listen to thy voice and thy voices, and behold thy visions. Thy league shall be my league, and thy views my views; and whilst it is given unto thee to make known thy comandments; by numbled word of mouth, or through thy high-priest Tumul Tee, my mind shall run along with thine. Then a sinister smile illumed the countenance of the despot and the compact to delver over to Europe the splendor and manhood of America was signed. Yea, her charter was to be as the garments of Joseph divided among his brethren; even as Joseph was America to be sold to the Ishmeelites.

"Now there came from the land of the Buckeye a man of the tribe of Harding, called Gamaliel, which is to say in Hebrew 'Recompense of God.' And he was a champion strong of sinew and of excellent repute. Verily, his strength was as the strength of ten because his heart was pure. And when Gamaliel had seen this thing he turned to the henchman of the despot and asked, What meanest thou by this engagement to barter away the heritage of thy kinsmen? Accept my challenge for a test of strength upon the mat, for I would fain perpetuate unto my people the prize of freedom, and succor them from bondage.

"Then Kox, gazing upon the mighty stature of Gamaliel, grew sick at his heart, and all his blood turned water in his veins. And he answered, It is not meet that I should cope with thee. Is it not written that I am of the caste too proud to fight? Far better is it that I duck. And duck he did, and truned and fled.

"Thereat, Gamaliel flung off his coat, unsheathed his sword, and hastened in pursuit. Through bog and fen, o'er moor and mountain-top he chased the despot's votary. And in the valley of despond on an autumnal day he fell upon him hip and thigh and ballot-box and slew him with one stroke; then locked the despot in a padded cell.

"Thus did Gamaliel preserve unto his people the heritage which was theirs and which had been handed down to them through generations, but which was like to have been hypothecated by the despot and his money-changers.

"And all this befell in the year 1920. And the year thereafter was known as the Year of the Great Restoration, that being the year in which the ark of the people's covenant, for eight years withheld from them, was placed again into their keeping. For Gamaliel sought not to rule, but was chosen administrator, and unto his people delivered he their charter.

"And Gamaliel abode eight years as sage and counsellor of the nation and leader of men. And the people, who had grievously atoned under the rod of the despot, kept green the memory of the days when they rejoiced under the fair sway of the Recompense of God."

Get Rid of Constipation, Sluggish Liver, Weak Kidneys, Dizzy Spells, by Taking Dreco, the new root and Herb Remedy.

"It is a positive fact. I feel ten years younger since I have taken two bottles of Dreco," said Mr. Tom Gosha, who resides at 617 Pollard St., Montgomery, Ala.

"I had a sluggish liver which gave me dizzy spells and headaches... My kidneys also bothered me and I had pains in my back and limbs... My bowels were constipated and I had to be taking medicine all the time. No matter how careful I was about my eating, I always had indigestion afterwards.

"I've always believed in the good old time medicine made from roots and herbs, so I started on Dreco and it helped me at once. My bowels began to act regularly; pains left my back; dizzy spells quit bothering me and my food digested well. I now go about my work feeling fine and it comes easy to me. Dreco is great medicine."

SHOULTS

The protracted meeting closed at Pleasant Grove Friday night. It was a great success. Not so many joined but the sermons were so uplifting and inspiring. Two were baptized Saturday morning. They were Cleve McGee and Clifton Sewell. Everybody feels that God has given them new courage to battle for the right, through Bro. Adams.

Singing School began at Pleasant Grove Monday, Prof. James Franklin being the teacher. We hope every body will try to make this a success.

Miss Mamie Hicks spent a few days with her brother, Mr. W. P. Hicks last week attending the meeting.

Miss Fannie Lawrence spent a few days last week with relatives in the City of Selma.

Mr. John Mitchell and family, Mr. P. Hicks and family, are attending the protracted meeting at Rehoboth this week.

Mrs. Cleve Latham and family spent Saturday night and Sunday with relatives in Lawley.

Mrs. Hall, Mr. Ernest Hamner, Miss Myrtle McAfee and Mr. Cleve McGee attended the preaching at Rehoboth Sunday night.

Miss Ruby Bowden spent a few days at Mr. Geo. Hamrick's last week attending the meeting at Pleasant Grove. He lives at Maplesville.

Mr. J. R. McAfee went fishing on Monday but we do not know what kind of luck he had.

Miss Ruby Shoults was carried to Selma for an operation last week. We are very sorry to hear this; hope she will soon be at home again.

Mrs. Rhodes from Selma visited relatives here last week.

Are You an Endorser On Mr. Cox's Note?

Washington, Aug. 3.—Listing some of the items included in the promissory note of the Democratic party, the Republican Publicity Association, through its president, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., issues the following:

"The platform of the Democratic party is a promissory note," says Gov. Cox. "I shall see that it is paid in full, every dollar and every cent." Which means that if elected president Mr. Cox will exact from the American people payment in full for all the excesses of Democratic misrule included in that platform. Before the public is called upon to write an endorsement of that note in November, it is well that the full extent of the proposed obligation be made known. Here are some of the items included in the total:

1. Acceptance of all the obligations of the league of nations covenant, which, if adhered to means the immediate raising of billions of dollars and the sacrifice of American soldiers and sailors to restore peace at approximately twenty-two points on the earth's surface where wars are now raging.

2. Acceptance of a mandate over Armenia costing hundreds of millions of dollars and necessitating the maintenance of a huge army thousands of miles from our shores.

3. A continuation of the orgy of extravagance in which the Democratic administration already has wasted billions of the people's money.

4. The appointment of Federal office holders, from Cabinet members down, solely from political considerations involving untold cost to the taxpayers in loss of efficiency.

5. A continuation of the supine attitude of the law-enforcing branches of the government toward profiteers, as a result of which billions of dollars have been mercilessly forced from the hopeless consuming public.

6. The divergence of hundreds of millions of the people's money for the exploitation of the Southern States, exemplified in the past few years by the fixing of special sugar prices for southern sugar growers, the expenditure of $70,000,000 for an all-but-useless nitrate plant in Alabama, and the waste of other millions in the development of insignificant waterways throughout that section of the country.

7. A continuance of the factors that contribute to the high cost of living, such as currency inflation under the Federal Reserve system, gross governmental extravagance, and tax laws that discourage industry and rifle production.

8. A continuation of a postal inefficiancy that puts an indirect tax of millions upon the people annually.

9. The possible cancelaltion of the $10,000,000,000 debt owed to us by foreign governments, under the 8 to 1 hostile influence of the league of nations council, which sum then would have to be raised by taxation of our own people.

10. The encouragement of Bolshevism by extreme leniency toward alien radicals in our own country, and the removal of trade restrictions with Russia—policies that may well cost us untold lives and treasuse in the future in the defense of our civilization.

The list might be continued showing the hopeless outlook for American finance and morale if the "promissory note" of the Democratic platform and the Cox declarations receive the endorsement of the voters in November.

Demand Fair Play from Mr. Wilson for America

Caling on President Wlison to accord fair treatment to America in the closing days of his administration the Republican Publicity Association, issues the following statement:

In a recent editorial entitled "Fair Play for Mr. Wilson," the New York Times asked "Is it too much to hope that President Wilson may now get fairer treatment from his political opponents? He will have but eight months more in office. During that period would it not be decent to let up in the ferocity of the attacks upon him?" Thus does the Times display its usual craftiness in political sophistry. The question carries a false assumption and is designed to distract attention from the real issues before the country.

A more pertinent and appropriate question for the Times to ask—and one that the whole country is asking—is whether it is too much to hope that the President will now give the country fair treatment. Will the president dicontinue his efforts to surrender American sovereignty to a league of nations? Will the president terminate his cordial relations with the extreme radicals—the friends of Mooney and Hillstrom, the Minors, the Kate O'Hares, the Trotskys and a long list of other troublemakers who have never had a particle of sympathy for American institutions? Will the president abandon that extreme partisanship which has dominated his entire administration, even in the conduct of the war? Will the president discourage extravagance and waste in management of the public business, and insist upon restoration of efficiency, particularly in the postal service? Will the president yield his idea that this is a one-man government, to be ruled in all its branches by him alone?

As the Times truthfully says, there are only eight more months of the Wilson administration—scarcely more than seven now in fact. Why then, should President Wilson insist upon imposing upon the American people a continuance of the follies which have been repudiated by the electorate? In 1918 he appealed for an endorsement of his administration by the election of a Democratic Congress. His request was met with a decisive rebuff, and a vote of lack of confidence was recorded. Notwithstanding that expression of public opinion Mr. Wilson went to Europe claiming to speak for the American people and tried to fasten upon them obligations which they had never expressed a willingness to assume. He told Europe that America demanded the establishment of the league and came back to tell America that it must accept the league or break the heart of the whole world.

President Wilson's political opponents have not been unfair. No president was ever given greater powers than those bestowed upon the present occupant of the White House with the aproving votes of political opponents. But Mr. Wilson' political opponents have been consistently for America first. They have had due regard for their oath to uphold the Constitution and law of the United States. They have felt the burden of responsibility as members of a coordinate branch of the government. Wherever possible, they resolved doubts in favor of the executive in the conduct of the war, but they could not, in fulfillment of their official duties surrender the legislative branch of the government to Mr. Wilson. The records will show that during the war Mr. Wilson had as generous support from his political friends, in return from his politican friends, in return for which he endeavored to use the power of his office to turn an election to his partisan advantage.

The pertinent question is "Is it too much to hope that America may now get fairer treatment from President Wilson?"

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH

The most successful revival ever held in this community closed last Friday at the Friendship Baptist Church, just north of Clanton.

Rev. J. L. Hand of Newton, Ala., assisted the pastor, Rev. W. P. Lowery in the preaching, and the music and singing was under the direction of Mr. Spurgeon Hand, also of Newton.

The church was really and truly revived by these services, and new life was taken on by the membership.

Rev. Hand is a wonderful preacher and he did his very best in every sermon that he presented. Friendship Church was very fortunate to have this noted preacher and singer with them during the meeting.

A total of eight members were added to the church roll, two being by baptism and six by letter. The ordinance of baptism was administered to these two on Friday morning, in the church pool.

The church organized a prayer meeting, which will be held every Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. We cordially invite all who can to come out and be with us in these prayer meetings. You will always be welcome there.

PLEASANT GROVE—JEMISON

I have not reported our Singing Society in some time, so I will send a few lines about our progress.

We met Sunday p.m. and had the best singing since we organized our society. We sang many beautiful hymns that were soul-inspiring, as it has been said that "music washes away from the soul the dust of every day life."

Music is the only qualification mankind may indulge in to excess without injury to their moral or religious feelings. Music is to the mnid as air is to the body. Were it not for music we might in these days say the beautiful is dead:

We had with us this afternoon part of the choir from Pates Chapel. We thank them so much for their co-operation for co-operation among each other will make the world better.

The leaders were Mr. Geo. Spivey, who is chairman of our society, Prof. James Franklin, Mr. J. S. Wright and Mr. Robinson of Pates Chapel. The organists were Misses Delene Wright, Nora Franklin, Bevie Childress and Mr. Cleckler of Pates Chapel.

We gave the visitors a very cordial invitation to meet with us next third Sunday p.m.

A party of our society went to Clanton to the singing convention, and were greatly revived in a musical sense.

Last week was spent here in a religious revival. The preaching was by the Revs. Deason, Champion, Thomas and Lawrence. The sermons were very beautifully rendered and also very effective.

It is glorious indeed for people to meet together to serve their creator. There are so many beautiful ways to serve Him that no one can have an excuse for not serving and praising every day.

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS

We wish to call the attention of some of our correspondents to the fact that their correspondence is no good unless we know where it is written from. We have received some good news matter from over the county, and there was no community name anywhere mentioned in it; and for that reason it could not be used.

So please don't forget to state the name of your community at the head of your letter, and sign your name at the last.

EXPRESSION OF THANKS

Please allow us to thank our many friends for their kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our husband and father. May God's most sacred love be shown each of you for your kindness in this sad hour of our bereavement, is our most earnest prayer.

Mrs. W.H. Parrish and Children.

LIBERTY HILL

The Liberty Hill Singing Society met Sunday afternoon with a small crowd and very good singing.

Singing was opened with song by the chairman.

Directors for the afternoon were Profs. G. C. Weldon, Glover Smith, J. W. Lowery and Zack Lowery. Organists were Misses Zelma Lowery and Lillian Smith.

The society will meet again on the third Sunday p.m., August 15th. We invite the singers to come and take a part with us in the singing.

NOTICE—I have a "Loring-Blake" Palace organ for sale, in A1 condition; cost $500 when new, will sell cheap for cash. If you want an organ you can't beat it. For particulars see H. W. LOWERY, Clanton, Ala.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable, Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

FARMERS' COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Farmers have been given the right of collective bargaining by an enactment of the recent session of the Republican Congress. According to the statement of Representative Halvor Steenerson, of Minnesota, the new law will encourage food production and lower prices to the public. The only real opposition to the bill, he asserts, came from the large trusts and combines who desired to continue to enjoy a monopoly in the purchase of farm products. Through the co-operative associations, authorized under the provisions of the law, the farmer will be able to reach the consumer with his goods at low expense by eliminating the middle man, says Representative Steenerson.

Gained Ten Pounds

Before Taking ZIRON, Alabama Man Was Weak, Nervous, Had No Appetite, But is Now Strong.

EVERY man and woman, who is in a run-down, weak condition, with bad complexion and poor appetite, due to lack of iron in their blood, should find Ziron helpful and strength-building.

It is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, composed of ingredients recommended by leading medical authorities.

Describing his experience with Ziron, Mr. George W. S. Lanier writes from Jones, Ala.: "Sometime back, I was in a terrible condition. I was weak and nervous, and had a tired feeling all the time. My skin was muddy. I had no appetite, and at morning I didn't feel like getting up. I was reading of Ziron and decided I would try it . . .

"Will say that Ziron is a good medicine. I have gained ten pounds in four months. Am strong and have a good appetite."

Ziron is a mild iron tonic, good for young and old. It helps to restore the system, when run-down by overwork, under-nourishment, caused by stomach or bowel disorders, or as a result of some weakening illness.

Get Ziron from your druggist. He sells it on a money-back guarantee

WILL GO TO ORRVILLE AUGUST THE 5TH AND 6TH.

Dudley Collins informs us that the contemplated trip to the farms at Orville will be made on the 5th and 6th of August. All who desire to make the trip should notify Mr. Collins now in order that he may make the necessary arrangements. If anyone wishes to take his own car, Mr. Collins will make arrangements for him to get a load of other passengers.

This will be a trip of much interest to farmers and will be of great value, as it will be a chance to see the finest stock, hog, and dairy farms in Alabama.

Write Mr. Collins at once if you desire to go, and he will make arranements for your passae.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

It is charged by Democratic journalists and party leaders that the Republican platform adopted at the natoinal convention in Chicago is weak and equivocal. They claim that it cuts and covers; that it says what it doesn't mean—and means what it doesn't say. Is all this true? No! Is any of it true? No! It is a typical Republican platform; therefore it is a truly American platform. The candidate for President and Vice-President are tried-and-true Americans; and they stand with both feet firmly and sturdily planted upon the platform as framed, approved and adopted.

Let's examine a few declarations and provisions of the Republican platform—and see how "equivocal" they are.

"We recognize the justice of collective bargaining as a means of promoting good will, establishing closer and more harmonious relation between employer and employes, and realizing the true end of industrial justice."

Anything "equivocal" about that?

"The strike or the lock-out, as a means of settling industrial disputes, inflicts such loss and suffering on the community as to justify government initiative to reduce its frequency and limit it consequences."

Anything weak or tricky in that?

"We deny the right to strike against the government; but the rights and interests of all government employees must be safeguarded by impartial laws and tribunity."

Anything vacillating about that?

"We condemn the Democratic administration for failure impartially to enforce the anti-profiteering laws enacted by the Republican Congress."

Any dodging of the issue there? A Republican legislative body placed anti-profiteering laws upon our national statute books; but a Democratis executive adminitsration failed to enforce these laws.

"There is urgent need of improvement in our naturalization law. No alien should become a citizen until he has become genuinely American, and tests for determining the alien's fitness for American citizenship should be provided for by law."

Anything evasive about that?

"The equality of all citizens under the law has always been a policy of the Republican party. Without obedience to law and maintenance of order, our American institutions must perish. Our laws must be impartially enforced and speedy justice should be secured."

Anything uncertain in the sound of that?

I might go on—and on—indefinitely.

It is an American platform.

American candidates stand upon it.

Its speaks for equal rights for all and special privileges for none.

It is frank.

It is firm.

But it doesn't suit our friends, the Democrats.

Why?

Because it spells defeat for them.

EX-SERVICE MEN CAN GET HELP FROM Y. M. C. A.

We note with interest a news dispatch that says President Wilson will go to the Philipine Islands as President of the University of the Philipines when his term at the White House is ended. As for us we don't object to him going.

Attention of ex-service men is called to the fact that if they desire assistance of the Y. M. C. A. educational fund, they should file application at once with the local chairman, Jno. A. Thomas, or F. B. Collier, the Secretary.

Chilton County has available about $500 to be awarded to ex-service men. This fund is not available for collegiate courses, but is available for public school, high school or business courses. The local committee believes a business course of the Chilton Co. High School or the Thorsby Institute at Thorsby would prove beneficial to a larger number of ex-service men and hence recommends such courses.

Those who desire to avail themselves of any part of the fund should make application at once. All applications must be filed with the local secretary, F. B. Collier, not later than August 15, 1920, at which time the committee will make the awards. No applicant may be allowed more than $200, and the committee would like to limit the awards to between $50 and $100, so that the fund may be used in assisting as large a number of ex-service men as possible.

F. B. COLLIER, Secretary.

HANDS, ARMS, LIMBS ASLEEP

And Was Run-Down, Weak and Nervous, Says Florida Lady. Five Bottles of Cardui Made Her Well.

Kathleen, Fla.—Mrs. Dallas Prine, of this place, says: "After the birth of my last child...I got very much run-down and weakened, so much that I could hardly do anything at all. I was so awfully nervous that I could scarcely endure the least noise. My condition was getting worse all the time...

I knew I must have some relief or I would soon be in the bed and in a serious condition for I felt so badly and was so nervous and weak I could hardly live. My husband asked Dr. ——about my taking Cardui. He said, 'It's a good medicine, and good for that trouble', so he got me 5 bottles...After about the second bottle I felt greatly improved...before taking it my limbs and hands and arms would go to sleep. After taking it, however, this poor circulation disappeared. My strength came back to me and I was soon on the road to health. After the use of about 5 bottles, I could do all my house-work and attend to my six children besides."

You can feel safe in giving Cardui a thorough trial for your troubles. It contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs, but is composed of mild, vegetable, medicinal ingredients with no bad aftereffects. Thousands of women have voluntarily written, telling of the good Cardui has done them. It should help you, too. Try it. E 74

The Golden Rule Will Work

WHATEVER your business, the Golden Rule of the Bible will work. Try it in its complete application. You will have more satisfaction—and more business.

Treat your employes as you would want to be treated if the hired man were boss.

If you are employed, do your work as you would want it done if you handled the check book.

In your home treat your children as you would want to be treated by God, your Father.

"Children, obey your parents," says the good book.

The principles of the Bible can never be disproved. Follow its teachings and nothing but good can result.

HOT WEATHER DISHES.

There is nothing one may prepare which takes the place of salads of various kinds, especially on hot days.

Simple Onion Salad.—Take the small green-topped onions, slice very thin and serve with a dressing of sour cream, salt and paprika. Served with bread and butter it is a meal with a glass of good cold milk.

Tomato Jelly Salad.—To one can of stewed tomato, well strained, add one teaspoonful each of salt and powdered sugar and two-thirds of a box of gelatin softened in one-half cupful of cold water. Pour into small cups and chill. When ready to serve unmold on head lettuce and serve covered with mayonnaise dressing.

Tomatoes Stuffed With Asparagus Tips.—Prepare tomato shell; invert to drain. Cut cold cooked and seasoned asparagus tips in bits and fill the shells after salting them. Season with grated onion, cover with mayonnaise and serve well chilled.

Sweetbreads and Cucumber Salad.—Mix cooked sweetbreads cut in dice with half the amount of cubed cucumbers and a half cupful of diced celery. Mix with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce.

Cottage Cheese and Chives Salad.—Mix two cupfuls of well-seasoned cottage cheese which has been enriched with thick cream with one-half cupful of finely minced chives. Mold and serve with a simple boiled dressing.

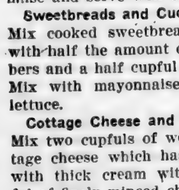
Cucumbers in Sour Cream.—Peel and slice cucumbers as usual, cover with cold water to which a teaspoonful of salt has been added. Let them stand until well wilted, drain and plunge into ice water. Let stand for a half hour, drain and dry on a cloth, then cover with a thick, sour cream which has been seasoned with salt, cayenne pepper, a dash of mustard and a teaspoonful of sugar. If the cream is not sour enough add a dash of vinegar. Serve well chilled.

Summer Dessert.—Fill a baked pastry shell with fresh fruit, top with ice cream or whipped cream and serve from the table.

Today is mine—one royal, golden day,
Filled full of restfulness and sweet content.
I will forget tomorrow and its care;
I have today. What more has anyone?
—F. A. Jones.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Frozen dishes of all kinds, punches, frappes and sherbets are most welcome during the sultry hot days of midsummer.



Caramel Ice Cream. — Measure one and one-third cupfuls of sugar. Take half of it and caramelize it by melting it in a smooth iron frying pan, stirring constantly until a rich brown in color. Add this very slowly to a hot custard made with two cupfuls of milk, one tablespoonful of flour, one egg and a bit of salt. Cook until smooth and flour is cooked, flavor with vanilla and when the caramel is dissolved freeze as usual.

Fruit Ice Cream.—Take the juice of two oranges, the rind finely grated of one, the juice of two lemons, two cupfuls of sugar, and a quart of rich milk or thin cream. Freeze as usual.

Macaroon Ice Cream.—Take one quart of cream, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and one cupful of dry pounded macaroons. Add a tablespoonful of vanilla and freeze.

Banana Ice Cream.—Rub four ripe bananas through a sieve, add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of sugar. Stir and mix well, then add one quart of cream. Freeze as usual.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—Wash and hull three pints of berries. Add one and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar and a quart of thin cream. Put the berries through a sieve after mashing them. Strain to remove seeds if desired and freeze after mixing the ingredients.

Lemon Sponge.—Whip the whites of six eggs to a stiff froth. Soak half a package of gelatin in a little cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add to the gelatin the grated rind and juice of half a lemon and sugar to sweeten to taste. Stir until cool and beginning to thicken, then fold in the egg, pour into a wet mold and chill. Any fruit may be used for this mixture in place of the lemon.

"Oh, the world is full of countries,
but here's one that is my own;
It's the kind that stood for freedom
when it had to stand alone;
It's the land that gave a welcome to all men who would be free.
Of all the lands around the earth it is the land for me."

FOOD VALUES.

The banana pound for pound is more nutritious than the potato and it constitutes the chief carbohydrate food of millions of people in the tropics, where it takes the place of cereals such as wheat, rye and barley and tubers of all kinds, such as potatoes.

Our government experts at Washington tell us that the banana is not only one of the most nutritious fruits but is one of the most easily digested, which explodes some popular theories regarding this fruit.

The banana has still another quality which should highly recommend it. The thick skin which covers it is a protection against all contamination and makes it one of the most sanitary articles of diet.

As to the digestibility of the banana, ripe ones are classed with the easily digested foods, but it is important to see that the fruit is ripe. The skin of the fruit should be dark yellow or covered with brown spots; often the best fruit if firm is found in the skins which are dark brown.

Care should be taken to have the fruit cut from the stalk leaving the skin unbroken.

A ripe banana served with a glass of milk is a satisfying meal for one desiring a light luncheon.

Banana Pie.—Bake a tender pastry shell on an inverted pie tin and when cool fill with thinly sliced banana, sprinkled with salt and lemon juice. Sugar to taste and over all pour a generous cupful of whipped cream sweetened and flavored with almond. Serve well chilled.

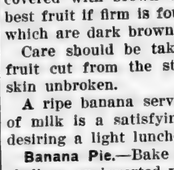
Bananas With Steak.—Slice in half a few rather firm bananas; lay in a granite pan with butter, sugar, lemon juice and a sprinkling of salt. Cook in the oven until well done, then serve as a garnish for the steak.

Lamb Chops With Peas.—Broil the chops, having them trimmed uniformly. Arrange on a platter garnished with green peas served in a thick drawn butter sauce.

When I behold what pleasure is pursuit,
What life, what glorious eagerness it is;
Then mark how full possession falls from this,
How fairer seems the blossom than the fruit—
I am perplexed.
—T. B. Aldrich.

EASY LUNCHEON DESSERTS.

During the warm weather a dish of fruit with a small cake or a cooky is an ideal dessert. However, for variety the following may prove helpful:



Almond Blanc Mange.—Make a paste of four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, wet with a little cold milk, add a quart of milk, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and boil until thick. Flavor with almond and stir in one cupful of shredded almonds or a few tablespoonfuls of almond paste. Mold, chill and serve with cream and sugar.

Baked Pears.—Use the large hard pears; core but do not peel. Fill with brown sugar, add a tablespoonful each of butter and lemon juice and baste during the baking. When tender serve cold with cream or the sauce in which they were cooked.

Banana Puffs.—Take one cupful each of sugar and flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, three eggs well beaten and one-fourth of a cupful of milk. Mix well and stir into this mixture three thinly sliced bananas. Half fill buttered custard cups and steam one hour. Serve with a lemon sauce.

Lemon Sauce.—Stir one tablespoonful of flour into one cupful of sugar, add one cupful of boiling water, the yolk of an egg, one tablespoonful of butter, tow tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a bit of the rind. Cook until smooth and slightly thickened.

Gingerade.—Take two tablespoonfuls of ginger, half a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of lemon juice; stir and mix with iced water.

Lemonade.—Make a sirup by using two cupfuls of sugar, a quart of water and two-thirds of a cupful of lemon juice. Dilute with water to suit the individual taste. Lemon sirup, using a cupful of lemon juice to two cupfuls of sugar and one of water, cooked for five minutes, may be bottled and kept indefinitely. A tablespoonful of the sirup to a glass of water will furnish a glass of lemonade. Orangeade may be prepared in the same way, using a half cupful or less of orange juice in making the sirup.

CLASS BY THEMSELVES.

Stanley is one of a large family. Besides numerous sisters and brothers, there are aunts and uncles galore and many cousins. The only young people, however, are those in his immediate neighborhood. At Thanksgiving dinner Stanley gazed solemnly around the table for a while and then announced oracularly: "My mother and the cat seem to be the only people in this whole family that have any children."

TORTOISE SHELL.

The best of tortoise shell will get dull in time, but a good jeweler always knows how to bring back the pristine luster. Combs, barettes and pins that have become clouded and dingy—real tortoise shell, of course—will come back from a jeweler who understands his business looking as good as new. To brighten the imitation shell hair fixings wash them first with a little tepid water and then polish with a bit of chamois dipped in olive oil.

IN COUNTRY DUDS

Grand Array Offered in the Gayest of Wearables.

Newest Coats Are Made of Basket Weave Silk Ratine; Smart Over-Plaited Skirt.

We women would be utterly devoid of vanity if we did not want to revel in a variety of pretty country clothes these sunny summer days, asserts a fashion correspondent. Now is the time above all others when we have an opportunity to bring together an assortment of beautiful colors in our dress. In town we are limited to certain styles and shades, except in our evening dresses and our negligees. For the country the gayest of things are offered, and there is so much to choose from that we need to exercise taste and judgment in our selections.

The sweater or coat must not be chosen because it appeals to you as a color that you have always liked, but bought with a picture of the entire costume in mind. For instance, one of the new open mesh silk sweaters of a tawny gold hue is charming with a rough silk skirt of blending shade and a wide-brimmed old blue straw hat with yellow trimming.

The plain type of sport clothes made of dark colored tweeds and similar cloths may be infinitely practical, but why be practical at the expense of beauty? A woman should make a picture in her sport clothes. Coats and sweaters alone offer unlimited opportunities. It is well to be constantly on the lookout for something new in the way of these jackets that take the place of the stereotyped sweater, which is gradually being replaced by models quite as useful and infinitely pretty.

The newest coats to wear over light dresses or with a pretty white blouse and skirt are made of a basket weave silk ratine. These come in the gayest of colors, such as hunter green, rose and bright scarlet. What could be prettier in effect than a white silk frock worn with such a coat in bright red, the whole costume topped by a vivid scarlet hat? These coats are smart, too, when worn over a plaited white sport skirt or the plain white skirts made of very heavy gaberdines and serges, or with the white flannel skirts which are so much in evidence this year. Full length as well as the sweater length coats may be had. Of course, the sweater length is the most popular because it can be worn all day long if one wishes.

A coat of this material in rose color has long set-in sleeves and is trimmed with hand-drawn work down the front, the trimming continuing all the way around the bottom and also ornamenting the collarless neck and the pockets and cuffs.

To Make a Placket.

The placket of a skirt may be placed either at the side or the back. The opening should only be as long as is necessary for the skirt to be slipped on and off easily. Leave the placket seam open for about ten inches from the waist, according to the size around the hips, but in all cases the shorter the placket the better. Two strips of material, each half an inch longer than the placket opening, should be cut. One strip must be about four inches and the other strip about two inches wide. The wider strip is doubled over and sewn to the left side of the skirt to form an underflap, whilst the other strip is faced to the right side.

Dotted Swiss Is Liked.

For midsummer dotted swiss is apparently to be a great favorite as a dress fabric. Colored swiss with white dots leads. The widest possible range of colors is in evidence, but there seems to be a pronounced fancy for brown. Frequently a sash of satin or faille ribbon matching the frock in color will girdle it at the waistline. Organdie and voile dresses are also in great demand and it is said that dark flowered cotton voile frocks will be active rivals this season of the more costly silk voiles and chiffons.

SMALL HAT ALWAYS WELCOME

Small hats are always welcome for motoring and general outdoor wear. Here is one, olive green in color, with brown Paradise feathers, affording a most pleasing combination.

CAPE-LIKE COAT FOR FALL

The simple lines of this cape-like coat are particularly interesting on this advance season wrap which Parisian modistes have decreed milady to wear this fall. The high collar is another noteworthy feature.

Collar Now Receives Attention

Neckwear Regarded as Most Important Accessory; Organdie Laces or Tulle Are Summery.

There is, perhaps, no accessory of women's apparel so important at the present moment as the frills and falals we call her neckwear.

With the ardent beams of summer sun, woman puts away regretfully the too heavy fur she snuggled her throat in during the last few days of spring, when there was still a nip in the air o' nights.

Nothing can be more summery than the dainty garnitures of organdie laces or tulle fashioned for just this purpose and giving a touch of lightness and grace to the most sober attire.

To brighten a well-known dress they are invaluable. Last year's taffeta, for instance, can readily be transformed into a charming creation by the addition of a collar, cuffs, belt and side puffs over the hips, all made of organdie, cream or light ecru, edged with a narrow Valenciennes lace. The effect of newness and freshness is enhanced if the organdie is skillfully employed. A wide surplice crossing in front and fastening in the back with a large bow is suggested. The sleeves must be cut exceedingly short and edged with the same banding of organdie and lace.

To wear in the morning with the gingham dress, a real novelty that will meet with approval from the younger set is the large Buster Brown collar of very stiff linen. A ribbon of black moire or some color contrasting with that of the dress, passes under the collar, ties in a coquettish little bow in front and falls in long ends, loosely.

Some fashionable women like the natural colored pongee collar and cuffs with their tailored suits, but with the novel and original embroideries of real raffia, which comes in every color. These are considered more "elegant" than those of organdie.

Bright Red for Summer.

A very bright red is considerably featured in summer fabric frocks at present. Both plain organdie and dotted swiss appear in the vivid color and frequently hat and parasol match the dress. Fall styles continue to occupy the time and attention of style designers now to the exclusion of summer apparel:

Shantung Suits.

Summer suits of shantung are made with plain two-piece slim skirts and semi-fitted jackets, some on regular tailored lines; others with three-quarter length sleeves, the cuffs, collar and pocket flaps trimmed with knife plaitings of the shantung. A summer stole is of gray caracul edged with a plaiting of gray georgette.

Half-and-Half Ribbon.

What is called half-and-half ribbon is a new ribbon novelty soon to be seen. The effect is obtained by stripe or blocks of half-velvet and half-faille or by satin in two colors.

Nickel No Good.

A little girl walked into a confectionery one morning, placed a nickel on the counter and called for an ice cream cone.

"Ice cream cones are 7 cents, little girl," the fizz clerk announced.

"Well, then, gimme a soda pop."

"Six cents."

"Got any root beer?"

"Yep, 6 cents, too."

The little girl sighed disappointedly and started out, leaving her nickel on the counter.

"Here, little girl, you're leaving your nickel," the clerk called to her.

"Oh, that's all right," the child shouted back. "It's no good to me—it won't buy anything!"

POULTRY

FOWLS FOR BACKYARD FLOCK

Not Necessary to Have Hens of Extra Good Standard Quality for Egg Production.

For the backyard flock, kept to produce eggs only, it is not necessary to have hens of extra good standard quality. What breeders of standard poultry call choice utility hens are as good as any for egg production, and cost but little more than ordinary mongrels. Hens of this grade in the medium-sized breeds are usually a little under standard weights, and have superficial faults—as unsoundness of color, or irregularity of markings or of the shape of the comb—which in no way affect their laying capacity, but make them unfit for exhibition and undesirable for breeding purposes.

When buying hens in person, particular attention should be given to the general condition—whether the bird seems vigorous and lively—and to the appearance of the comb and the condition of the feet. Healthy hens have bright red combs and bright eyes, assert poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture. A slight paleness of the comb is simply an indication that the hen is not laying at the time; but a bird whose comb has either a yellowish or a bluish cast should be rejected, for these are symptoms of internal disorders. The skin and scales of legs and toes should be smooth, and the soles of the feet soft and free from corns.

DUST BATH VERY ESSENTIAL

Best Results Cannot Be Expected If Hens Are Permitted to Become Overrun With Vermin.

If the best results are to be expected from the flock, the hens must not be allowed to become overrun with lice or the house with mites. Usually, there will be a place in the yard where the hens can dust themselves in the dry dirt. In the absence of such a place, a box about 2 feet square and containing ordinary road dust or fine dirt should be placed in the house.

A dust bath aids the hens in keeping lice in check and therefore adds to their comfort. If they are not able to keep them in check by dusting themselves, other measures can be taken.—United States Department of Agriculture.

SELECTING GOOD LAYERS

Keep as good layers:

1. Hens which have been the best layers during the past year should be kept over for breeders for next year.
2. Hens which have not started to molt.
3. Hens that have bright red combs and wattles and bright eyes.
4. Well spread pelvic bones, good depth from lay bones to keel bone and vent soft and pliable.
5. Pale shanks, beak and vent on all breeds which have yellow shanks and skin. Use all of the test to be sure you get the good layers.

SEXES SHOULD BE SEPARATED

As Soon as Young Males Begin to Crow They Should Be Fattened for Market.

The young stock should not be reared among a flock of old birds. They should be kept separate. As soon as the young males nag and worry the females (which is about the time they start to crow) the sexes should be separated, and the males fed an extra allowance of food. The cockerels can be mated to the hens without fear of bad effects from inbreeding.

FURNISH SHADE IN SUMMER

Chicks, Poults, Ducklings and Goslings Must Have Ample Shade During Hot Weather.

If the ground that the chicks, poults, ducklings and goslings range over during the summer is grass land browned by the heat of the sun and affording no tender green food, be sure that the youngsters have ample shade and one good feed of fresh, tender green food every day.

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are prepared according to the work THEY have to do.

All this is preliminary to reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and is prepared solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning against Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be all right for you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

All the mother-love that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. And being true to Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for babies as you would a baby's food, hairbrush, tootbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

MRS. ROY COMPLIMENTED

One of the most enjoyable of the many courtesies shown Mrs. Roy was the noon breakfast, at which Mrs. Hugh Jones complimented her sister on Saturday. Dainty little baskets marked the places of the guests. The color scheme of blue and gold was beautifully carried out in the menu, which consisted of five courses.

A huge basket of nasturtiums graced the center of the table. This was over hung with blue morning glories running to the places of each guest, where little baskets holding golden rod stood. At the conclusion of the breakfast bridge was played at two tables.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Julia Ruth Hester celebrated her sixth birthday at the home of her parents at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. As the little friends arrived they were served delicious punch by Miss Margaret Hester. Afterwards games were played on the lawn, then cream and cake were served to the guests.

MRS. ROY HONORED

Mrs. Louis Roy, of Montgomery, was the honor-guest at the pretty brigde party given by Mrs. Victor Heard on Tuesday afternoon. The rooms were very attractive with baskets of garden flowers.

A series of games of bridge were enjoyed, the highest score falling to Mrs. Hugh Jones, and the honoree, Mrs. Roy, was presented with a dainty hand-made embroidered handkerchief.

At the conclusion of the games dainty refreshments were served.

MRS. GRADY BROADHEAD

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Grady Broadhead entertained the Sewing Club, complimenting Mrs. Roy, the charming house guest of Mrs. Hugh Jones. The house was made most attractive on this occasion, with pink hydrangers and garden flowers. A delicious salad plate and ice course was served late in the afternoon.

DINNER FOR MRS. ROY

Mrs. Hugh Simpson entertained a few friends at dinner on Friday in honor of Mrs. Louis Roy. The table was centered with beautiful garden flowers.

Covers were laid for eight and a sumptuous course menu was served.

Mrs. R. E. Luckie and children have gone to Pineapple for a stay of two weeks with Mrs. Luckie's parents. Mr. Luckie will join them before they return home.

JOINT BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Mary McSwain, age 9, and Louise, age 7, delightfully entertained quite a number of their little friends at a joint birthday party, on Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at their home. Games were enjoyed for a while, after which cream and cake were served to the guests.

MRS. CHANDLER ENTERTAINS

Mrs. Harvey Chandler gave one of the pleasantest events of the week when she was hostes to the young matron's club. Her home was prettily decorated in bright garden flowers and ferns.

The score prize, a dainty handerchief, was won by Mrs. Victor Heard, and Mrs. Victor Roy, an out-of-town guest, was presented a bottle of toilet water as a memento of the evening's pleasure.

Mrs. Chandler, assisted by Master George Allen, served a delicious ice course.

W. H. PARRISH DIED SATURDAY

Mr. W. H. Parrish, better known as "Uncle Bill," died at his home near Maple Springs last Saturday. He was 56 years of age, a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, the Red Men and Maccabees. He leaves a wife and 8 children.

Burial services were held Sunday at Providence in Beat 16.

The deceased was the son of old Uncle Monroe Parrish, and was born and reared in the eastern part of the county near the Cove on Coosa River. Several years ago he removed to Maple Springs community, where he lived until his death. "Uncle Bill" was a good man, who held the love and confidence of his fellow-men, and now that he is gone from the walks of life, those who loved him while he was among us will mourn at his departure.

Those attending the party were Misses Payron and Bettie Mae Mae Reynolds, Florie and Inez Harris, Sybil Langston, Rubye Collum, Hattie Smitherman, Messrs Herbert Wright, Leo Langston, and Albert Duffee, also Rev. Buford Lawrence, pastor of the Baptist Church.

After a bountiful luncheon was served we all loaded up on Mr. Wright's truck and motored over to Yellow Leaf Creek, where we attended Baptising services which were conducted by Rev. Lawrence.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the day very much, especially did they enjoy the delicious refreshments which were served throughout the day.

We will close for this time by inviting everyone to atend the box supper at the Jemison school building on Saturday night, August 7 8:00 o'clock. All the girls of the community are requested to be present with a well filled box and the boys with a well filled pocket book, as the proceeds are for the church piano.

Rheumatism Comes From Tiny Pain Demons

Disease Caused by Germs in the Blood.

Medical scientists differ as to the causes of every form of rheumatism, but agree that when caused by a tiny disease germ, the only effective method of treatment, is to attack the disease at its source, and cleanses the blood of its cause.

This is why S. S. S., the greatest known blood purifier is so successful in the treatment of Rheumatism. It is a powerful cleanser of the blood, and will remove the disease germs that cause your Rheumatism, affording relief that is genuine.

S. S. S. is sold by all druggists. Free literature and medical advice can be had by writing to Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

McGill's Autopower Attachment for Ford Cars.

Citizens of Chilton County:—Each and everyone of you that owns a Ford Car needs to see me as quick as possible and let me make you a power plant out of your Ford. It is something you have never seen before. This attachment is fastened on in front of your car and takes the power direct from your crank shaft, therefore you are guaranteed 5 to 12 horsepower from you 22½ H. P. engine.

If anyone who has any kind of belt-driven machinery, such as a wood saw, any kind of feed grinder, thresher, pump, grist mill, corn sheller, or any other form of machinery that you want pulled, I will show you at any time you will call me that my Ford will pull them successfully, and I can make yours do the same thing.

I am also in my Blacksmith shop ready to do any kind of wheel work or horse shoeing. I guarantee to give satisfaction. I am located in front of the county jail. I will say to my patrons that I will be in my shop every day of the week except Tuesday. On Tuesdays I will travel over the county to places out of reach of Clanton. So if you want your Ford Cars to work for you just call me and I will put a set of harness on them and put them to work for you.

Yours for more power,

If you are thinking about purchasing a New Edison, mark this. The New Edison today costs less than 15% over what it did in 1914. Mr. Edison has personally, held prices down by absorbing more than one-half of the increased costs of manufacturing. He may not be able to do this much longer.

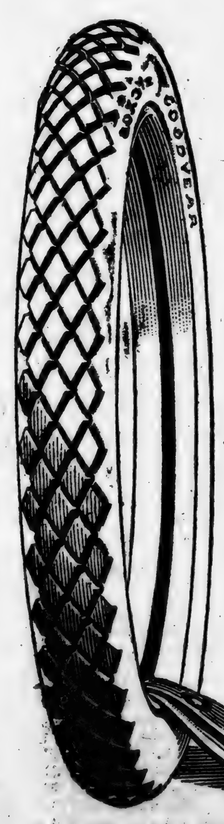
Get Goodyear Value In Tires for Small Cars



Don't be misled by very cheaply priced tires, for tire economy is not a matter of what tires cost originally but of what tire service costs in the end.

True Goodyear mileage and economy are built into Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½- and 31 x 4-inch sizes, in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking one of these sizes, you can equip it with Goodyear Tires at your nearest Service Station.

Go there for the exceptional value in these tires made possible by Goodyear's resources, experience and demonstrated expertness in tire manufacture.

SKELT WILLIAMS BOILS OVER

That irascible individual, John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the Currency, in his annual report goes out of his way to take a fling at Senate Republicans and add his little boost to the campaign for the league of nations. In the report he refers to the disturbed and alarming state of affairs in parts of the old world, for which I am convinced this country's refusal to ratify the peace treaty is largely responsible." It is Mr. William's business to look after his own office, and not inflict his opinions of our foreign relations on the readers of his reports. But now that he has made the statement it would be interesting if he would amplify it.

In what way would America's ratification of the treaty a year ago have brought calm to the old world? Granting for the sake of argument that it would have done so, what would have been the effect in the United States of sending to Europe large sums of money, even huger quantities of food stuffs than have actually been sent, and armies to keep the peace? Would not the price of bringing content to the old world have been the fomenting of a discontent in this country amounting possibly to revolution, and is Mr. Williams willing to pay that price? Did not the delay of eight months after the armistice before the league-treaty was finally negotiated have something to do with postponing the return to normal conditions in Europe? Has Mr. Williams read the recent comments of Col. House on the peace conference wherein he said that peace could have been consumated within a month of the armistice had it not been for Mr. Wilson's insistence that the league covenant should take precedence. These are some of the thoughts that are running through the minds of the American people today, and they are having no difficulty in determining the stand they want their country to take in its relations to affairs in the old world.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL FALL TERM BEGINS SEPT. 1ST

The fall term of the Chilton County High School will begin Wednesday, September 1st, 1920. Students are urged to be in attendance the first day. Those entering late will find it difficult to catch up with the work they shall have missed. Make your plans to be there on the first day. This is important.

All indications are pointing to one of the best years in the history of the school. Three coursese of study will be offered next year, namely, Science, Latin, and Vocational Home Economics. The latter is new and is adapted to the needs and environment of a great number of girls of our school. The course is not compulsory but elective.

The Union-Banner will publish next week a description of the courses of study as prescribed by the State Board of Education for use in County High Schools. And further announcements to those anticipating entrance will also be published. In the meantime Principal S. E. Alverson shall be glad to talk with parents relative to the course of study and welfare of their boys and girls.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN

As the end of Wilsonism approaches, with a return once more of national affairs to Republican control, encouraging reports from business are heard in all parts of the country. Except in textiles, leather, shoes and some luxury lines, there is an increasing prosperity, and in many instances the capacity of plants has been sold for months in advance. The labor situation too, in spite of some bad features, shows an improvement on the whole. There is no doubt that the period from now until March 4th next, when the Republicans will assume the reins of government, will witness a rapid return to normal in the economic life of the nation, and thereafter the prosperity of the country will resume the progress that distinguished it prior to the advent of the Wilson heresies.

THE CHILTON COUNTY S. S. CONVENTION

The Chilton County Sunday School Association will confer special distinction upon every district in the county, which will be represented at the county conventon to be held at Clanton, Ala., on August 23rd, by as many as twenty-five officers and teachers. Such a district will win for itself the honor of being designated as a "Blue Ribbon District."

Delegates of a Blue Ribbon District will be presented with a special badge, which they will wear throughout the convention as a mark attainment.

This Blue Ribbon District contest is statewide. At the annual state convention of the Alabama Sunday School Association to be held at Sheffield in April, an honor roll of the Blue Ribbon winners of every district in each county in the state will be made public.

As a pleasing feature of the annual Sunday School convention of Chilton County, all districts are urged to participate in the effort to identify themselves with the "blue ribbon crowd."

T. J. Dorminey of Stumps Hills was in Clanton Monday at Commissioners Court. He says his community will not make any cotton owing to the destructive hail storm that visited them a few months ago.

MONEY TO LOAN

I have succeeded in arranging with one of the largest Fire Insurance Companies in America, with millions and millions of capital and surplus, for the above amount—and more if needed, to be loaned to farmers of this section, with which to insure their property, including Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton, Coopers, Verbena, and surrounding territory.

The loans will be made in this way: We inspect and estimate your property, including dwelling and contents, barn and contents, smoke house, feed stuff, mules and cattle, and insure you for three fourths value against fire, lightning and wind storms, figuring you up for five years for only four and one-half years premiums, you paying one-fifth cash and the other four-fifths in four annual installments, without interest.

This strictly applies to farmers and good risk. If you will insure your home, we will also carry your tenant houses for you.

If interested, please write, phone or call on me, and I will be glad to consider your application. I also write old line Life Insurance and sell Singer Sewing Machines.

Now listen, people! You do not owe me one cent, neither do you owe my company anything, but you do owe yourself and your wife and children protection against Fires, Lightning, Wind Storms and Death.

THE "HEART OF THE LEAGUE"

Washington, August 9.— Calling upon the people to commit Article Ten of the League of Nations covenant to memory, the Republican Publicity Association issues the following statement:

"It is probable that many of our citizens entertain a more or less vague notion of the influence the league of nations covenant would have upon the welfare of the United States in case it should be accepted by this nation. Some have a visionary idea that world peace somehow would be established and made permanent if America should lend its power to the league. They have made no real attempt to estimate the cost to them or to their country of such a proceeding, and permit their minds to dwell only upon the blessings that would come if war should be no more. Others have a more or less well defined notion that the independence of the United Itates would be compromised in some way if the covenant were adopted, but, they too, would have difficulty in explaining their misgivings were they called upon for a reason.

"Now, it requires no profound study of the 26 sections of the covenant, nor of the many wordy treatises that have been written upon it, to bring home to everyone of our citizens a vivid realization of just what would happen if the United States were bound by its terms today, and what the future would hold for America were its restrictions to be applied to our progress. It is true that every one of those sections contains provisions more or less directly affecting our welfare, but there is one short sentence of the covenant that contains more potential evil for America than all the rest of the document together. That sentence is contained in the famous Article X, and reads as follows: "The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league."

Every man and every woman who desires to cast an intelligent vote at the polls this fall should commit that passage to memory and ponder over it in the weeks that follow before the election. That sentence is the "heart of the league," to use Mr. Wilson's own characterization. Therein lies the pith and substance of the whole contract and a proper understanding of what it means is sufficient education on the much-discussed league to give everyone a comprehension of its dangers. Were the United States a member of the league it would be bound under that provision to go immediately to the assistance of any one of the 45 other member nations, more or less, the moment it was threatened with attack by another country. America would be solemnly bound to "preserve the territorial integrity" of each separate one of that multitude of countries, great and small. That obligation would be distinct from the undertaking entered into by any other member. It would matter not to us whether the other signatures under took to carry out their contracts or not. Whether they or any of them took steps to preserve one of their number from attack, it would be up to the United States to do so individually. The only alternative would be a disgraceful repudiation by Congress and the people of a most sacred covenant.

Now, Poland is one of those 45 member nations. Some of the others are India, China, Czechoslovakia, Haiti, Greece , Hedjaz, Japan, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam, Switzerland and Persia. Poland at this moment is attacked along hundreds of miles of her frontier. Were we in the league our armies even now would be engaged in bitter warfare on the Polish-Russian front, and billions of supplies and hundreds of thousands of American soldiers would be hurrying across the Atlantic. War against many of the other countries is likely to break out at any time, whereupon the United States would be compelled to duplicate its program in Poland. How long would it be before our own fair land would be reduced to the level of many of the nations of Europe—bankrupt in men, money and morale?

SHOULTS

Sunday School seems to be going backward. We wonder why so many have quit; hope next Sunday everybody will be there.

Prof. James Franklin is doing some good work with his singing school here. He had on roll last week 43 pupils. If everyone would do their best this could be one of the finest singing classes in this country. But a few do not seem interested enough to get down to hard work. Prof. Franklin is doing his part and we should do ours.

Mr. Hart Walker entertained a number of his friends last Saturday night, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Willie Hicks. Everyone seemed to greatly enjoy the evening. Many games were played, then watermelons were cut; all seemed to enjoy the melons.

Miss Mae Hamrick of this community was married last Monday to Mr. Ruben Bearden from Maplesville. They will make their future home in Birmingham. Miss Mae was a teacher in our Sunday School, and she will be missed by all. We extend to this couple our best wishes and congratulations.

At this time Mr. Eugene McGee and several in his family are sick with typhoid fever. We are sorry indeed to hear this, and hope they will soon recover.

Mrs. Buford Lawrence from Birmingham is visiting mother and father in law, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence.

Mrs. Oscar Shoults from Selma moved back to this community last Friday. Her friends are glad to have her back again.

Mr. Jeff Ellie and family from Holt, Ala., are visiting relatives and friends here.

THE SACRED HARP MUSICAL ASSOCIATION OF ALABAMA

The B. F. White Sacred Harp Musical Association of Alabama, will convene in Birmingham August 20, 21, and 22. Friday and Saturday sessions will be held in the county court house, and Sunday session will be held in the Fraternal Hall, one block east of the court house. All of the old time singers are cordially invited to attend. Come and be with us and enjoy this grand gathering of singers of the various counties of the state. Don't miss the largest class of singers you were ever in.

CROPS OF ALABAMA STILL SHOW RAPID DEVELOPMENT IN YIELD

A summary of conditions for the past week, issued by F. W. Gist, agricultural statistican for Alabama of the Crop Estimates, shows a continuation of crop development, with slight changes in weather over most of the State. General rain fell on only one day, with temperatures rather cool. Farm work has been about completed even in the northern counties, where apparently crops have been "laid by" at a rather early stage. Corn has continued its growth and still looks well, the only danger coming from its lateness. Cotton is fruiting rapidly and where not receiving too much rain is maturing a goodly volume of bolls. Haying is progressing in the grass lands. No harvesting has begun with either cotton or corn. The weevil situation is threatening; while damage so far is light except in local sections, too much rain will bring heavy loss. Other insects are reported only in local sections. Pastures are beginning to fail in some counties, but livestock are in good condition. Hogs are not up to the standard in numbers, and the markets are quite dull. A summary of reports by districts follows:

North Alabama.

Weather conditions changed from too wet to too dry in most counties reporting. Work nearly completed in all sections. Cotton fruiting rapidly, but some reports of loss by shedding; corn good, but beginning to need rain; haying in fair progress. Some worm damage reported to corn and grass; weevils numerous and doing damage in the northeast and some hill counties; a few reports of red spider and boll worms. Livestock in good shape, but too cheap to sell.

Blackbelt.

Weather generally dry and favorable. Work practically finished. Corn needing rain, but looks good; cotton growth and fruiting fair; hay cutting progressing. Weevil doing material damage in most counties, but retarded in some by dry weather. Worms in only a few places. Pastures beginning to fail, but stock in good condition; market dull.

East Central.

Local rains beneficial in most sections. Work generally completed. All crops look well; early corn made; some shedding in the cotton. Weevil damage not uniform, but noticeable in places. Livestock in good shape.

South Alabama.

Weather generally favorable, but not uniformly so; too much rain in some sections too little in others. Work of cultivation complete. All the crops look good, but harvest will be late. Weevil is now doing heavy damage in some sections, and rain would result in serious loss if too frequent. Cattle in good condition; hogs short in numbers.

FRAZIER-JELKS REVIVAL

The Frazier-Jelks revival services at the court house will continue the rest of this week. We urge the people of the country communities to come to these services and hear this truly wonderful preacher expound the truths of God's Word. The services are held every day at eleven o'clock and every night at eight. With all due respects to those who have held revival meetings in Clanton before (and there have been some mighty good ones, such as Reese and Ray) we are bound to say that Frazier takes the cake. And a fellow who does not enjoy hearing Jelks sing—well he needs something but we don't know what to prescribe.

Rufus C. Calloway Died in France 1918

Body Will Be Returned to Home At Maplesville, and then Brought to Samaria for Final Burial.

Mr. Ralph Calloway of Maplesville was in Clanton Monday and showed us a telegram he had from the Graves Registration Service of the United States Army in New Iork City, stating that the body of his son, 2nd Lieut. Rufus C. Calloway, would arrive in New York City from France about the 15th of this month. Young Calloway died of the flu and pneumonia in France on November 1st, 1918.

Mr. Calloway stated that upon the arrival of the body at his home in Maplesville, it will be brought to Samaria Cemetery near Clanton for final burial. There are many interested friends and relatives of the family throughout the county, who will want to attend the funeral, and Mr. Calloway promised to let us know when he could tell definitely the date of the burial, in order that we might publish the information through the paper and give everybody who desires an opportunity to attend.

This will be, so far as we know, the first and only body of a Chilton County boy yet returned from France.

VOTERS WILL HAVE A CHANCE TO REGISTER

We call the attention of the people of the county to the notice of Registration of voters which is now being published in the paper by the County Registrar, J. R. Parnell. He will be at the court house in Clanton on the 27th and 28th of August, at which time all persons who are entitled to register under the laws of Alabama can register and get ready to vote in the election this fall. This does not apply alone to those who have just reached the voting age, but to every one who may be due and entitled to register in this county to vote.

All concerned should take due notice of this opportunity as it will be the last chance to get right before the November election.

C. M. Foshee of Maplesville was in Clanton Monday on business at the court house in connection with the T. U. Crumpton estate.

SIXTH UNIT NOW AUTHORIZED AT LOCK 12 ON COOSA RIVER

The Alabama Power Company has decided to put in a sixth unit at the large power plant at Lock 12 on the Coosa River, near here. It will take nearly a year to complete the building of the new unit and when complete will give the immense plant an increase in its capacity of 19,500 horsepower and a total capacity of 105,000 horsepower. While the water flow of the Coosa will not permit the operation of the six units at one time, it will be the means of conserving a large amount of coal.

A meeting of the Board of Directors was held at the company offices in Birmingham late Friday, when it was voted to make the addition of the sixth unit. It was decided that it was best to begin the work at once on account of the limited time in the year that such improvements can be made without intereference from high water.

Curt Ingram from Coosa County was in Clanton a few days this week for treatment at the Clanton Infirmary.

America has a whole lot of sympathy for Poland; but is it not about time for America to have a little sympathy for herself?

California is safe for the Republicans this year. Senator Johnson has spoken and taken his coat off for Harding and Coolidge.

Governor Cox tells the country that his mind "runs along" in perfect accord with the mind of the President. That is sufficient.—Huntington (W. Va.) Herald-Dispatch.

If Candidate Cox puts the soft pedal on the Convenant of the League of Nations there will be a loud crescendo and basso profundo from the White House.

Uncle Wash asked us Wednesday morning if we thought it had rained enough to plant turnip seed. Seems to us that it rained enough to drown the darn things.

Henceforth historians will be obliged to discriminate between several armistices—all resulting from the many wars under the League of Nations to "maintain peace."

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania commends Mr. Harding's speech of acceptance because it is a "strong and stirring utterance by an earnest and patriotic man."

Senator Harding refuses to give his assistance to the release of those so-called "citizens" who are imprisoned for obstructing the draft, and giving aid to the enemy. Real patriots will applaud.

Congress did a good job when it cut down the appropriations for State Department cables from Europe over $800,000 since June 30. Too much Europe is nauseating. Give us a large dose of America and note the result.

The new French tariff law has increased import duties materially, "to provide for the same protection as before the war." The nations of Europe are adopting the protection policy. The United States will soon restore protection.

Pierrepont B. Noyes, member of the Interallied Rhineland Commission reports that "France is making no progress." This is contrary to the reports of the agents of the United States Department of Commerce, and the Associated Press reports.

Already France is exercised over the large salaries paid the leading officers of the League of Nations, and the big number of employes in the many departments. It is reported that over one hundred employes already are on the pay-roll. At least 100 persons favor the League.

Having been a country newspaper publisher, the presidency should have no terrors for Senator Harding. He became used to being damned if he does and damned if he don't, and will accept as a matter of course the multitude of people who know better what he should do than he does himself.—Hillsboro (Ore.) Republican.

We are getting alarmed over the declaration by the Alabama Democratic daily papers that Cox smashed all hopes of Harding's success when he turned loose the first of his campaign thunder last Saturday. We know the Republicans are doomed to oblivion when such authorities as the Birmingham News and Age-Herald and the Montgomery Advertiser and Journal say so.

A CORRECTION.

In the report of the July marriages in last week's paper there appeared the names of Mr. B. E. Collom and Miss Lena Watts. We have been informed that this is a mistake, and the names should have been Mr. B. E. Oldham and Miss Lena Watts.

Judge Reynolds and family motored to Birmingham Wednesday. The folks will visit Mrs. J. O. Newell for a few days and the Judge will go from Birmingham to Anniston where he is to make a speech before the State Farmers Union meeting Thursday.

It pays to be a preacher sometimes anyhow. Rev. W. P. Lowery of Thorsby went with the bunch to Orrville last week, and when Mr. Lambert, one of the owners of the West Dallas Farms, became acquainted with him and found that he was a preacher, he made him a present of a very fine young Plymouth Rock rooster. He didn't think enough of any of the other fellows to even give them a "bantam."

When Cox went to see Wilson three weeks ago, he came away with the promise to the country that "Whatever Mr. Wilson has promised you, I shall endeavor to fulfill if elected to the Presidency." But now he assures the country, in his acceptance speech, that he is absolutely unfettered by promises or obligations to anybody. Looks like he is trying to present two faces in his appeal for votes.

Judge and Mrs. Reynolds and W. A. Reynolds went up to Jemison on Sunday to see their father, Rev. Job Reynolds. Judge Reynolds is a very busy man, looking after the duties of the Probate office and various other items of business and keeping his appointments; and W. A. goes up and down the state from one end to the other keeping track of his farms and saw mills. But they never get too busy to neglect their regular visits every week or two to the home of their good old father.

The country new paper office with its odor of printer's ink and the constant call of cold type, where the editor is required to be reporter, editor, publisher, business manager, to look after subscriptions and see to ads and collections, not to mention giving attention as a leading citizen to the affairs of the community, is one of the greatest universities in America. Out of this university have come many of America's greatest men. Senator Harding has gone through the ordeal of this great school with conspicuous success.—The Snyder Co. (Beaver Springs) Pa., News.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION TO MEET NEXT TUESDAY.

The Chilton County Board of Education will meet at Clanton on next Tuesday, Aug. 17th. Any school district in the county that may want to vote a district 3-mill tax this year must present their petition to the Board on or before that date. Any other school matters that the people may want to bring before the Board will be considered at this meeting.

HOUSE - SULLIVAN

Uncle Bill House of Jumbo came into the Banner office Wednesday morning and as he entered the door we perceived he was all dolled up like a young sixteen year old boy, and there was a bashful smile on his happy face that completely betrayed his motives. We knew there was something up and when we had pried around and hemmed him up so close that there was no escape he reached down in the pocket of his new alpaca jacket and produced a paper. Without unfolding it he handed it to the editor saying "If you must know all about it, here it is." Now, what do you reckon it was? Guess. You couldn't guess it in a thousand years. It was a marriage license. The document bore the names of Mr. W. L. House and Miss Mattie Sullivan.

They were married in Clanton on Wednesday.

Now, Uncle Bill don't need any introduction to the people around here. He is a young man of the finest character and most honorable reputation. He has been a citizen of the Jumbo neighborhood for many years.

His bride is a nice young lady of Calera who numbers her friends by the hundreds.

The many friends of the young couple extend congratulations and best wishes. They will live at Calera till Mr. House can get possession of his farm which he has rented out this year.

SHOALS CREEK CHURCH.

A splendid meeting of five days duration was conducted in this church during the fourth week of July by Rev. P. G. Carter of Clanton. The church was well filled at every service and on Thursday the last night of the meeting large numbers could not get into the building. Four were baptized on Friday morning in the beautiful Creek nearby with an impressisve ceremony conducted by Bro. Carter and one was received by letter Considering the brevity of the meeting it was thought to be quite a successful one. The Rev. P. G. Carter will be open for meetings from now until the close of the season.

Save Money—Put Goodyear Tires on Your Small Car

Avoid disappointment with tires made to be sold at sensationally cheap prices by using Goodyear Tires built to deliver maximum mileage at minimum cost.

The high relative value built into Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½-, and 31 x 4-inch sizes, results from the application of Goodyear experience and care to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

Such facts explain why more cars, using these sizes, were factory-equipped last year with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

If you drive a Ford, Chevrolet, Maxwell or Dort, take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy true Goodyear mileage and economy; equip your car with Goodyear Tires and Heavy Tourist Tubes at our nearest Service Station.

30 x 3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50

30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50

WILL PRAISE DRECO AS LONG AS I LIVE

The Lord Knows Dreco has done me More good than anything I ever took," says Phoenix City Lady.

"As long as I live I'll praise this grand medicine Dreco and the Lord knows it has done me mor egood than any medicine I ever took" are the words of Mrs. Carrie Parrish of 13th Street, Phoenix City, Ala.

"I used to have to get up during the night every half hour, sometimes every fifteen minutes, to relieve my bladder and kidneys... One bottle of Dreco helped me so that I only get up twice during the whole night. My bowels also move regularly, and my liver acts well. Words fail to express my gratitude to this grand medicine... I'll praise it as long as I live, and will keep it in my house as long as I have the money to buy it. Any one wanting to know more about it can call on me at my home and I'll tell them more."

Dreco is a vegetable remedy which acts on the kidneys and aids these important organs to perform their duty of straining the poisons from the blood. If the kidneys fail in their work we may have rhumatism, catarrh, eczema, boils, pimples, sallow complexion, or a dozen other troubles. Dreco aids kidneys to keep on doing their work as aNture intends.

All druggists now sell Dreco, and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Co.

A FAMILY REUNION.

A very happy week has just been spent by the entire Holley family consisting of four brothers and three sisters and their famillies, namely: Mr. D. M. Holley and daughter, Alice, of Hico, La., Mrs. J. W. Cook, and her daughter, Jessie, of Stanton, Mrs. M. B. Williams and son Lloyd, and three daughters, Marguerite and Elaine of Riderwood, and Mrs. Ruby Bell of Tuscaloosa, Mr. W. E. Holley of Alabama City, Mr. L. F. Hester and family, including Mr. L. D. Hester and wife, and Mr. Jim Collins and wife of Lomax, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley and family of Clanton, and Mr. J. L. Holley and son Steve, of Clanton. Other relatives of the family were Mrs. T. M. Dunlap and son Thomas, of Saginaw, Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam Popwell and family, including Mr. and Mrs. Perry Littlejohn of Thorsby, Mr. Bob Wilkins and daughter and mother of Billingsley.

And now thinking of all these having been together, we hardly know how to tell of the good times we have had. The entire family of brothers and sisters met at Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley's residence on Monday and spent the day laughing and talking and having a big time, and then on Wednesday they all spent the day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Holley, which was another great event of the week. On Thursday they all spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hester. This was a day to be remembered by all because it was spent so joyfully. The afternoon was spent in making snapshots. On Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock a fine sermon was preached by Rev. W. E. Holley, which was so much enjoyed by all present.

Now last but not least of all days of the week spent together was Sunday, Aug. 8, when each and everyone assembled back at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley, and on this day a bountiful dinner was served out in the grove. This big dinner was enjoyed by the forty present, but about the time everyody was in a big way of eating a shower of rain came along and disturbed us. It caused all the more excitement and fun to see everyone grabbing plates of eats and scrambling for a shelter. The dinner was finished just the same, and some said they wished they could have the pleasure of enjoying such a dinner every day.

Then in the afternoon about half a dozen very fine watermelons were cut and enjoyed to the full capacity of all. The rest of the afternoon was spent in singing, laughing, talking, and making snapshoots.

At a late hour each departed for their respective homes. This was an hour of sadness; sad because they all knew the time had come for those to part who were held so dear to each other. Glad because if they never have the pleasure of another reunion they will always remember the happy hour spent together at this one and be as bright to them as the shining star in the heavens.

"Felt Like Eating"

Man and Wife, All Run-Down from Farm Work, Were Greatly Helped by Ziron.

"MY WIFE and I, after a hard spring on the farm, were tired and run-down," says Mr. E. B. Mulkey, of Route 1, Acworth, Ga. "We neither felt well. I knew my blood was bad, as I had little boils on the back of my neck.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such a matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Ziron is a safe, reliable, tonic medicine, good for men, women and children, when an iron tonic is indicated. It is easy to take and contains no habit-forming drugs.

Study Club Meets.

Mrs. F. B. Collier was the charming hostess to the Study Club on Friday afternoon at the attractive home of Mrs. Wade. Quantities of summer flowers and ferns added to the attractiveness of the rooms. A very interesting program on Shakespearian study was furnished. Paper, "Psychological Study ofPetruchio," by Mrs. Hester. Reading, Act I, "Taming of the Shrew," by Club Members. Discussion led by Mrs. Heard. Paper, "The Tale of Arcadia," Mrs. Broadhead. Current Events, Leader, Mrs. Collier. At the conclusion of the program the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Page, served a delicious salad plate, and afterwards the guests were invited into the dining room where ice-cold watermelon was served.

Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Miss Kathleen, Frank, Mrs. Amzi Gowan and children of Brewton, Mrs. Watts Moore and children leave for St. Clair Springs on Thursday for a stay of three weeks. They will be joined later by Dr. Gowan and Mr. Moore.

Miss Roberta Curry left Tuesday for Asheville, N. C., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Jones.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The revival services now being conducted at the Court House are gaining in interest and power. Large crowds have attended nearly all of the services and twenty-one have been added to the membership of the church up to the time of going to press. Ten to be baptized and eleven by letter. The service for men only on last Sunday afternoon, when in spite of the rain the Court House was more than two-thirds full, will be remembered for a long time to come, as the evangelist with pathos and eloquence appealed to the men for more consecrated lives, a greater spirit of brotherhood, and a stronger stand for Christianity in the community. Almost every man in the building came to join hands with the evangelist expressing their willingness and desires for these things.

The services will continue throughout the rest of this week, closing on next Sunday night. Services will be held each day, morning and night at 11 and 8 o'clock. The ordinance of Baptism will be observed at Mims' Pond on next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

"Sunshine Jelks" is doing some fine work with the young people who enjoy his stories, fun and sunshine. The people of the community are urged to send their children to the meeting held for them at 7 P. M. conducted by Mr. Jelks, as they may learn something that will be of benefit to them throughout the rest of their life.

If you are a Baptist living in this town, we invite you to place your letter in this church, and thus help to make it the great central church as it should be of the entire county. While living in Clanton it is your duty to unite with this church.

We heartly and cordially invite everybody to these services, and other services of the church from time to time.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

LOMAX NEWS.

Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, all visited at Mr. W. T. Wells's Sunday afternoon.

Misses Lillie Walker and Miss Carrie Osborne attended preaching at Jackson's Chapel Sunday.

Mr. Tommie Hand and wife spent last Wednesday night with Mr. W. T. Wells family.

Mrs. Rufus Littlejohn visited Mrs. Walker Saturday evening.

Miss Essie Lee Wells is spending a few days with her sister this week, Mrs. Hand of Clanton.

The people in this community were badly shocked when the news was spread that Mrs. Anner Price was killed by a train. It was one of the worst accidents that has happened in Lomax in a long time.

Rev. A. C. Wells filled his regular appointment at Jacksons Chapel on Sunday. Uncle Dock is getting old, but he can deliver some very good sermons yet.

Mr. Clyde Henley visited homefolks Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Bennie Wells and family attended the singing at Cane Creek Sunday and reported some very good singing.

Well, we have had a good rain and I think the people here are feeling better and are all in smiles one more time.

Embroidery Club Entertained.

Mrs. F. B. Collier was hostess to the Embroidery Club on last Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. J. Q. Wade. The rooms were made very attractive with potted plants and garden flowers. Dainty refreshments were served late in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fox have returned from Huntsville.

Mrs. Stanfield and daughrter, Miss Alice, have returned home ofter a delightful visit to Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pitts of Shorters are here visiting the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds.

Mrs. Earl Gowan and children have returned home after an extended visit to Hot Springs, Ark. They were accompanied by Dr. Gowan's mother. She will spend some time in Kosciusco Miss., before returning to Clanton.

Mrs. Arthur Johnson and children are visiting her parents in Owensville, Indiana.

Mr. Willis Lowe has returned from a cruise around Cuba with the American Bluejackets, in which the following ports were made: Havana, Santiago de Cuba, and Guantanamo Bay.

A FAMILY REUNION.

A very happy week has just been spent by the entire Holley family consisting of four brothers and three sisters and their famillies, namely: Mr. D. M. Holley and daughter, Alice, of Hico, La., Mrs. J. W. Cook, and her daughter, Jessie, of Stanton, Mrs. M. B. Williams and son Lloyd, and three daughters, Marguerite and Elaine of Riderwood, and Mrs. Ruby Bell of Tuscaloosa, Mr. W. E. Holley of Alabama City, Mr. L. F. Hester and family, including Mr. L. D. Hester and wife, and Mr. Jim Collins and wife of Lomax, and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley and family of Clanton, and Mr. J. L. Holley and son Steve, of Clanton. Other relatives of the family were Mrs. T. M. Dunlap and son Thomas, of Saginaw, Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam Popwell and family, including Mr. and Mrs. Perry Littlejohn of Thorsby, Mr. Bob Wilkins and daughter and mother of Billingsley.

And now thinking of all these having been together, we hardly know how to tell of the good times we have had. The entire family of brothers and sisters met at Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley's residence on Monday and spent the day laughing and talking and having a big time, and then on Wednesday they all spent the day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Holley, which was another great event of the week. On Thursday they all spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hester. This was a day to be remembered by all because it was spent so joyfully. The afternoon was spent in making snapshots. On Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock a fine sermon was preached by Rev. W. E. Holley, which was so much enjoyed by all present.

Now last but not least of all days of the week spent together was Sunday, Aug. 8, when each and everyone assembled back at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Holley, and on this day a bountiful dinner was served out in the grove. This big dinner was enjoyed by the forty present, but about the time everyody was in a big way of eating a shower of rain came along and disturbed us. It caused all the more excitement and fun to see everyone grabbing plates of eats and scrambling for a shelter. The dinner was finished just the same, and some said they wished they could have the pleasure of enjoying such a dinner every day.

Then in the afternoon about half a dozen very fine watermelons were cut and enjoyed to the full capacity of all. The rest of the afternoon was spent in singing, laughing, talking, and making snapshoots.

At a late hour each departed for their respective homes. This was an hour of sadness; sad because they all knew the time had come for those to part who were held so dear to each other. Glad because if they never have the pleasure of another reunion they will always remember the happy hour spent together at this one and be as bright to them as the shining star in the heavens.

A Tonic For Women

"I was hardly able to drag, I was so weakened," writes Mrs. W. F. Ray, of Easley, S. C. "The doctor treated me for about two months, still I didn't get any better. I had a large family and felt I surely must do something to enable me to take care of my little ones. I had heard of

"Felt Like Eating"

Man and Wife, All Run-Down from Farm Work, Were Greatly Helped by Ziron.

"MY WIFE and I, after a hard spring on the farm, were tired and run-down," says Mr. E. B. Mulkey, of Route 1, Acworth, Ga. "We neither felt well. I knew my blood was bad, as I had little boils on the back of my neck.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such a matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Ziron is a safe, reliable, tonic medicine, good for men, women and children, when an iron tonic is indicated. It is easy to take and contains no habit-forming drugs.

Ask your druggist or dealer.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Study Club Meets.

Mrs. F. B. Collier was the charming hostess to the Study Club on Friday afternoon at the attractive home of Mrs. Wade. Quantities of summer flowers and ferns added to the attractiveness of the rooms. A very interesting program on Shakespearian study was furnished. Paper, "Psychological Study ofPetruchio," by Mrs. Hester. Reading, Act I, "Taming of the Shrew," by Club Members. Discussion led by Mrs. Heard. Paper, "The Tale of Arcadia," Mrs. Broadhead. Current Events, Loader, Mrs. Collier. At the conclusion of the program the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Page, served a delicious salad plate, and afterwards the guests were invited into the dining room where icecold watermelon was served.

Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Miss Kathleen, Frank, Mrs. Amzi Gowan and children of Brewton, Mrs. Watts Moore and children leave for St. Clair Springs on Thursday for a stay of three weeks. They will be joined later by Dr. Gowan and Mr. Moore.

Miss Roberta Curry left Tuesday for Asheville, N. C., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Jones.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The revival services now being conducted at the Court House are gaining in interest and power. Large crowds have attended nearly all of the services and twenty-one have been added to the membership of the church up to the time of going to press. Ten to be baptized and eleven by letter. The service for men only on last Sunday afternoon, when in spite of the rain the Court House was more than two-thirds full, will be remembered for a long time to come, as the evangelist with pathos and eloquence appealed to the men for more consecrated lives, a greater spirit of brotherhood, and a stronger stand for Christianity in the community. Almost every man in the building came to join hands with the evangelist expressing their willingness and desires for these things.

The services will continue throughout the rest of this week, closing on next Sunday night. Services will be held each day, morning and night at 11 and 8 o'clock. The ordinance of Baptism will be observed at Mims' Pond on next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

"Sunshine Jelks" is doing some fine work with the young people who enjoy his stories, fun and sunshine. The people of the community are urged to send their children to the meeting held for them at 7 P. M. conducted by Mr. Jelks, as they may learn something that will be of benefit to them throughout the rest of their life.

If you are a Baptist living in this town, we invite you to place your letter in this church, and thus help to make it the great central church as it should be of the entire county. While living in Clanton it is your duty to unite with this church.

We heartly and cordially invite everybody to these services, and other services of the church from time to time.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

LOMAX NEWS.

Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, all visited at Mr. W. T. Wells's Sunday afternoon.

Misses Lillie Walker and Miss Carrie Osborne attended preaching at Jackson's Chapel Sunday.

Mr. Tommie Hand and wife spent last Wednesday night with Mr. W. T. Wells family.

Mrs. Rufus Littlejohn visited Mrs. Walker Saturday evening.

Miss Essie Lee Wells is spending a few days with her sister this week, Mrs. Hand of Clanton.

The people in this community were badly shocked when the news was spread that Mrs. Anner Price was killed by a train. It was one of the worst accidents that has happened in Lomax in a long time.

Rev. A. C. Wells filled his regular appointment at Jacksons Chapel on Sunday. Uncle Dock is getting old, but he can deliver some very good sermons yet.

Mr. Clyde Henley visited homefolks Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Bennie Wells and family attended the singing at Cane Creek Sunday and reported some very good singing.

Well, we have had a good rain and I think the people here are feeling better and are all in smiles one more time.

Embroidery Club Entertained.

Mrs. F. B. Collier was hostess to the Embroidery Club on last Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. J. Q. Wade. The rooms were made very attractive with potted plants and garden flowers. Dainty refreshments were served late in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fox have returned from Huntsville.

Mrs. Stanfield and daughrter, Miss Alice, have returned home ofter a delightful visit to Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pitts of Shorters are here visiting the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds.

Mrs. Earl Gowan and children have returned home after an extended visit to Hot Springs, Ark. They were accompanied by Dr. Gowan's mother. She will spend some time in Kosciusco Miss., before returning to Clanton.

Mrs. Arthur Johnson and children are visiting her parents in Owensville, Indiana.

Mr. Willis Lowe has returned from a cruise around Cuba with the American Bluejackets, in which the following ports were made: Havana, Santiago de Cuba, and Guantanamo Bay.

EX-SERVICE MEN CAN GET HELP FROM Y. M. C. A.

Attention of ex-service men is called to the fact that if they desire assistance of the Y. M. C. A. educational fund, they should file application at once with the local chairman, Jno. A. Thomas, or F. B. Collier, the Secretary.

Chilton County has available about $500 to be awarded to ex-service men. This fund is not available for collegiate courses, but is available for public school, high school or business courses. The local committee believes a business course of the Chilton Co. High School or the Thorsby Institute at Thorsby would prove beneficial to a larger number of ex-service men and hence recommends such courses.

Those who desire to avail themselves of any part of the fund should make application at once. All applications must be filed with the local secretary, F. B. Collier, not later than August 15, 1920, at which time the committee will make the awards. No applicant may be allowed more than $200, and the committee would like to limit the awards to between $50 and $100, so that the fund may be used in assisting as large a number of ex-service men as possible.

F. B. COLLIER, Secretary.

DIDN'T CARE WHAT HAPPENED

"I became a physical wreck from stomach trouble and was a fit subject only for the operating table or graveyard. Being discouraged I gave way to drink, which made things only worse. I got so I didn't care what happened, and wanted to die. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy has cured me of everything. Anm now in fine condition and feel 25 years younger." It is a simple, harmless, preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Sold by Alred Drug Co., Clanton, Ala., and all good druggists.

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County was in regular session on Monday and Tuesday. All the members were on hand taking care of their duties.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

REV. E. A. NORRIS ON THE SINGING RESOLUTION

Verbena, Ala., August 16, 1920.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have read the resolution that was passed at the singing convention in Clanton, and as I have taken the stand for music that I have will be glad to express my feelings in regard to the matter.

For the past year I have made a great many talks and preached on music and the relations it bears to other forms of worship, and I have been heartily enthused. If those resolutions are correct and the proper way to do, then all these years I have had the wrong conception of praising God in song service. My book teachces me that from a corrupt heart cannot come praises to God, James 3:11. From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, Matt. 12:34.

Then if the churches set apart a day for the purpose of praising God in song service. My book teaches me able to ask Gods blessing and direction and if they cannot do that then the churches have surrendered their rights to the world and lost the victory. If God be God serve him, if mammon serve him, Matt 6:24. The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and violence taketh it by force, Matt. 11:12.

Then if the church set apart a day for praising God in song, then the leadership should be kept in the hands of the church, for if the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch, Matt 15:14. In the prophet's days when the leaders followed God they won, when they followed sin they fell. When our forefathers spilt their blood for liberty, when they were going into a battle they wanted the men to ask God's guiding hand—men whom they thought had power with God, Genisis 32:28. So if song service is for a display of talent, voice culture or theory, then it does not matter who leads, the unconverted will do as well as the converted. If these days are set apart for praising God in song as commanded in Collosians 3:16, let the words of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom and admonishing one another in poems and hymns and spiritual songs singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord; then an ungodly man cannot do this and any that have risen to maturity and have not been regenerated are ungodly. If we say that we will give a day to praise God in song and then surrender it to ungodly men as leaders we have betrayed the trust which He committed to us. Render to Caesar the things that be Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's, Luke 20:25. Then if the teaching and leading forces belong to the church keep it in the church and if it belongs to the ungodly surrender it to whom it belongs.

I feel that we are more than glad to have their co-operation as singers but not as leaders.

Hoping that this may be read as a defense to the sacred causes for which Christ gave His life.

E. A. NORRIS.

EX-SERVICE MEN MAY RECEIVE VICTORY MEDAL FROM THE U.S.

The majority of ex-service men and relatives of deceased soldiers in the late world war are unaware of the special work of the war department to help them obtain the Victory Medal, due them, so we are asked to publish this information to them.

Alabama men should apply to the Army Recruiting Station, Birmingham, Ala., by writing to Victory Medal Officer, care of Army Recruiting Station, or better still to apply in person with their discharge.

Mr. Albert Grant and wife of Birmingham spent last week in Clanton visiting his brother, Mr. J. M. Grant. Mr. Grant is a very congenial fellow, as would be expected by those who know his famous brother, Jim. He holds a responsible position in the Safety Department of the T. C. I. Co., at their steel plant.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

To be Held in School District Number Thirteen of Chilton County, Ala.

Notice is hereby given that a special election will be held at Enterprise School House in Enterprise School District No. 13 of Chilton County, Alabama, on the 20th day of September, 1920, to determine whether or not a special district tax of thirty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property shall be levied and collected annually on the taxable property of said district for the present tax year and continuing for a period of ten years. Said levy is proposed to be made for public school purposes within said district. The boundary of said District Thirteen is as follows: Beginning at the north west corner of the SW¼ of Section 35, Township 21, Range 14, thence east three miles to the north east corner of the SE¼ of Section 31, Township 21, Range 15, thence south three-fourths mile to the north west corner of the SW¼ of the NW¼ of Section 5, Township 20, Range 15, thence east one-fourth mile to the north east corner of the SW¼ of the NW¼ of Section 5, Township 20 Range 15, thence south three-fourths mile to the south east corner of the SW¼ of the SW¼ of Section 5. Township 20, Range 15, thence west one-fourth mile to the south west corner of Section 5, Township 20, Range 15, thence south two miles to the south east corner of Section 18, Township 20, Range 15, thence west two and three-fourths miles to the south west corner of the SE¼ of the SW¼ of Section 14, Township 20, Range 14, thence north two miles to the north east corner of the NW¼ of the NW¼ of Section 11, Township 20, Range 14, thence west one-fourth mile to the south west corner of Section 2, Township 20, Range 14, thence north one and one-half miles to point of beginning.

This the 19th day of August, 1920.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The revival services at this church proved to be quite successful in every way. Large audiences attended every service, the courthouse being well filled at night. Evangelist W. F. Frazier did some of the finest preaching ever given or delivered in Clanton by visiting evangelists. The singing by Bro. James W. Jelks was superb and much appreciated by those who heard it. He knows how to sing, and how to smile. Sixteen were added to the church by baptism and fourteen by letter, making a total of thirty additions to the membership for the meeting, and a total of thirty-four during the present year.

Nearly $600 was contributed for the meeting to cover the cost of the meeting, and to purchase the much needed song books of the church. The Methodist and other people of the town cooperated in a fine spirit, for which we express our sincere thanks, and trust it will be the beginning of a better friendship and cooperation for the great cause of Christianity to exist between the different denominations.

We were very fortunate in having Miss Beverly Hester, the talented musician of Clanton, to play, who thus added much to the success of the song service and the meeting. The use of the courthouse was greatly appreciated, without which we could not have accommodated the large crowds that came to hear the preaching and singing.

With the growing interest of the people, the outlook for the new church building, the future prospects of the church are very bright. As soon as bids are received and agreed upon the contract will be let for the building, and work begun as soon thereafter as possible.

The regular services will be held next Sunday: Sunday School at 10 a.m.; Preaching at 11 a.m.; Junior B.Y.P.U. at 4 p.m.; Preaching at 7 p.m. All services will be held in the courthouse next Sunday.

If you are a Baptist living in this community come and join our fellowship and help to make this the great central church of the county.

Everyone cordially invited to these services. P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

NOTICE—ODD FELLOWS MEET

There will be an Odd Fellows Celebration and Picnic of the Energy Lodge No. 587, at Enterprise, five miles west of Cooper, on Thursday, August 26th. Sermon by Rev. C.A. Taylor and speaking by other well known speakers. Everybody is cordially invited to come, especially Odd Fellows. Dinner will be served, but all are requested to bring dinner in order that we will have plenty. Come out and be with us. We feel sure you will enjoy yourselves.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL ANTICIPATES A SPLENDID YEAR

The largest first day attendance in the history of the school is anticipated when the Chilton County High School opens Wednesday, September 1st. All new students and students from other high schools are expected to present their certificates of graduation and promotion from the school they last attended.

On Thursday and Friday, August 26th and 27th a special examination will be held at the County High School Building in Clanton, for those who have completed seventh grade this summer, and for those who were unable to take the regular seventh grade examination last spring, and those who failed on the examination in not more than two subjects.

This examination will begin promptly at nine o'clock, August 26th.

Parents, your attention is called to the fact that the State Board of Education has this year added a new course of study to the county high school curriculum, namely Vocational Home Economics. This course is offered in addition to the Latin and Science courses already offered. The first year of the new Home Economics course will be begun this fall. Girls taking this course will devote about one-third of their time to this subject through their high school training period. For further particulars and details see Principal S. E. Alverson before the opening.

The first day's work will be devoted entirely to the classification of students and the assignment of lessons. All fees are due the day of entrance.

The Instructors of the Chilton County High School for next year are all college graduates and have had previous teaching experience. The service of these has been secured through liberal increase in the funds by the County Board of Education and the public spirited people of Clanton.

Boys and girls, enter the first day if possible and thus be able to pursue your course of study with ease and pleasure.

REESE AT JEMISON

Dr. E. G. Hyman calls our attention to the fact that the Rev. T. O. Reese will begin his revival services at Jemison on next Sunday, August 22. Many people in Clanton and Chilton County will remember this famous preacher who conducted a revival here last year and will no doubt many of them welcome the opportunity of hearing him this time at Jemison.

Dr. Hyman says that the Jemison church especially invites the people of other towns and communities to attend the meetings.

DRASTIC ACTION NECESSARY

Says Some Publishers Have Made No Effort to Fulfill Contract With the State.

Montgomery.—Legal proceedings will be brought against the bondsmen of all publishers under contract to furnish school books to the state of Alabama, who have not by September 1, 1920, delivered an adequate supply of their publications to the state depository at Birmingham. In making this announcement State Superintendent of Education John W. Abercrombie stated "it is my purpose to request the governor to direct the attorney general to institute such proceedings." Mr. Abercrombie stated he regrets the necessity of being compelled to make such an announcement, but the need of school books with the 1920-21 school session about to begin is so pressing, that in his opinion, extraordinary action is necessary in order to conserve the interest of the children of the state. He states that he is receiving almost daily complaints from local school book depositories and appeals from county superintendents of schools that there are not enough text books to meet the needs of the coming session, and asking him for assistance. It is also stated by Mr. Abercrombie that orders for an adequate supply of books were placed with publishers in April of the present year, but that some of the publishers have made no effort whatever to fulfill the obligations of their contract with the state.

Census of Roanoke Schools.

Roanoke.—The taking of the school census for the Roanoke school district has just been completed, showing 1,333 children of school age. Of this number 462 are colored. In connection with the school census the population of the town was recorded at the same time. It totals 4,394. This shows an increase over the federal census of ten years ago of 116.53 per cent. The count made by the federal census for this year has not yet been announced.

Charge Tombstone Theft.

Dothan.—Rev. J. E. Wells, a holiness preacher, was given a hearing in justice court on a charge of stealing a tombstone, the charge being brought by Charlie Hall, Sr., who lives south of Dothan. He was put under a $300 bond to await the action of the grand jury. This is the second case of tombstone stealing reported in this county this year, and itis claimed that the stones are reworked and afterwards sold.

Lansdowville's mayor was first to send word that the committee to solicit funds had been appointed.

Agricultural Commissioners to Meet.

Montgomery.—Based on information he has received to the effect that prices far below the cost of production will be offered farmers of the South this season for cotton seed and peanuts, Miles C. Allgood, commissioner of agriculture for Alabama, has wired commissioners of all Southern states, urging a conference at Memphis, Tenn., August 30, to discuss the situation. Commissioner Allgood stated that he had been reliably informed that cotton seed and peanut dealers throughout the South are planning to offer $30 per ton for cottonseed, which was quoted at $60 to $80 a year ago and four cents per pound for peanuts against 12 cents in 1919.

Sheriff Ragland declares he made Sanders no such promise and that Sanders knew when he voluntarily confessed to his part in the bank robbery and implicated others he would be tried before a jury and sentenced by the court. Sheriff Ragland states that he did tell Sanders that after the latter had voluntarily made a confession that he would assist him to get a parole.

Output of Coal Increases.

Birmingham.—Statistics being sent in as to coal production for the week ending August 7 show material increase in comparison with the previous week, the total to be around 318,000 to 320,000 tons. The increase in the production is accounted for in the fact that iron and steel concerns of the district have been increasing their production right along. The domestic coal production is picking up some every day but the normal output has not yet been reached. For the week ending August 5, 1919, the coal production was 218,300 tons, when general conditions in the district were more favorable than at present.

Will Women Seek Registration?

Montgomery.—Whether or not women are to be permitted to register in Jefferson county prior to the November general election, was the interesting question presented to the attorney general by M. E. Morris, Jefferson county registrar. The fact that his books will not be closed until 60 days prior to the holding of the general election, Mr. Morris states warrants his belief that a large number of women will demand that he allow them to register in the event that the woman suffrage constitutional amendment is ratified, an eventually which he believes is likely.

The determination of the Bolshevists to press onward to Warsaw has shown itself at various points along the battle line, there being hand-to-hand fighting in many instances. The Poles savagely defended their positions, and contested every foot of ground given up to the invaders.

The French government is sending a note to the United States expressing pleasure that the French and American views on the Russo-Polish situation are "in complete accord," it is learned in Paris.

Poland in an official proclamation to the world solemnly warns the world that if she is overthrown by the Russian Bolsheviki her fall will be due not only to overbearing might, but to the indiference of a world which calls itself democratic.

Plans for the establishment of three lines of steamers for United States ports from Brazilian ports have been approved by the directors of the Brazilian Lloyds. Ten of the largest and best vessels owned by the company will be employed and will be withdrawn from the Brazilian - European trade. Monthly sailings will be maintained and the first ship will leave Rio Janeiro for New York soon.

Francisco Villa has surrendered. After years of banditry and defiance of oth the Mexican and the United States government, the famous outlaw has delivered himself into the power of the federals and drowned his sorrows in a bottle of cognac.

News by way of London says the outer forts of Warsaw have been under bombardment since August 6, and the Poles are returning the Bolshevik fire.

The Moscow government has notified the British government that it has been arranged for the Polish delegates to cross the Russian front on the evening of August 9, and for armistice and peace negotiations to begin at Minsk August 11.

Poland, its back to the wall in its fight against Soviet Russia, will ask immediate material aid of the United States, it is announced by Prince Ludormirski, the Polish minister. More than that, it will seek to develop precisely what the United States meant by the announcement in its note to the Italian government that it would employ "all available means" to maintain a free Poland.

Extension until September 21 of the order requiring railroads east of the Mississippi to give priority to coal mines in the assignment of cars is announced by the interstate commerce commission.

Accusing members of the Tennessee legislature of repudiating their promises to vote for the woman suffrage amendment, the headquarters of the National Woman's party in Washington admitted recently that "the majority for ratification of the suffrage amendment in Tennessee has disappeared."

There appears to be no likelihood of any change in the war department's order for the salvaging of Camp Gordon and the removal of troops stationed there to Camp Jackson, S. C. The secretary says that, although he is perfectly willing to hear arguments from Atlanta pepole, he sees little prospect of retaining Camp Gordon because congress provided for only eight camps out of sixteen, and Camp Gordon will have to go.

Government officials in Washington are awaiting with keen interest the outcome of the Lloyd-George-Millerand conference at Hythe and confirmation of the report made public by the Polish legation to the effect that General Haller's army, to the north of Warsaw, had taken the offensive against the Bolshevists, and is making satisfactory headway.

Representatives of Southern cotton exchanges conferred with the shipping board in an effort to obtain a higher valuation for cotton shipments on government vessels in the event of loss and injury. At present, it is stated that $100 is the highest valuation permitted and shippers are seeking to value bales of cotton as high as $250.

Stated briefly, the position of the United States government anent the Polish situation stands as favoring the preservation of the political independence and territorial integrity of Poland and as opposing any dismemberment of Russia. The outlines of this policy were set forth in a note dispatched by Secretary Colby to the Italian ambassador.

In discussing the Russo-Polish situation resulting from the sweep of the Soviet armies into Poland, Secretary Colby takes occasion to reiterate the previously expressed sympathy of the United States government for the Russian people as well as the government's previously announced decision not to recognize the Soviet regime which is characterized as a non-representative government whose only sanction is brutal force.

Diplomats generally regard the note anent Poland as having a three-fold purpose, to-wit: First, the extension of moral support to the Polish government and people; second, an appeal to the masses in Russia to throw off the Bolsheviki yoke and establish a constitutional government; third, the influence of other nations to refrain from recognition of the Soviet regime.

The Republican national committee announces that Southern headquarters will be opened in Washington with Representative Slemp of Virginia in charge.

It is stated that President Wilson is alarmed over the Russian sweep, but dislikes to take steps inimical to the "people of Russia."

It is announced that of the steamship lines to be established by the Brazilian Lloyds between Brazil and the United States, one line will consist of three express steamers from Rio Janeiro to New York; the second will be made up of four steamers, which will call at Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Brazilian ports and New York, and the ships of the third will play between Brazilian ports and Havana and New Orleans.

The railway labor board's decision awarding an annual wage increase of thirty million dollars to employees of the American Express company, will be submitted to the eight thousand men affected in a referendum with a recommendation that the award be accepted, by the officials of the four unions included in the decision. The award amounts to an increase to 16 cents an hour for each employee. The decision is retroactive to May 1, 1920. Four unions are affected—the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees; the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Chauffeurs Local No. 720 of Chicago; the Order of Railway Expressmen.

HARDING SHOWS GOOD QUALITIES

Has Already Demonstrated Fitness for High Position He Is to Occupy.

TRYING DAYS WELL PASSED

Period Between Nomination and Notification Has Made It Plain the Republicans Have Wisely Chosen Their Standard Bearer.

In the weeks between his nomination and notification a candidate for president passes through one of the most trying periods of his campaign.

He is bombarded with questions whose authors demand hair-trigger answers, notwithstanding the fact that intelligent response may require thorough investigation and the most careful consideration.

He is pestered by self-discovered original boomers, who seek to cash in without delay at their own valuation of their services.

He is compelled to school himself in a new attitude toward enthusiastic strangers, who intend their attentions kindly but whose understanding of the calls made on a candidate are somewhat vague.

All the time he must confer with party leaders, keep up his correspondence and give serious thought to the discussion of political problems in which for three and a half months he must engage.

The man who can preserve his poise while he is adapting himself to the requirements of such a situation, who can do the hard work necessitated by the unending calls made on him, who can maintain his good nature and courtesy unimpaired and not slop over, shows good judgment, tact and capacity for the easy transaction of large affairs. He demonstrates that he can meet emergencies as they arise and surmount difficulties as they present themselves. He shows his ability to get on with other men.

The exhibition of desirable personal qualities given by Senator Harding since his nomination confirms and strengthens the admirable impression his record of achievement has made on men of understanding who demand that the government of the United States shall be a government of laws and not a dictatorship.

A Winning Ticket.

By the selection of Warren G. Harding as the candidate of the Republican convention for the presidency and Calvin Coolidge for vice president, the convention at Chicago reached a happy solution of the difficulties that confronted it. The essence of statesmanship is compromise. It became obvious as the balloting went on that of the leading candidates none could secure a majority. Senator Harding proved acceptable to many who had originally preferred another. He will prove equally acceptable to the party as a whole and to the country. He will rally Republicans of all shades of opinion to devotion to a common cause. Governor Coolidge has amply proved his political courage and his ability.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

On a Dangerous Platform.

On a weak and dangerous platform the Democrats have nominated an essentially unsafe man. In passing Mr. Davis by, the Democrats threw away the chance to nominate their most available candidate. History thus repeated itself. Mr. Cox is far inferior in ability and in reputation either to Mr. McAdoo or to Mr. Davis. What comparison does he bear with the Republican candidate? As against a man of so unexceptionable a record and of such high standing as Senator Harding, there cannot be a moment's hesitation in the choice. The worst of it for the Democratic party is no doubt that on the whole it is the kind of nomination that was to be expected from a demoralized Democratic party.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Harding Representative American.

Time will prove the wisdom of the Republican national convention in selecting Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio as the nominee for president of the United States. He is a representative American and as such is a candidate of whom his party may be proud. The victor in a clean fight for the highest honor conferred by political parties, he is entitled to the earnest support of all factions represented in that great convention.—Salt Lake Herald.

In His Own Estimation.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says the Republicans have not learned anything since 1913. It forgets that the school teacher in the White House has been "learnin'" the whole world.

IMPROVED HIGHWAYS

ADAMANT HIGHWAY IS NEED

Present Roads Won't Withstand Truck Traffic and Builders Must Plan Heavier Roads.

The time is near at hand when main line highways must be built more substantially than in the past, according to William A. Brust, chairman of the good roads committee of the Detroit Automobile [illegible]

Because of the tremendous growth in commercial traffic on the highways the road builders must soon look ahead and plan for heavier roads.

The railroad strike, which caused industries and commercial houses throughout the country to resort to motor transport to move materials and finished products, helped to prove that our highways are inadequate as now constructed, said Mr. Brust. Even our most substantial roads showed the effects of this additional traffic and the more cheaply built thoroughfares began to deteriorate rapidly, in fact so fast that it was necessary for highway officials to exercise their rights under the state laws and limit the weight of loads.

The highways we have been building in recent years, even the permanent types, are not heavy enough to carry the ever increasing commercial traffic. Engineers realize now that the roads must be considerably thicker than at present and that they must be wider to give room for the additional vehicles being placed in service.

Another phase of the commercial traffic problem is that of tire equipment. It is going to be necessary to equip all trucks with pneumatics eventually in order that the highways may be protected as much as possible. The pneumatic tire gets away from the constant pounding that is evident with solid tires. They absorb the shock, no matter how minute, and thereby save the pavement from the pounding of the heavy load and give longer life to the mechanism of the vehicle.

Experience is the only teacher and experience has shown to all the big road engineers of the country the folly of building a good road too light. The surfaces must be thicker in order to stand the shock of the heavy loads passing over them.

MUCH CRUSHED ROCK NEEDED

Program for Road Building in Minnesota Calls for 667,000 Tons of Material.

The proposed road-building program in Minnesota this year will require about 667,000 tons of crushed rock or gravel, or nearly 20,000 carloads of aggregate, according to information secured by the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. The figures give some idea of the magnitude of the road-building program now being carried on in many states. Largely on account of a shortage of crushed stone or gravel 38 miles of road which were to have been built in 1919 were not completed. These roads are to be completed this year, while about 180 miles of new construction requiring crushed rock or gravel have been authorized. This makes a mileage of 250 scheduled for 1920.

EQUALIZING COST OF ROADS

States Which Have Constructed Highways Should Be Given Credit for Improvements.

In some of the states where highway construction has been a part of the state policy for a period of years, much work has been done on highways which would naturally become a part of the national system. It is proposed that in these cases states or counties should be allowed compensation which will give other highway mileage equal in value to that constructed. Such highways would not be maintained by the government, but would be turned over to the state while the government undertook the cost of maintenance of the national system.

Instead of Using Increased Income for Purchase of More Land Farmers Should Spend Some of It in Raising Standards.

The waste of woman power is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation, according to [illegible] tions that specialists of the United States department of agriculture draw from a farm survey conducted in the 33 northern and western states. The survey was made under the direction of Miss Florence E. Ward, in charge of extension work with women, office of extension work, northwest, states relations service. The records cover 10,015 farm homes, engaged by taking typical communities of the counties in which the survey was made. Much of the information was gathered personally by home demonstration agents, who are the local representatives of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

Miss Ward points out, from facts shown by the survey, that a reasonable amount of planning and directed investment in modern equipment for farm homes would put a large part of this wasted energy of the nation's rural home-makers. "This is a serious matter," she continues, "because we have a national problem now in working out the economics of country living in such a way as to make them satisfying both on the land and help build it up. Perhaps the greatest factor in bringing this about will be the healthy, happy and expert home-maker who will add to it that part of the increased income from the farm goes into improvement of the home. The survey discloses a number of the reasons why many women do not find farm life attractive. The working day of the average farm woman, as shown by the survey, is 11 hours the year round. In summer, however, hours. And 87 out of each 100 women have no regular vacation during the year. On the average, the farm woman can find only 1.6 hours of leisure during the summer and only 2.2 hours in winter. Half of the farm women are up and at work at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Forty per cent have water in the kitchen, but the other 60 per cent must go to the spring or the pump to bring the water for cooking and washing. Thirty-six per cent have electric the milking. On the average, the farm woman has a 7-room house. Seventy-nine per cent have kerosene lamps to trim and fill. Forty-six per cent do the family washing, about half of them having washing machines and the other half doing the work with tub, wash-board and boiler. Twenty-six per cent have gasoline or electric irons to make more comfortable the task of ironing. Only two per cent do some or all of the fly sewing. Garden work is done by 86 per cent, 94 per cent make part of the family bread and 98 per cent have churning to do. Eighty-five per cent of all poultry flocks are cared for by women. One fourth of the farm women help to feed and bed the stock, and 24 per cent of them work over six weeks in the year

WOMAN POWER IS WASTED ON FARM

One of Greatest Menaces to Rural Life of Nation, According to Specialists.

MODERN EQUIPMENT IS NEED

Instead of Using Increased Incomes for Purchase of More Land Farmers Should Spend Some of It in Raising Standards.

The waste of woman power is one of the greatest menaces to the rural life of the nation, according to deductions that specialists of the United States department of agriculture draw from a farm survey conducted in the 33 northern and western states. The survey was made under the direction of Miss Florence E. Ward, in charge of extension work with women, office of extension work, north and west, states relations service. The records cover 10,015 farm homes, averaged by taking typical communities of the counties in which the survey was made. Much of the information was gathered personally by home demonstration agents, who are the field representatives of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

Miss Ward points out, from the facts shown by the survey, that a reasonable amount of planning and well-directed investment in modern equipment for farm homes would prevent a large part of this wastage of the energy of the nation's rural homemakers. "This is a serious matter," she continues, "because we have a live national problem now in working out the economics of country living in such way as to make them satisfied to stay on the land and help build it up. Perhaps the greatest factor in bringing this about will be the healthy, alert, and expert home-maker who will see to it that part of the increased income from the farm goes into improvement of the home. At a time like this, when the dearth of farm labor is a limiting factor in production, it is very doubtful business policy for farmers to use increased income to buy more land instead of using a part of it in raising standards of living so that women and young people will not want to go to the cities in search of attractive living conditions and amusement."

Picture of Farm Woman's Work Day.

The survey discloses a number of the reasons why many women do not find farm life attractive. The working day of the average farm woman, as shown by the survey, is 11.3 hours, the year round. In summer, it is 13.12 hours. And 87 out of each 100 women have no regular vacation during the year. On the average, the farm woman can find only 1.6 hours of leisure during the summer and only 2.4 hours in winter. Half of the farm women are up and at work at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Forty per cent have water in the kitchen, but the other 60 per cent must go to the spring or the pump to bring the water for cooking breakfast. Thirty-six per cent help with the milking. On the average, the farm woman has a 7-room house to keep in order. Seventy-nine per cent have kerosene lamps to trim and fill. Ninety-six per cent do the family washing, about half of them having washing machines and the other half doing the work with tub, wash-board and boiler. Twenty-six per cent have gas or electric irons to make more comfortable the task of ironing. Ninety-two per cent do some or all of the family sewing. Garden work is done by 56 per cent, 94 per cent make all or part of the family bread and 60 per cent have churning to do. Eighty-one per cent of all poultry flocks are cared for by women. One fourth of the farm women help to feed and bed the live stock, and 24 per cent of them spend over six weeks in the year assisting with some part of the field work. All of this is in addition to cooking the family meals and caring for the children.

This, of course, is the dark side of the shield. It does not take into consideration the many compensations that come with the woman's daily round of work for the comfort of her family, and anyone who has experienced the satisfaction of living in the open country knows that the average farm woman is more fortunately placed than her average city sister. But the task is sufficiently grinding, as Miss Ward says, to send the farm woman to bed "breathing a prayer that her strength may be equal to tomorrow's duties."

Labor-Saving Equipment Important.

What is to be done about it? The department suggests some very definite things. "The interest of the department of agriculture in the returns from these studies as to labor, working equipment, and compensations of the farm women are as practical," says Miss Ward, "as its interest in farm studies regarding labor, machinery and crop returns, and for the same general reason." The farm woman's working hours might be shortened, she continues, if the principles of modern business were applied to the farm home. Running water for the 60 per cent who now must carry water, and bathrooms for the 80 per cent who now have none are other things that would lighten the woman's labor and add to her comfort and contentment. Labor could be lessened if the farm house were as well equipped as the up-to-date barn, which the farmer looks upon as so much currency with which to buy efficiency. The installation of modern lighting systems would release some of the time of the women in the 79 per cent of homes where kerosene lamps are used. The initial cost would be small when weighed against convenience and comfort. The installation of heating systems would release some of the time of the 54 per cent of women who care for two coal or wood stoves.

"As power on the farm is the greatest of time and labor savers for the farmer," Miss Ward's report says, "so power in the home is the greatest boon to the housewife." Forty-eight per cent of the farms covered by the survey reported power for operating farm machinery but only 22 per cent have this advantage for the home. "That," says Miss Ward, "is a singular fact when we consider that frequently it is a simple matter to connect the engine used at the barn with the household equipment." The washing machine is another labor-saver. Selling the cream to a creamery wherever possible instead of churning it at home is still another. In short, the same sort of intelligence and a fraction of the money applied to making field and barn work convenient would, if applied to the home, save untold drudgery to the women of the farms and would add both to the profit and the comfort of farm life.

RECIPES WHICH WILL SERVE FIFTY PEOPLE

Quite Convenient for School, Club or Grange.

Experienced Cooks Are Often Troubled in Preparing Food for a Large Number—Formulas for Cocoa and Cream Soup.

Cooking in large amounts often troubles even the experienced cooks, for most women are accustomed to plan for only small numbers. When a hot dish is to be served in school, club, or grange a recipe for a large number is convenient to have, say home economic experts of the United States department of agriculture. The following recipes for cocoa and cream soup will serve fifty.

Cocoa.

Cocoa, 1½ cups.
Sugar, 2 cups.
Milk, 8 quarts.
Boiling water, 1 quart.
Water, 1 pint.

Mix cocoa with pint of cold water until smooth; add boiling water and boil twenty to thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Add sugar to hot milk in double boiler, and pour cocoa mixture into this. Beat with egg beater until froth forms on surface.

Cream Soup—Potato.

Potatoes, 8 pounds, or 24 of medium size.
Onions, 4 medium-sized ones.
Boiling water, 2 quarts.
Parsley, 4 tablespoons, chopped.
Scalded milk, 10 quarts.
Vegetable fat, 2 cups.
Flour, 1½ cups.
Salt, 6 tablespoons.
Cayenne, ½ teaspoon.

Make a white sauce of scalded milk, fat, flour, and salt; add to this the cooked, diced, or mashed potatoes and onion. Season; serve hot.

This recipe may be used for any cream soup by substituting any other vegetables for the potato and onion or by using fish for flavoring.

One of the best-known women in London's newspaper world, returning from Birmingham by train and endeavoring to make shorthand notes en route, was hopelessly interrupted by a man on the opposite seat who persisted in shouting his political opinions to an acquaintance in the farthest corner, says a writer in the London Evening News. At last he used a phrase containing the word "damn" and turned to apologize to the lady for using such a word.

INVENTIVE GENIUS ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA AND DANGER

Doctors' Favorite Medicine Now Purified and Refined from All Objectionable Effects. "Calotabs"—the New Name.

What will human ingenuity do next? Smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, horseless carriages, colorless iodine, tasteless quinine,—now comes nausealess calomel. The new improvement called "Calotabs" is now on sale at drugstores.

For biliousness, constipation and indigestion the new calomel tablet is a practically perfect remedy, as evidenced by the fact that the manufacturers have authorized all druggists to refund the price if the customer is not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping, no salts. By morning your liver is thoroughly cleansed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger—go about your business.

Mounted on a hollow pedestal the turbine is driven at a high rate of speed by a jet of compressed air entering at the bottom. This seems to be the tiniest of all motors, being smaller than the same maker's electric motor and steam engine, each of which is reputed to be the smallest machine of the kind in the world.

BELL-ANS FOR INDIGESTION

AS WORN IN PARIS

New Frocks, Hats and Shoes Are Most Attractive.

Costumes Featured by Simplicity; Defy Reproach; Represent Best Kind of Dressing.

The old gaieties are gradually coming back to Paris, and every day some renewal of the social season, as we formerly knew it, is announced, writes a Paris correspondent in the London Times.

In the Bois for tea and tennis most attractive frocks and hats are worn. Navy blue allied to white, to cherry color, and to copper color, is more than popular. Occasionally it is worn with vivid emerald. Numbers of smart women keep rigorously to tailor-mades for all ordinary occasions. These costumes are simplicity itself, and defy the reproach of finance ministers and moralists, but they represent the best and most expensive kind of dressing. They exact the most perfect details, and a hat, which is the last thing in smartness, as well as a dress. Fine navy blue serge, embroidered lightly in jet or dull silver, in white, or in some color, is much seen. Open to the waist, where it fastens with one button, the coat discloses some striking color note in the blouse of the jumper, or short tunic pattern, low at the throat or quite high, with draped collar band. The hats vary greatly, from the ribbon toque, with a chin strap, to the wide-brimmed lace-covered frame trimmed with flowers or feathers.

Black and white are as popular as blue. Foulard, plisse silks and crepons, offer a wide choice. Lace plays an important part in gowns, and embroidery has lost none of its charm; but striped and checked black and white taffetas look well, and may be counted among the less expensive luxuries; for it represents less handwork, and consequently saves time and labor. It is noticeable that skirts are most moderately draped, and are decidedly longer. A woman dressed in black and white foulard, gracefully draped on the hips and softened round the shoulders by a fine organdie fichu, looks extremely well. Her hat is in fine organdie, also embroidered in black silk, and she carries a sunshade to match. Her shoes are strapped patent leather, and the heels are not high. The sleeves of her dress are short, and she wears long white suede gloves.

A summer toilette in ivory tussore embroidered in ivory and black, worn with a black ribbon sash, black hat and a chiffon sunshade in black and white.

Of quite a different aspect is the toilette of a vivid brunette. She wears navy taffetas, with a full tunic-skirt of tartan muslin in brighter colors than any Highland chieftain could imagine. Her hat is in black lace, and the tartan is repeated in her sunshade, which shows a navy blue foundation, with a deep plisse tartan hem.

CHARMING SILVER FOX SCARF

A silver fox neckpiece like this beautiful model gives the needed finish to the early fall costume.

STRIPES IN SUMMER MODES

Dresses and Millinery With Lines of Various Widths Among the Popular Styles.

Stripes are one of the features in this summer's fashions, says a writer in the London Times. Whole dresses are to be seen in silk with colored stripes varying in width. The material is used in both ways. The skirt may have two deep plisse flounces with the stripes perpendicular, and the bodice may show them horizontally. A skirt in cloth may be plain and have a striped coat, or the other way round, and, again, there are some smart little dresses all in striped material, silk or voile, with which plain cloth coats, handsomely braided, may be worn. Striped ribbon is much used in millinery, and when ribbons of two colors and widths are used together they are made to look as if they were striped. Black and white and black and royal blue are the most favored.

Foulard Frocks Favorites.

Foulard dresses are favorites this summer. Graceful trailing draperies are features of the newest foulard frocks. Many sashes are used, their long ends more often than not trailing below the edge of the skirt. Touches of red on foulards that are navy or black in their major tones are featured by some of the best designers and the effect is decidedly pleasing.

Roses on Most Summer Frocks

Miniature Blossoms Enhance the Loveliness of Dresses Appropriate for the Warm Days.

Roses bloom on most every summer frock and enhance its loveliness. All those little organdies, for instance, would lose half their charm if you took away the organdie roses that are scattered over the skirt. Those same roses can add a good many dollars to the frock, too, and so it might be a good plan to learn how to make them at home.

One of the prettiest frocks of the season had its roses made from accordion plaited organdie, in strips a little over an inch wide, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. The edges had first been picoted, and the material was then plaited and wound round and round from the center out, the center being filled with knotted ends of yellow soutache braid to look like stamens.

A button mold covered with organdie and beaded with crystal beads made the center of some lovely little wild roses from deep pink organdie which framed the girdle of a paler pink organdie frock. These were five-petaled roses, the petals made in the simplest way in the world from a bias strip of organdie doubled and shirred in zigzag fashion so that when the shirring was pulled up, it shaped the band into little puffed and rounded petals.

On a very stunning frock of dotted Swiss large white organdie roses were appliqued. The blue material had been folded again so as to leave no rough edges, pulled into petal shape, puffed up realistically in the center and held to the material with long uneven stitches of black silk.

Even the gingham dress cannot escape the rose trimming. The cutest gingham rose can be made from plain chambray to match the gingham coloring, using the bias band again folded and the folded edge whipped over and over with a coarse white mercerized cotton. This rose is rolled cabbage fashion, rather tight in the center and looser toward the outside.

To Clean Gloves.

White kid gloves merely soiled at the finger tips can be nicely cleaned for the first time before resorting to gasoline, if the fingers are rubbed against a moistened cake of castile soap. Remove the soap by rubbing off with a bit of clean white flannel. Another first cleaning recipe is to rub the gloves thoroughly while on the hands with French chalk. Lay the gloves away for a few days and then shake the white powder off, with which will come all soil. Dark gloves can be cleaned with gasoline, but great care must be taken to wet the gloves evenly all at once and not to rub off any dye—particularly with an inexpensive pair.

Leather Belts.

The narrow belts of leather, in colors and patent leather are used to a considerable degree on washable frocks of gingham, linen, organdie, voile and novelty printed cottons.

How to Treat A Torpid Liver

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

THOUSANDS PROCLAIM THE MERITS OF PE-RU-NA

Read Their Letters

Mrs. Martha C. Dale, R. F. D. 1, Cannon, Del., writes: "I am entirely cured of chronic catarrh of the stomach and bowels by PE-RU-NA."

Mr. J. Bayer, Glendale, Oregon: "There is no medicine like PE-RU-NA for catarrhal deafness."

Mrs. Kate Marquis, Middleburg, Ohio: "PE-RU-NA cured me of catarrh of the head and throat."

Mr. J. H. Collins, Wesson, Mississippi: "PE-RU-NA makes me feel vigorous and able to work without that tired, weak feeling I usually have otherwise."

Mrs. P. Ludvigsen, Austin, Minnesota: "I got rid of my liver trouble and can eat anything since taking PE-RU-NA."

Mrs. L. Hearing, 283 East 169th St., New York City: "For catarrh of the head and stomach, I have found PE-RU-NA better than any other medicine."

Mr. W. H. Edgar, 49 Cooper St., Atlanta, Georgia: "PE-RU-NA cured me after I had suffered fifteen years with rheumatism."

Mrs. Leona Dodd, R. No. 3, Medon, Tennessee: "PE-RU-NA is a grand medicine for coughs and colds."

So many diseases are due to catarrh and catarrhal conditions, makes PE-RU-NA the best medicine in the world to have on hand for emergencies and general health protection. Thousands of families are never without a bottle of PE-RU-NA or a box of PE-RU-NA Tablets in the medicine cabinet. That is the safe way.

You can buy PE-RU-NA anywhere in tablet or liquid form.

GONE RoPUBLICAN

The State Farmers Union was in session at Anniston. The Chamber of Commerce and other business mens organizations had their committees at the depots and hotels looking out for the comfort and convenience of the visiting farmers. One vigilant member of the committee who had about run his legs off and talked his tongue dry directing the visitors here and there and answering their various questions, flopped down in an easy chair in the lobby of "The Alabama" for a minute of rest. While he was reposing there another business man of the city who was not so actively engaged in the work of entertaining come along and said to his tired friend: "Well Pete, how is the Farmers Convention getting along?" and this is the answer he got: "Well everything is moving along nicely, but from what I can learn from hearing these old sagers talk, it seems that all the farmers in Alabama have gone Republican."

We want to add right here that anyone who was there and heard them discuss general conditions on the side could very easily tell that there is something rotten in Denmark. The farmers of Alabama are no fools, and you bet they are ready to resent the utter disregard they have been getting from a Democratic administration which they voted for and by their votes put into office.

JUDGE REYNOLDS AT ANNISTON

In accordance with the program previously arranged Judge Reynolds went before the State Convention of the Farmers Union at Anniston last Thurday to address that body of farmers representing among their number some thirty or more counties of Alabama.

Judge Reynolds' speech was primarily a response to the several welcome addresses that had been extended the Farmers Union on behalf of the City of Anniston and Calhoun County. But he did not stop at the mere acceptance of the welcome for the farmers. In his simple and able way he went into the discussion of the problems of the farmers of the future and made a most powerful appeal to them for organization and co-operation to secure full realization of their opportunities.

The address was filled with facts and figures and citations from recent and current events that made his address very impressive to his hearers. The Judge received the heartiest applause from the many farmers who found great pleasure in listening to him.

One of the most impressive things he said was that ignorance and disorganization was the costliest thing the farmers have to deal with, and that education and co-operation are the cheapest and most helpful agencies at the farmers' command.

Everyone who knows Judge Reynolds is aware that he is a farmer both in theory and practice, and his ability to touch the farmers and get close to them on subjects that touch them in heir every day business made his speech one of the most effective things that was heard at the State Convention.

While Judge Reynolds is a candidate for United States Senator from Alabama on the Republican ticket, he did not devote his address to politics. But he so favorably impressed the farmers with his facile manner and thorough reason of things vital to their interests that a great number of them gave him their personal assurance of support in November.

Judge Reynolds will poll the largest Republican vote that has ever been registered in an Alabama election. He ought by all means to be elected our next Senator.

One good Democratic farmer from Tallapoosa County over at Anniston last week said:

"They told us that if we would put the Democrats back in charge of the things at Washington we could get anything we asked for. I suppose nobody has asked for anything."

HARDING AND COX AND OHIO

Washington, August 16.—"It is common knowledge and frequent comment among political workers that the nomination of the two candidates on the Democratic ticket was determined by expediency—the playing of a forlorn hope," declares the Republican Publicity Association, in a statement issued today:

"Cox was chosen because he comes from the same state is Harding, and Roosevelt was named as his running-mate because he bears the name of a distinguished American. It was hoped that Cox could carry Ohio for the Democratic ticket and Roosevelt swing New York. There is no likelihood, however, that the voters of New York will be misled by the use of the name of the greatest American of recent years, now is there anything to justify the hope that Cox may be able to carry Ohio against Harding.

"Study of election returns show Harding to be stronger in Ohio than is Cox. And, moreover, under ordinary circumstances, Ohio is a pretty dependable Republican state, Beginning with the election which placed Abraham Lincoln in the White House and recorded the first victory for the Republican party, there have been fifteen national elections, and Ohio has gone Republican in 13 of these. The only occasions on which Ohio went Democratic were in 1912 when the Republican party was divided and in 1916 when the country was deceived by the "kept us out of war" propaganda. In 1912, although the Democrats led, the combined vote of the Republicans and the Progressives exceeded that of the Democrats, showing that the defeat of the Republicans was due to division and no tto preference for Democratic policies. Out of 22 members of Congress from Ohio 14 are Republicans.

"In 1912, when Cox was first elected there was a progressive candidate in the field, Cox received 50,000 less votes than the Republican and Progressive candidates combined. In 1914, although there was still a progressive candidate for the governorship, Willis defeated Cox by 31,000. If he had received the Progressive vote also, his majority would have been more than 90,000. In 1916 Cox was carried through by the Wilson deception and in 1918 he won through a local issue which turned to the Democratic column a county normally Republican. His majority in 1918 was only 12,000.

"Contrasted with his record, the Harding vote makes an exceedingly good showing. Harding was elected Senator in 191b, with a Progressive candidate in the field to divide his vote. Nevertheless, Harding was elected by a plurality of more than 100,000 at the same time that Cox was defeated by 29,000 in his race for the governorship. Harding received a total of 526,115 votes for the senatorship. The vote for Cox in the same year was 493,367, or about 33,000 less than the Harding vote. That was the highest vote Cox ever received, his vote in 1918 being only 486,000 or 46,000 iess than the Harding vote in 1914.

"Cox has never won election that could be called a personal victory. Harding won the Senatorship even with the disadvantage of a divided party. Cox has been known as a cunning politician who could take advantage of special conditions. Harding has been a statesman who brought strength to his party ticket and received more than his normal party vote. When Cox won by the narrow margin of 5,199 in 1916, he polled nearly 40,000 fewer votes than did Wilson, who dragged Cox through. When Cox won by a little more than 5,000 Pomerene carried the senatorship by 35,000 and Wilson carried Ohio by nearly 90,000.

"It was manifest from the figures, that the effort to play up Cox as a great vote-getter is pure fake. Cox has been clever at getting in at the right time to profit politically by favorable circumstances not of his creation."

Farmers and newspaper editors can get along all right after all, or that is some of them can. Last week the editor of The Union-Banner attended the state meeting of the Farmers Union in Anniston and we came out of it without losing our scalp. And there was Harry Ayers of the Anniston Star, P. B. Haralson of the Union Advocate of Oxford and Phil Painter of the Birmingham Advance also there, and they seemed to stand a good hand with the farmers. But the way they talked about some of the big newspaper editors in Alabama made us shiver in our boots for fear our time was coming next.

TRAINED NURSE ADVISES DRECO

Says she has no more dizzy spells, constipation relieved; sleeps well and feels fine... Advises everyone to try Dreco, which is doing much good around here.

"I am simply getting along fine these days, and feel so much better than before I toop Dreco, then as tonic," states Miss Mattie Johnson, who is a nurse residing in Hunterville, Alabama.

"Dizzys pells used to annoy me very much, which I knew came from a sluggish liver. I was bilious oll the time, and got so nervous that I did not know what a night's sound sleep was, for I'd roll from one side of the bed to the other, and get up next morning all worn out, with no energy to go to my work. I had to take a pill or some such medicine every night,t o keep my bowels moving, and if I'd forget to take it, I would bec onstipated. I frequently had backache, and my food digested porly, formed gas and kept me bloated up.

"But it is quite different now. This Dreco has done a lot for me, for I sleep well each noght, and get up with a refreshed feling, and full energy for a bi day's work. My appetite is fine and the food digests without forming gas; never have backache, and my bowel action is reular every day, without ever taking a pill. Dreco is positively the best remedy I ever took."

All drugists now sell Dreco and is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company.

IMPROVEMENT OF ALABAMA'S SEAPORT WILL BENEFIT ALL OF THE PEOPLE

The seaport is the bridge that connects river and rail traffic with gulf and ocean traffic. A port is something more than a mere harbor and anchorage for ships. Without modern freight handling devices, warehouses and adequate wharves, for the rapid handling of large cargoes, a seaport cannot meet competition with other ports and get the business. Present port facilities at Mobile are inadequate for the seaport's growing business.

Section 93 of the constitution of Alabama provides that the state shall not engage in works of internal improvement nor lend money or its credit in aid of such. This section of the constitution already has been twice amended; to permit the use of convicts and convict funds for road improvement and permitting a $25,000,000 bond issue to match federal funds for the same purpose.

Now another amendment is needed which will remove the bar to a work of internal improvement by the state, the pressing necessity of which could not have been foreseen when the present constitution was framed. The proposed amendment to be voted on at the time of the general election, November 2, provides:

"The foregoing prohibition shall not apply to the promotion, development or operation of harbors or seaports within the state or its jurisdiction; provided, further, that any such work or improvements shall always be and remain under the management and control of the state harbor commission or other governing agency."

The federal government is as ready to help in the development of water transportation as in highway construction, but insists that the state or municipalities own and control the port terminals. Already more than $12,000,000 has been expended by the government for the building of locks and dams, the deepening and improvement of the Warrior-Alabama system, reaching from the seaport to the heart of the mineral and agricultural sections of Alabama. More than $20,000,000 has also been expended in obtaining a channel 30 feet deep from Mobile to the open gulf. In addition to this, the government has built and now operates a line of barges, capable of moving a million tons of freight per year from the interior to the port. These barges are prepared to carry all classes of freight, by means of steel containers, also furnished by the government.

This water transportation system already has resulted in a decrease in freight rates for both river and interior points over a large area, which will be extended practically to cover the entire state of Alabama. All that is needed to effect this is the further development of the seaport so that water transportation for incoming and outgoing freights will be generally used by merchants, manufacturers, farmers and others who ship or receive goods or raw materials.

The development and use of water transportation will relieve the car shortage, as one barge load is equivalent to twenty car loads. It will cheapen freight on phosphates from the Florida fields and other fertilizers for the farmers, whether they live on or near the rivers or not, and it will prevent the congestion of traffic through any possible deficiency or tie-up of other means of transportation. The rivers and the roads belong to the people, and they have the right to improve and use them.

The improvement of the rivers and harbors is not a local question, and will benefit the rest of the state as much or more than it will benefit Mobile. The city of Mobile cannot finance this great enterprise if it would, and private interests could not do so without the danger of creating a dangerous monopoly; for the control of the port means control of water navigation in Alabama.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Mrs. W. M. Adams Hostess.

On last Friday afternoon the hospitable doors of the home of Mrs. Will Adams were thrown open when she complimented Mrs. Noble and Mrs. Carlisle, who were the guests of Miss Orr.

Three tables for the game of bridge were placed in the library which was made beautiful by attractively arranged baskets of Clematis with other pretty summer flowers. At the conclusion of the game a delicious ice course was served by Miss Sarah Adams and Miss Sally Johnson.

Birthday Party is Given

The birthday of little Gladys Henley was the occasion of a beautiful childrens party given by her parents on Thursday afternoon. The house was elaborately decorated for the occasion in beautiful summer flowers. Several games were enjoyed till a late hour when an ice course was served to about twenty-five guests.

Mrs. Henley was assisted in entertaining the children by Mrs. G. O. McKee and Mrs. Emett McKee.

Birthday Party.

The Womans Missionary of the Baptist Church will entertain at a birthday party Tuesday evening from 4 till 6 in Mrs. Roberta Wilson's grove. Everybody is invited to come and bring pennies to amount to their birthdays. Refreshments will be served free. Proceeds will go to the new Baptist church funds.

Fishing Party

Mrs. Blanche Mullins will give a fishing trip on Wednesday complimenting her attractive guests. The party, including Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Foshee, Mrs. W. D. Spigener, Misses Warrene Spigener, Marzelle Mullins, Allie Crumpton and Helen Whorten, and Messrs Cecil Smith, Willie Murphy and Evans Edwards, will spend the week at Mr. Foshee's camp.

L. A. S. Meets

SHOULTS NOTES

The singing school at Pleasant Grove will close next Saturday, August 21. There will be all day singing. Everybody is invited to come and bring a well filled basket. Rev. J. D. Martin will preach in the afternoon. We hope this will be a day of pleasure to all who attend.

The sick of this community are gradually improving, which we are glad to know.

Mr. Oscar Shoults from Selma is spending a few days at home.

Miss Elzia Hall returned to her home last week, from Centerville, where she spent several weeks with her niece, Mrs. T. C. Snead.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Walker spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. Hall.

Mrs. Jahn Mitchell spent Saturday with relatives at Lawley.

Miss Pearl Johnson from Lawley is spending a few days with her cousin, Miss Drucila Lawrence.

Mr. C. T. Walker relates the following incident to us, which happened at his home on Sunday night. In the night he heard a distressing noise among his chickens and on going to find out the trouble, what do you suppose he found? A large snake hanging to a pole in the chicken house with his body wrapped around a chicken trying to swallow it.

Mrs. J. M. Bearden spent the week end last week with her sister, Mrs. Millard Ratliff near Pletcher.

Rev. Buford Lawrence from Birmingham was at home with relatives a few days last week.

Mr. Clyde Bearden's wife and baby from Montgomery are visiting relatives here.

The House of Whispers

A BEAUTIFUL GHOST.

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson is occupying the apartments of his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. The Gastons, leaving on a trip, tell him about mysterious noises and "whispers" that have scared them. He becomes acquainted with Barbara Bradford, who lives in the same big building. He instinctively dislikes and distrusts the superintendent, Wick. The mysteries in his apartments begin with the disappearance of the Gaston pearls from the wall safe. He decides not to call in the police, but to do his own investigating. It is soon evident that someone has access to his rooms. Becoming friendly with Barbara, he learns that her apartments are equally mysterious. She tells him that several years before her sister Claire, who lives with her, had made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson takes Miss Kelly, the telephone girl, to dinner with the idea of pumping her. Gorman, a hotel detective, recognizes her as the wife of Lefty Moore, a noted burglar. Nelson partly confides in the detective and arranges to meet him.

"You're right about that," I replied, "and say, look here. Why can't you meet me somewhere tomorrow afternoon. There are a lot of mysterious things happening in the Granddeck. Maybe you can help me in trying to clear them up."

"It's a date. I'll be in the back room of J. Connor's place over on Third avenue at three o'clock waiting for you."

"I'll be there," I said, as I bade him good night.

"Hold on a minute," he said. "Do you know where Lefty Moore's wife lives now?"

I recalled the number she had told me to give the taxi man and repeated it to him, an address way over on East Sixty-second street near the river.

"I like to know them sort of things," he explained. "In our business you never know when you'll be needing them."

On my way home, after I left him, I congratulated myself on having made James Gorman's acquaintance. In him I had found a man with police and detective experience. The fact that he held a responsible position with a big hotel ought to be sufficient voucher for his honesty. Of course Miss Bradford must be consulted before I met Gorman the next afternoon. I could hardly tell him my own almost unbelievable experiences without bringing in the attempts to blackmail her sister. Surely Miss Bradford would not object to my plan. We were making such poor headway in solving the mystery ourselves that I was certain she would welcome Gorman's advice.

And would it not be a surprise to Barbara Bradford to learn that a criminal—or at least the wife of a criminal—was employed as a telephone girl in the apartment house? I was hoping that she would be at home and in her room when I arrived at the house so that I might signal her and tell her my great news at once.

I let myself into the apartment and without bothering to turn on the lights made my way back toward my own room. As I reached the end of the hall my ears detected a scuffling noise that seemed to come from my quarters. I stopped stock-still and listened breathlessly. Unquestionably there was someone in my room.

I tiptoed softly forward. As I crept along in the darkness, making no sound, I found myself devoutly wishing for some weapon. Of course it might be Barbara, who had entered by means of the ledge to leave some message for me, but if it were not she, I felt certain that I would discover who was at the bottom of the plots against us.

I gained the door without my presence having been discovered. In the dim half-light that came from the open window I could detect a figure standing on a chair apparently feeling along the wall near the ceiling. I recalled with curiosity that it was from that spot that the whispers I had heard had seemed to come.

Inch by inch I edged noiselessly forward, my eyes on the intruder until at last my fingers found the electric light button. As the light flooded the room there was a suppressed scream, followed by a frightened gasp. The figure on the chair turned quickly and faced me. I saw that it was a woman, a badly frightened woman, with her hands clutching at her heart. Almost instantly I recognized her. It was not Barbara Bradford, but her sister, Claire. She was clad in some sort of a dark house gown thrown over her nightgown. Her slippered feet were bare of stockings, and her hair hung in a great braid down her back.

As I stared at her she sprang from the chair and made a rush for the open window. I grabbed for her and though she fought desperately I managed to hold her fast and to drag her away from the window. After a moment's futile resistance she suddenly collapsed in my arms, moaning in a tense whisper:

"Let me go, please let me go."

I placed her in a chair, and still keeping a tight hold on one of her arms, studied her, debating what to do. What desperate motive could have driven this girl to the daring journey across the narrow ledge by which she had gained access to my quarters? Was she, I wondered, once more in the power of that evil ex-husband of hers, driven by fear of him to such desperate deeds.

"Let me go," she moaned again.

"Not until you tell me what you were doing in my rooms," I answered firmly.

"I did not know there was any one here. I thought the apartment was vacant. I thought the Gastons were away."

"But why did you come?"

"I can't tell that," she moaned. "I can't! I can't!"

"You must," I repeated. "I am going to keep you here until you do tell me."

"You must not keep me here," she said. "I don't want my people to know about my having been here. You look like a gentleman. Please let me go."

"Doesn't Barbara—doesn't your sister know you are here?"

At my mention of her sister's name an expression of amazement escaped her.

"Who are you?" she asked excitedly. "How did you know who I was?"

"I am a friend of your sister," I answered. "She will tell you who I am. You must trust me. I feel I have a right to know what you are doing here. Won't you tell me?"

A strange look came into her eyes and she shook her head.

"You wouldn't understand. I was trying to trace the whispers."

"The whispers!" I cried excitedly. "You have heard them, too?"

"Often," she said. "I heard them tonight. Mother and Barbara were out to the theater. They seemed to come from near the ceiling in my sister's room. They seemed to vanish in the direction of this room. I thought there was no one here. I decided to creep along the ledge and see if I could trace them."

"And did you succeed?"

She shook her head.

"When I first came in this room I could still hear them. They seemed to be coming from up near the ceiling. I got up on a chair and put my ear to the wall to listen. Then they stopped altogether and then—you came in. May I go now—before my mother comes home?"

"On one condition," I answered, "that you tell your sister about your having been here."

"I'll tell her if you wish me to," she replied, "and now, please may I go? Could you let me out of your door? See, I brought a key to our apartment with me. I don't think I dare make that trip across the ledge tonight."

As I escorted her to the door, my mind in a whirl over the events of the evening, I suddenly remembered how important it was that I should see her sister for a long talk before I kept my appointment with Gorman.

"Tell your sister," I said to Claire Bradford as she departed, "that it is imperative that she meet me at luncheon tomorrow. I have news of the utmost importance—news that concerns all of us. Tell her to meet me at the Astor at one. She must come."

"I'll tell her," she replied.

CHAPTER VII.

It was the next evening that I made my astounding discovery, when pure chance led me plump into what both Barbara Bradford and I recognized at once as our first real clue to the mysteries surrounding us.

My find came unexpectedly at the end of an exciting day. As may be imagined I slept little in the hours following my unexpected meeting with Claire Bradford in my rooms, coming as it did right on top of Detective Gorman's revelations as to the identity of the telephone girl. Coupled with these circumstances was the fact that if my hopes were realized, Barbara would be within a very few hours lunching with me for the first time.

I just had to see her before I met Gorman. The tale I was to unfold to him was so improbable, so almost unbelievable, that I wanted to go over it with her step by step, in order to be able to convince the detective that it was the absolute truth.

I could not help but realize how preposterous it would sound in the telling. Mr. Gorman could hardly be blamed for believing that my mind had been inflamed by witnessing too many movie thrillers. Yet I had proof. There were the entries in my great-uncle's diary that I could show. I had the anonymous notes. My story of the strange whispers, if need be, could be confirmed by the old laundress, by Barbara Bradford, yes, and by Claire, too. That is, if the reason Claire had given to account for her presence in my room was the true one. It sounded logical, and yet I did not place the confidence in her that I did in Barbara.

But what I relied on most of all to convince Gorman of the truth of my preposterous tale was his own knowledge of who the telephone girl was. Just when I had reached the deduction that the band plotting against us must have a coadjutor in the building, he had come forward with the knowledge that pointed toward the person most apt to be involved.

"She Shouldn't Have Gone to Your Room. That's Just Like Her, Though."

I was pondering it all over in my mind as I left the house to meet Barbara. I was out on the street and just turning the corner when I remembered that I had spent most of the money in my pocket the night before. Retracing my steps, I returned to my apartment and took some bills from their hiding-place in the bookcase. As I emerged into the street again, I became aware that across the street was a man whose appearance seemed vaguely familiar. As I once more turned the corner, walking briskly, I glanced back for a second look at him and was surpised to see him coming in my direction.

Then all at once my subconscious mind came to my rescue. I realized when it was that I had seen him before and what made his appearance so familiar. As I left the house not ten minutes ago that very same man had been standing across the street. As I had turned back at the corner he had been coming in my direction just as he was now.

He must be following me, trailing me, shadowing me. I determined to test out my theory. At the next corner I turned sharply, glancing quickly back as I did so. He was still following me, though on the other side of the street and perhaps half a block away. I went a few steps out of sight and then stopped as if to look in a shop window. He came hurrying around the corner an instant later, slowing down as soon as he spotted me again and walked on slowly past me as if not noticing me. I waited until he was some distance beyond and retracing my steps quickly to the avenue again stopped in the shelter of a building to light a cigar, purposely wasting a number of matches. In hardly ten seconds he was back, covertly watching me from the other side of the street.

There was no question about it. He was trailing me. But who could be having me shadowed? Certainly he was not in the employ of the Bradfords or of Detective Gorman. Either he must be one of the band of plotters, or—I hated to voice my suspicion, but somehow the thought of my great-uncle Rufus kept obtruding itself. It would be just like the suspicious old miser, if it was he who had planned all this deviltment, to put me in a position of trust and then to have me watched night and day.

Whoever it was that inspired this pursuit, I determined to lead my shadow a merry chase. Jumping into a taxi I bade the driver take me to a department store. Looking back I saw the shadow hastily entering another cab. Arrived at my destination I thrust fare and tip into the driver's hand and hurrying inside managed to catch an elevator just ascending. One flight up I got out and redescended to the main floor by a staircase at the rear, emerging thence on to a side street. A second taxi took me to the Twenty-eighth street subway station, and there with no sign of my shadower I felt a pain to Times square and went to the Astor to meet Barbara Bradford, arriving on the dot of one. She was there awaiting me and we quickly found a secluded table in one of the less conspicuous rooms.

"I've told Claire everything," she said as soon as we were seated. "I hope you're not angry with me."

"Of course not. You had to tell her. I am sorry to have frightened her."

"She shouldn't have gone to your room. That's just like her, though. She always acts on the spur of the moment. She's awfully worried, too, poor girl."

"We can save her," I said.

"Why," she asked quickly, "what have you learned?"

"I was convinced that they must have someone in the house aiding them. I've found out who it is. It's the telephone girl—Nellie Kelly is the name she goes by."

"I can't believe it," cried the girl, shocked at my statement. "She's only a girl like myself. I have talked to her lots of times. I'm certain there's nothing wicked or wrong about her."

"I'm afraid there is," I explained. "I took her out to dinner last night, to the White Room. The house detective, while she was off telephoning, practically ordered me out of the place because I was with her. She's notorious. Her husband is Lefty Moore, a well-known burglar. He's in Sing Sing now. Detective Gorman arrested him. He ought to know."

"Oh, the poor girl," exclaimed Miss Bradford, tears welling up in her eyes. "I'm so sorry for her."

"But think of your sister. Think what they are trying to do with Miss Kelly's aid."

"But how do you know she's aiding them?"

"I don't know it. But I do know that nobody could pull off all the things that have been happening in the Granddeck without some one there helping them. We've found someone used to helping criminals—a criminal's wife. Isn't that enough? All we need to do now is to watch her closely and fasten the thing on her."

"How are you going to do that?"

"That's why I insisted on your coming here today. I am to meet Detective Gorman at three. I feel that he could aid us, and I think we ought to tell him everything."

"Tell the police!" Her face grew white at the thought. "Wouldn't that mean a scandal—the newspapers and all that sort of thing?"

I shook my head decisively.

"Gorman's not with the police now. He is employed as a hotel detective. But he is just the man we need to help us. He knows all about criminals and how to track them. With his aid we can quickly clear the whole thing up."

"Will you have to tell him everything—about Claire's marriage?"

"We've either got to tell him everything or nothing."

"Oh, how I wish we did not have to. The more people there are who know about things the more likely they are to become public."

"Yet you trusted me with your sister's secret."

She gave me a quick glance of confidence.

"You're different."

"I'm afraid most people would not agree with you. They would regard me as a worthless, discredited young fellow out of a job."

"But it's not your fault."

"The point is," I went on, "that we have reached a place where we need expert advice. Gorman has fortuitously turned up to give it. The only way is to tell him everything."

For a moment she debated the matter silently, her pretty forehead puckered in thought.

"Yes," she said at last, "I suppose it is the only way. But won't he want a lot of money for his services?"

"I'll attend to that," I answered. "I'll make my great-uncle reward him handsomely for recovering the Gaston jewels."

"If he does."

"He must. We've got to get them back."

From her hand-bag she produced the anonymous letters she had received and handed them to me.

"Will you want to show the detective these?"

"Yes, I think I had better. The whole tale sounds so preposterous that I need every bit of corroborative evidence we can muster."

For half an hour we lingered over the table, discussing all the aspects of the case. Eventually I think I persuaded Miss Bradford that the evidence pointed most damningly to the telephone girl as one of the conspirators or at least one of their aides. She was eager to know what plan of action Gorman would advise and as we parted we arranged to be at our adjoining windows at ten that evening in order that we might have another chat.

I found Gorman waiting for me at the place he had mentioned.

"I told you that girl was a bad one," was his greeting.

"What do you mean?" I cried.

"What have you learned about her?"

"Nothing except that the address she gave you last night was phony. The number she gave is the hospital grounds"—he pronounced it "horspital."

"Where does she live, then?"

"She's keeping that under cover. She shook the taxi at Fifty-ninth and Third."

Detective Gorman to the rescue.

CALOMEL DANGER TOLD BY DODSON

Says You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone, which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

YOUNGSTER MADE WORD GOOD

Though, as It Turned Out, It Was at the Cost of Some Personal Discomfort.

Marshall, who is five, lives in a flat building. He is a real boy and although he has a rear yard and a sand pile in which to play, his mother has more or less trouble keeping him off the streets. A neighbor saw him across the street one morning and the next day called his attention to the fact that he was out of the zone mapped for him. He was one of the busy ones about a vegetable wagon. "Yes," he said, "I had to get some sings" The next morning he asked his mother for the market basket. He immediately disappeared and soon returned, accompanied by the vegetable man. In the basket were three pounds of potatoes, a box of berries and two cantaloupes. Mother had to settle whether she needed the goods or not. At any rate, Marshall made his word good with the neighbor that he had to get "some sings." When questioned by the same neighbor about his shopping expedition he said: "Yes, and mother spanked me, too."

A good story is going the rounds of Princeton about Prof. Alfred Noyes, the English poet.

Professor Noyes, it is well known, likes very much to read his works aloud to his friends, and at Princeton, with so many young men under him, he is usually able to gratify this liking to the full.

The other day Professor Noyes said to a junior, who had called about an examination:

"Wait a moment. Don't go yet. I want to show you the proofs of my new book of poems."

But the junior made for the door frantically.

"No, no," he said, "I don't need proofs. Your word is enough for me, professor."

PACKAGES HELP TO SELL GOODS

Desirability of Packing Products in Clean, Sound Containers Is Emphasized.

RECENT INSTANCE IS CITED

Farmer, Who Shipped Large Amount of Butter in Dark, Unattractive Barrels Suffers Loss of 8 Cents a Pound on Shipment.

The desirability of packing farm products in clean, sound containers is again emphasized by the loss of $350 recently suffered by a producer in connection with a single shipment of butter, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture.

Used Dark-Colored Barrels.

This farmer shipped in barrels unsalted butter that scored 89 points. Because of the dark gray color of the barrels, which suggested packing stock butter, the receiver was unable to interest buyers in the commodity. Realizing that he would be unable to sell it at all in that condition, he salted and reworked the butter and then packed it in butter tubs. Although the butter had deteriorated in quality by this time, the appearance of the packages commanded the attention of buyers and the butter was promptly sold. The loss to the shipper was practically 8 cents a pound, or over $350 on the entire shipment—a loss that would have been avoided in the first place had the shipper packed the butter properly, and a loss that would have been greater had not the receiver done so.

Other Things Being Equal the Lower Parcel Post Packages Will Market Better Because of Their More Attractive Appearance.

The same principle applies to eggs, beans, or any other commodity, say the bureau's experts. If the packages present an inviting appearance, the sale is half made; for good-looking packages suggest contents of high quality.

Another Illustration.

Another illustration given by the bureau of markets is that of a country creamery that forwarded a five-tub sample shipment of butter to a commission firm and received an offer for future shipments. In the next shipment the creamery used second-hand tubs instead of bright, new, clean, attractive packages, such as were used in the five-tub sample. Although the butter shipped was uniform in quality and scored 92 points, the commission firm was unable to dispose of it as "extras," and the shipper was compelled to take a loss of 2 cents a pound on the shipment.

STRIPED CUCUMBER BEETLES

Clean Garden of All Forms of Vegetation in Fall and Burn It to Destroy Harmful Pests.

The best way to handle the striped cucumber beetle is by cleaning the garden in the fall of all forms of vegetation and making a bonfire of it. The adjacent plots to the garden should also be raked and the rubbish burned. In this way many species of insects will be killed that would otherwise live through the winter. Many small gardeners leave the garden cleaning until spring and then wonder at the numerous forms of insect life. One day of cleaning and burning in the fall saves several days of insect picking during the spring and the loss of a number of plants. Some observers make the statement that one day in the fall is equal to ten days of fighting the young in the spring. Among the birds that have been seen eating the cucumber beetle on several occasions are the quail, English sparrow, wren, grosbeck and oriole.

HINTS FOR SUMMER WEATHER

Extra Care Should Be Taken to See That Young Chicks Are Not Injured by Hot Sun.

In hot weather, special care is necessary to prevent chicks from being overheated by exposure to the sun, confinement where ventilation is bad, or overcrowding. The brooder should be under shelter, with good circulation of air around it, and the number of chicks should not be greater than it will accommodate comfortably under fair weather conditions.

PLAN TO MAKE YARD FOR POULTRY FLOCK

South Side of Building Is Favored by Experts.

Height of Fences Will Need to Be Regulated by the Variety of Fowls—Hexagonal Wire Netting Is Not Expensive.

If convenient, it is well to have double yards, for then one may rotate green crops. Small yards may be sown to oats, wheat, rye, rapeseed, etc., but if large yards are available they can be kept in a permanent sod of bluegrass, alfalfa, or clover. While the fowls are using one yard the green feed in the other is getting a fresh start.

If the yards are to be on only one side of the house, they should be on the south side in order that the fowls may have the benefit of the first dry ground in early spring. It not infrequently happens that in localities where snow is abundant the ground on the south side is dry many days before that on the north side.

If the yards are to be in permanent sod and are to furnish green feed for the fowls, 70 to 80 square feet should be allowed for each bird. If part of the green feed is to be provided for otherwise, and the yards used mainly for exercise grounds, 35 to 40 square feet for each bird will be sufficient, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say.

Hexagonal wire netting, 2-inch mesh, is suitable for fencing and can be bought cheaply. Where several runs are adjoining, the fences may be boarded up at the bottom to a height of 2 to 2½ feet, or 1-inch mesh wire can be used in place of these boards, to prevent the males fighting one another. Height of fences will need to be regulated by the variety of fowls. The heaviest breeds, like the Brahmas, may be restrained by a 4-foot fence, while most of the other breeds can be kept in by a 6-foot fence. Some of the Hamburgs and leghorns, however, need a 7 or 8 foot fence. By clipping the flight feathers on one wing they can be kept in without much trouble. Gates should be provided in order to permit access from one yard to the next.

Shade of some kind should be provided, and this can often be advantageously furnished by planting fruit trees (such as pear, plum, peach, cherry and apple) in the yard.

VEGETABLES GROWN IN FALL

Some of Pickling and Canning Stock Missed in Spring or Summer Can Be Produced.

After the hot summer weather is passed, when the autumn rains have begun one should plan for the fall garden. There are many vegetables that will mature in a short time that are welcome additions to the bill of fare, and some of the pickling and canning stock that we failed to get in the spring or summer can yet be produced.

WELL SELECTED CORN SEED

Supply Should Be Set Aside at Time Crop Is Being Husked—Store In Dry Place.

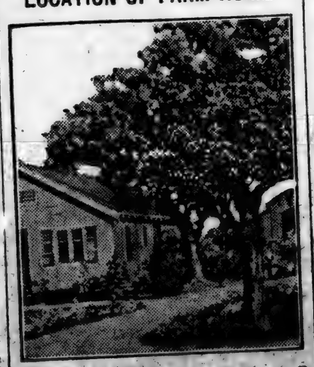
The corn for seed should be selected and saved when it is being husked. Save no ears for seed which are not of medium size, fair, rows straight, even and of the standard color and borne at least two on the stalk. Seed corn should be spread out in the granary or on the top floor of the barn where it will keep dry.

FALL GREEN BEANS FAVORED

Superior Vegetable for Canning or Pickling—Red Valentine Is Always Tender.

Fall green beans are just the thing for canning or pickling as the continued cool weather is less apt to cause them to spoil. The Red Valentine is a favorite variety for fall planting as they come quick, are always tender and stringless, and yield heavily.

LOCATION OF FARM HOME



When planning to build a farm home, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, select a location near good trees, so that their shade may be used and enjoyed by the family every day during the summer. It takes so long to grow good trees that existing ones should be cherished and utilized to the fullest extent.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

Heavy Traffic.

They seldom crowd the roads in northern Minnesota, but on our last tour, when we headed into a tamarack swamp and had to take our top off because of the low-hanging trees, we did feel a trifle uncertain about the route.

"Do many cars travel this road?" we asked some children who happened along.

"Oh, yes," came the proud reply: "lots of 'em. One came last year and one this year, an' now you're here, too!"

Puts I Will In You Easy to Get Strong

Everyone wants more pep and surely needs it this hot weather. Hot weather takes away the appetite and makes one feel listless, lifeless, miserable, even when you have a strong stomach, but for those who have weak stomachs, it is really a dangerous, trying time.

Be on the safe side this kind of weather and help nature all you can, by taking an eatonic tablet about half an hour before you eat and one or two an hour after you eat; it will be of wonderful benefit. Eatonic simply takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases, and carries them right out of the body. With the cause of the trouble removed, of course you will feel fit and fine—full of pep all the time. Eatonic will cool feverish mouth and stomach and give you a good appetite, even in hot weather.

Get a big box at your druggist's for a trifling cost and let eatonic help you for a few days; then you will never be without it. Adv.

PEOPLE who get to feeling weak every now and then, and who do not seem to get the proper refreshment from rest, sleep and recreation, need a tonic to help their blood revitalize and build up their system.

For this, you will find Ziron Iron Tonic very valuable, as the testimony of thousands already has proved. Mrs. J. W. Dysart, lady of a prominent Georgia family residing near Cartersville, says:

"I didn't feel like myself.

"I didn't rest well some nights. I would be just as tired when I got up in the morning as when I went to bed. I would get weak, and have kind of fainty spells—at times hardly able to do my housework.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Political Speakers Lock Horns at Columbiana

Reynolds and Longshore Make it So Hot That "Fritz" Couldn't Stand the Racket. He Fled From the Scene at the First Chance.

The opening gun of the present political campaign in Alabama and the Fourth Congressional District was fired last Saturday, when Judge L. H. Reynolds, Republican candidate for the United States Senate and Judge A. P. Longshore, Republican candidate for Congress from the Fourth Congressional District, engaged in a joint debate with Hon. Fritz Thompson of Centerville, who served in the role of the Democratic offering on the altar of political sacrifice. A large amount of citizens of Shelby county were present to witness the contest, and they were given a feast of thorough political discussion.

Judge Reynolds opened the discussion with a speech of forty-five minutes, in which he took up the old empty carcass of the solid Democratic south and fairly beat it to a frazzle. He poured out such a flood of bitter condemnation upon the manner in which the Democratic party has treated the South, and the blindness with which the southern Democrats have followed the empty promises of the Democratic party that the whole mess looked hopeless for defense when he had finished with it.

The main points of his speech were directed toward pointing out wherein the South has never got any recognition from the Democratic party administrations because it has been a foregone conculsion that the South would vote the ticket solid no matter what happened. And on the other hand he showed instances of the past few years where the politically doubtful states have demanded many things of the Democratic administration and got what they asked for simply because they were recognized as doubtful, and liable to vote against the Democrats if they did not give them what they asked for. These two points were very forcibly illustrated by the occurrences of 1914 and 1915, in which years the government suffered the southern farmers to be robbed of their cotton crop, and protected the western wheat manufacturers in the guarantee to them of the prices they demanded for their wheat.

The Democratic party in our own State of Alabama came in for its just desserts at the hands of Judge Reynolds. He pointed out the unfair practices that are tolerated in the school system of the state under Democratic administrations, which allow children of some of the counties as much as $33 per capita for public schools, and allot only $4 to $5 to children in other counties of the state.

Brief reference was made to the management of the affairs of this country during the war under Democratic rule which concluded with the denunciation of the iron rule of President Wilson and his sullen efforts at the domination of Congress in making such wanton and wasteful appropriations of the peoples money.

Mr. Wilson was thoroughly arraigned for his efforts to force the Senate and Congress, and the country as a whole to accept the league of nations without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t".

Judge Reynolds was followed by Hon. Fritz Thompson, who was to represent the Democratic side of the argument, which he did in true Democratic style. He began by saying that he was a Democrat because he believed he ought to vote just like his daddy shot in 1861. His speech was predicated by the sole and only foundation that a Democrat can think of for his political justification, i. e., those old worn out and flimsy prejudices that were engendered in the hearts and minds of the people during the war between the states and reconstruction following.

It was a bit surprising to hear a man of the intelligence of Fritz Thompson get up in these latter days of broad thinking and sound judgment and wave the bloody shirt of the Confederacy. It seems that his effort fell with the greatest emptiness of any speech ever attempted by a Democrat before. Mr. Thompson may not know it, but it is just such speeches as his last Saturday that is disgusting the people of the country with modern Democracy. While such reputed leaders as he are making their flowery and animated arguments based on Civil War prejudices, the people who demand some economic relief and assistance of the government for present day problems that mean meat and bread to them and clothing for their backs, are leaving the old ship of Democracy in utter disgust.

Then after disgusting his hearers with his Civil War speech, Mr. Thompson completed his baby act by laying all the negro equality charges he could rake and scrape at the door of the Republicans. He did not choose to defend the Wilson administration for its neglect of the vital things that concern the people, but stayed close by those old issues that once divided our country asunder, but which sound empty and void now to all men who are accustomed to think of our country and our government in terms of what it means to the life and living of the present and future generations.

But no one who listened to his speech knew any better than did Mr. Thompson, of the utter ridiculousness of the arguments he made. He thoroughly realized that what he had said would not stand the fire of Judge Longshore who was to follow him and consequently as soon as he had finished his remarks he left the court house and in true Democratic style, betook himself to the tall uncut timber of the wilderness. He knew that his old prejudices would be roasted to a nice brown by the able and vindictive tongue of Judge Longshore.

After Judge Longshore had given his friend Thompson a few broad sides everyone could see where Fritz was wise in getting out when he did. He was not only roasted to a nice brown, but he was burnt to charcoal in most places. And while Longshore was skinning Thompson and the Democratic party in general the audience roared in a long peal of continuous jubilant applause.

The curtain of Civil War prejudices which Fritz had put up to defend himself and the Democrats from the darts of Judge Reynolds was swept away by the first blast from Longshore, and with the foe left open in a barren waste, the speaker began hurling his big shells into their ranks to the complete disorder and obliteration of every vestige of defense that Thompson had prepared.

It was amusing to see what a fool Thompson has acted in his charging the Republicans with playing politics with the negro, when Judge Longshore produced records and newspaper clippings that told of how President Wilson had only last year carried the negro Moton from Tuskeegee with him to Versailles to frame the league of nations; of how he had appointed Emmett J. Scott, another Alabama negro, as Assistant Secretary of War to Mr. Baker; and numerous other instances where Mr. Wilson and other Democratic politicians had given federal appointments to negroes in recent years only in the hopes of getting their support in the elections. Mr. Longshore did not deny that Republicans had sought the negro vote and had appointed negroes to office; but he did denounce such practices. He showed Mr. Thompson up in a mighty bad light as trying to lay that kind of stuff on the Repubicans when the Democrats are as deep in the mud as the Repubicans are in the mire.

After Judge Longshore had finished Mr. Thompson up good and proper on his Civil War and negro bunk, he then proceeded to deal at length with some of the fallacies of modern Democracy as portrayed and perpetrated on the country under the regime of Wilsonism. The league of nations and Mr. Wilson's trip to Europe in the interest of same was held up to his hearers as the mightiest piece of political indiscretion, and the most monstrous governmental blunder that this country had ever witnessed.

It may be truly said that when Mr. Longshore had finished with his great speech there was not enough of Fritz Thompson's old hide-bound political prejudices left to be worthy of mention. He made a speech the like of which he alone can make. It was a characteristic speech; it was a timely speech; it was an able speech; and more than all it was a speech that met the approval of his hearers because they realized that it was the real unadulterated gospel truth about Alabama and the South and the United States so far is politics is concerned.

This meeting and speech-making was, as stated in the beginning, the opening of the campaign of Judge Reynolds for the United States Senate, and of Judge Longshore for Congressman from the Fourth District of Alabama. They will continue the fight throughout the state and the District, and the voters will this year have a chance of viewing the sensible side of politics in Alabama and the United States as well as the old dry and empty skeleton of the Democratic side. This campaign is going to be an eye-opener for the people of Alabama. It is going to wake up such fellows as Fritz Thompson, who are deceiving themselves by the idea that the people will forever follow them in their blind prejudices and vote the Democratic ticket and place Democrats in power at Washington only to be answered back, "Depart from me, I know ye not," when they ask the government for anything that they need.

While Nero fiddled Rome burned to the ground. And in like manner while Fritz and other Democratic leaders of Alabama and the South are fiddling their time away, some of these times, and not far away, the old Ship of Solid Democracy will go on the rocks, and be beaten to pieces by the great flood of growing Republican sentiment throughout this the fairest portion of our great country.

SHELBY COUNTY CITIZEN TELLS OPINION OF COX AND THE LEAGUE.

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson said vote for me and I will keep you out of the war. In less than eight months after his election we were thrown into one of the greatest wars ever known to mankind. But Mr. Wilson was playing politics then; he wanted to be re-elected, and was, on that promise, "I will keep you out of war." Now the candidate, Mr. Jas. Cox, says, "We must have the League of Nations as presented to us by the father, Woodrow Wilson, and forever have peace and quietude."

Yes, we have peace now and 16,000 of our American boys are across the seas to-day guarding the interests of those whom we had to fight with all the adverse circumstances to maintain their republic.

Yes, Jimmy, as he is called, is a new doctor, but he has the same old remedy that the father, Woodrow, had, the League of Notions, a document that will forever destroy, if accepted with Article X, the sovereignty of this great Republic.

Now with all the oppression by the autocrats of the old world mess, Mr. Wilson and Jimmy Cox say that we must link our precious union to those of the old world, and be ready at all times to to defend and protect the political integrity and territorial boundaries of the great empires of the world. Article X guarantees this and the Congress of the United States nor the President have anything to say or do, other than as members of the league. Vote against the sending of our boys over there, and America has one vote against 32 of the empires of the world. Wake up mothers, and fathers and young men, look and see what you are about to have thrust upon you, that is, if the Democratic party should be placed in power again this fall. Cox says we must have the League as Woodrow Wilson brought it to us, and if you vote for Cox it means a vote for the League of Nations, which will continually be sending your boys across the briny deep to fight for the greedy and autocratic empires from now, henceforth and forever. Would you sacrifice your blood-bought liberties to satisfy the fancy dream of world dominion in the mind of a man like Woodrow Wilson, who has spent a great part of his term as President of the United States, in foreign countries dining with kings, queens and princes?

Now Mr. Cox says vote for me and I will bring peace to the country by harnessing the league of nations upon you—a peace that will be lasting and satisfying. God forbid that such league with its iron hand of opression should ever be placed upon the heads of the liberty-loving people of this the only free and independent nation on the face of the earth. We are not alarmed. The fathers and mothers of this country, who love God and believe in the promotion of Christianity, will never give their approval to such a move that is destined to destroy the foundation of our civil liberties.

This question is one that should receive more thoughtful consideration than anything that has ever confronted our country. It simply means, if put upon us, the destruction of the only free nation left upon the face of the earth, and joining it to the greedy empires of the earth who are controlled by the Catholic church. To join this league as presented by Woodrow Wilson is placing our future destiny in the hands of the Catholic church, and we know that the Catholic church is the greatest destroyer of human liberty that has ever been loosed upon the face of the earth. To join them in the league of nations, we will be subject to their call, for they will vote a majority in the league. What could be a better scheme for the Catholics to get control of the world? It plays exactly into their hands.

What will the liberty-loving people of America think of Wilson and Cox for advocating such a combination as will mean such utter destruction to every principle of American integrity? By their love of humanity and the rights guaranteed us under our constitution, they will bury Wilson and Cox so deep that they will not emerge by resurrection day.

Talk about tying the future posterity of this Christian nation to the Catholic church, which says to you that the public schools of this country turn out thieves and robbers and that they are not Anglo Saxons, but Anglo Maniacs. If you were to put them in power they would destroy every church and schoolhouse in this country, and they would force you to attend the Catholic church, and a refusal would mean that your freedom to live outside of a penitentiary will cease right there, and your place henceforth would be behind prison walls.

Bind yourself to the dominant figure in the league of nations, the Catholic church, which will tell you that if you are not maried by a priest, you are living in adultery, and that your children are illegitimate? If you are in favor of this condition, vote for Cox. That is what it means. Not a matter of whethtr you want a Democrat or Republican for President, but a matter of whether you want the League and Catholic dominion or not.

If you will vote for that stalwart American, Warren G. Harding, you will forever be protected from such imposition, and your liberties will be safeguarded. He has done this in the Senate. He helped to keep that infamous imposition from being adopted by the Senate, and thereby helped to save the blood-bought liberties of the people of America. And he promises that he will continue to defend the civil and religious liberties of our people from foreign encroachment if he is elected to the position of our Chief Executive.

Harding is a member of the Baptist church of this country, that has no tinge of the dominant figure of the league. He is a Baptist, but no better than a Methodist, Presbyterian or any other Protestant because he is a Baptist; but you can be assured that he is in all things American, and ready to defend every tradition of Americanism that has been handed down to the sons and daughters of this country from fathers who stained the hillsides and valleys with their blood fighting for these liberties.

Harding stands for the flag. Cox says he stands for Wilson and the League of Nations. Harding is a true American, one who is not afraid, and he has the courage of his convictions.

Next November the people of this country will either further preserve their liberties by electing Harding and Coolidge, or surrender those liberties to the autocratic empires of the old world through the league of nations by voting for Cox.

Soldier be Buried at Samaria Today

The body of Lieut. Rufus C. Calloway, who died in France on November 1, 1918, will be committed to its final resting place in Samaria cemctery, near Clanton, on Thursday afternoon August 26th, at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Ralph Calloway, father of the dead soldier, was in Clanton Monday and stated that he had received a telegram from New York City, stating that the body was shipped from there last Saturday, and would reach Maplesville on Tuesday morning.

Many friends of the deceased in Chilton county will be glad to know of the plans of the final burial in order that they may attend the services and pay their last respects to the memory of the young man.

RESOLUTIONS

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 23, 1920.
Editor Union-Banner:

Will you kindly publish these resolutions of the Eastern Star?

To Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Smith, at the regular meeting of Thorsby Chapter No. 154, O. E. S. The following resolutions were adopted:

First, that the Thorsby Chapter express their heart felt sympathy to Sister and Brother R. M. Smith in their great bereavement in the loss of their only son. May the bright Star in the East shine into their home, heal and comfort their bleeding hearts, is our sincere prayer.

Be it resolved further that each and every member of our chapter should do all in their power to comfort our sister and brother.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be placed on file, and one copy be sent to county paper, and one copy sent to Sister and Brother Smith.

ZACK LOWERY.

Miss Alpha Ratliff, the little daughter of Wess Ratliff, has been released from the Clanton Infirmary and has returned to her home after a long but successful fight against the great odds of a very severe attack of appendicitis. When Drs. Gragg and Marcus performed the operation some three or four weeks ago it was generally admitted that the case was so far advanced that there was little hope for the recovery of the unfortunate little victim. But the skillful minds of these two faithful doctors, and the careful attention of the nurse brought the patient to a seemingly most miraclous recovery. Even the doctors say they don't hardly see how it was done, but it was.

Foreign—

Workers in all the towns in Upper Silesia have struck in protest against the war between Russia and Poland. A crowd at Kattowitz attacked a detachment of French cavalry, killing one trooper, whereupon the French opened fire with machine guns and grenades, killing nine and wounding twenty-six.

French troops clashed with the inhabitants of the town of Kattowitz, an important mining town of Upper Silesia, eleven persons being killed and twenty-six wounded. Polish troops attempted to break up a mass meeting at Rybnik, about twenty-five miles southwest of Kattowitz, and in the resulting disorder one person was killed

Uninterrupted rifle fire and hand-grenade explosions are reported to be proceeding at Kattowitz, Upper Silesia, where serious fighting occurred between French troops and civilians who struck in protest against the Russo-Polish war and demanded disarmament of the occupational troops. The French officer commanding at the office of the inter-allied commission is said to be directing negotiations with the crowd and it is alleged held out the prospect of the soldiers' arms being surrendered.

Reports of Polish military successes have reached Warsaw. The population is eagerly awaiting news from Minsk, where the Polish peace delegates are to negotiate with the representatives of the Russian Soviet government.

The strike fever is said to be spreading all over the island of Jamaica, which is due, according to economist, to the increased cost of living. The civil government, becoming scared, has called out the police to assist the military contingent.

A successful counter offensive is reported to have ben launched on the Warsaw front under the leadership of the Polish commander-in-chief. The Russians are reported to be retreating at several points.

In the fighting in the region of Radzymin, a chaplain was killed while leading the attacking forces clad in his church habit and with a crucifix in his hand. Five Polish oficers also are reported to have been killed.

Poland's army is rapidly following up the retreating enemy northeast and east of Warsaw, and further successes for the Poles are reported. The recapture of Sokolow, Drohiczyn and Biala, with thousands of prisoners and great amounts of war material, is reported in an official communique. At Siedloe the Poles captured armed volunteer Jewish detachments composed of local communists.

To the northwest of Warsaw the Bolsheviki attacked Plock in a drive designed to carry them across the Vistula, where there is a pontoon bridge, but a Polish counter stroke broke the attack. In this operation the poles were aided by civilians who fought side by side with the infantrymen.

Another tragic chapter of the series of Arab risings against the British in Mesopotamia has been received at Bombay. The message says that Mr. Drigley, a political officer; Brandfield, commandant of the levies; Mr. Buchanan, an irrigation oficer, and two British non-commissioned officers were killed at Shas Raba, Mesopotamia.

Washington—

An immediate embargo on the movement of coal to tidewater except upon a definite showing that the coal arrival at piers would be unloaded into vessels with reasonable promptness has been agreed upon by the railroads, it was announced in Washington by the American Railroad association.

The armored cruiser Pittsburg and a destroyer have been ordered to the Baltic sea to protect American interests there. The vessels are now at Cherbourg, France, and it is announced at the navy department that they will proceed immediately for Russian waters.

Use of New Orleans as the army transport shipping center of Panama and Porto Rico has been ordered discontinued by Secretary Baker.

A dispatch from Helsingfors says that Finland and Soviet Russia have concluded an armistice.

Appointment of a commission to study the coal situation may be made very shortly by the attorney general.

Cabled reports from Tokio that a plot to "hold" the party of American congressmen now visiting the far east when it arrived in Korea had been unearthed, were characterised by Kinzie Kimm, chairman of the Korean commission, who is in Washington, as "another groundless Japanese fabrication." "No sane or even insane Korean would dream of holding the American congressional party," Mr. Kimm declared.

A contribution from Secretary Daniels started on its way around the world a unique collection box which will be sent to every Marine post and station on the map to raise funds for the erection of a memorial tablet in the Belleau wood cemetery, France, to the Marines who lost their lives in that battle. The fund is being raised by the Belleaun Wood chapter, American Legion, composed of 308 women who enlisted in the Marine corps reserve during the war.

The war department, in announcing the state groups composing the army corps, as established in accordance with the provisions of the new army bill, designated the Fourth corps area to embrace the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, with headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga.

The American and French governments are in entire agreement as to the future of both Poland and Russia, Secretary Colby declares, in a formal statement interpreting Francu's rejoinder to the American note to Italy. His statement accompanied the publication of the translation of the French note which was delivered to the state department on August 14 by Prince de Bearn, the French charge.

Press advices from Seoul, Korea, allege widespread Korean plots to hold the party of American congressmen at present visiting the Far East for the purpose of creating complications between Japan and America.

The department of justice does not intend to make any effort to fix the price of coal, but it is determined, according to officials in that department, to keep the price of coal within reasonable bounds, and it is opined that the price is all out of reason.

Active steps to limit the prices charged consumers for coal in various parts of the country will be begun shortly by the department of justice, it is said by officials

Domestic—

Regret over his opponent's announcement that he probably will not make an address at the Ohio State Fair August 31, was expressed by Governor Cox at Columbus, Ohio, when informed. "I am very sorry Senator Harding is not going to speak," he said, "as I already have spent more than an hour preparing my speech which I hoped to deliver from the same platform. I had expected to request that I be permitted to speak first, granting the courtesy to the senator of being permitted to answer me."

Governor Cox recently pardoned three convicts from the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. He interviewed each personally before granting clemency. Two convicts who also had petitioned for pardons were sent back

Four more coal operators at Knoxville, Tenn., were held to the December federal grand jury by United States Commissioner Powers following hearings on charges of making excess profits in coal deals in violation of the Lever law. Those bound over were A. M. Stewart of the Clearfield Jellico Coal company, and T. P. Witherspoon, Emery B. Davis and G. G. Crowley of the Blue Diamond Sales company. Bond in each instance was fixed at $1,000.

Mrs. Clara Jergenson, Racine, who has been asleep at the county asylum at Waukesha, Wis., for more than two years, has regained consciousness.

Two bales of cotton have been sold in Telfair (Ga.) county. The price paid was 35 cents a pound.

Indignant at their failure to get recognition in city and state patronage, prominent negroes of Baltimore, Md., have nominated W. Ashby Hawkins, a negro, for the United States senate to oppose the Democratic and Republican candidates. It will be necessary for 500 persons to sign the petition before his name can be placed on the ballot.

Three unknown negro highwaymen entered the general merchandise store of I. Shinfield in Atlanta, Ga., at night and, with drawn guns, forced him to elevate his hands above his head. Mrs. Shinfield appeared on the scene and, with an empty sodawater bottle, knocked one of the robbers out of the store. She seized an empty ten-pound lard can and threw it at another and the third fled for his life.

The Western Union Telegraph company, in pursuance of a profit-sharing policy, announced more than a month ago, began, on August 16, paying to employees over the world nearly two million dollars.

Arthur T. Walker, former clerk, is having quite a run on the front pages of the New York newspapers. Walker recently was left a fifty million dollar residuary estate, Edward B. Searles being his benefactor, and New York is unable to understand how it happens that a man with an income of around ten thousand dollars a day should continue to live in a two-room flat in Brooklyn and go to work every morning at nine o'clock. That, it appears, is what Walker does.

A band of New York City river pirates attempted to loot a North river pier where $500,000 worth of liquor was stored, and were driven off by a watchman in a pistol battle. Several of them, who jumped overboard from a launch in which they drew up to the pier, are thought by the police to have been drowned.

A pitched battle between Asheville, N. C., officers and moonshiners, lasting for several minutes, preceded the capture of the largest illicit still ever taken by county forces. The moonshiners got away. No one was hurt.

REPUBLICANS TO FACE HARD TASK

Extravagance of Administration Responsible for Much of Enormous Debt.

COUNTRY CALLS FOR RELIEF

With the G. O. P. In Power Tax Burdens Will Be Lifted From Shoulders of the People as Was Case After the Civil War.

The next president to assume control of the nation will have a mighty task to his hand. Only a part of it will be the consideration of its Brobdingnagian tax bill. That word is used to indicate that the bill is a whopper. Its Gargantuan size is as unfamiliar to many as the only terms in which it may be fittingly expressed. Preliminary figures compiled by the bureau of internal revenue show that during the fiscal year ending June 30 the people of the United States paid into the federal treasury the staggering total of $5,410,284,875 in taxes. It is the greatest annual tax bill ever assessed against any nation; it is nearly 75 per cent more than the taxes paid during 1918 or 1919, when war expenses were at the peak.

Estimating the population of the United States at 120,000,000, the taxes paid last year amount to an average of $45 per capita. It is a sum no other nation on earth could stand. The total represents about 2 per cent of the aggregate wealth of the country. Much of this enormous debt was saddled on the country by the waste and extravagance of the administration, particularly during war, but still continuing. The revenue derived from income and excess profits taxes during the fiscal year amounted to $3,944,555,737. This was a heavy handicap to place upon industry struggling to reach a normal status.

The American people never again should be called upon to pay such a tax bill and much of it could have been avoided this time by the administration which is asking the people for a new lease of life. With the reasonable economy promised by its opposing party it should be possible to reduce the tax burden from year to year as that party reduced them after the Civil war. To see that it is done Senator Harding has pledged his brains, his strength and his sacred honor.

Senator Harding does not believe in wielding a club to make members of any legislative vote for any question. That is the Democratic method.

Democratic View of Coolidge.

In an editorial in which it speaks of Governor Coolidge donning the working garb of his forefathers and toiling, as they did, in the fields, the New York Times, Democratic, says of the Republican candidate for vice president: "In putting it on Governor Coolidge honors a vanished race of clear-headed, ironical, independent and most desirable citizens. He has their courage, their honesty, their shrewdness, their capacity for hard work, their public spirit. There is no political masquerading about him. He has gone back to the old place. It has interested him to don his grandfather's working clothes. His granfather's virtues he doesn't have to don or borrow. They are his by inheritance and nature."

Let the Country Know.

The wish of Franklin D. Roosevelt that every American citizen might have witnessed the meeting that Sunday morning of those two great men is echoed by all of us. Two men shaking hands doesn't interest us but the citizenry would have liked to have been with them then to inquire what were those secret obligations Mr. Wilson entered into in Paris with Great Britain and Japan which Mr. Cox without explaining said: "What he promised, I shall, if elected, endeavor with all my strength to give."

"The laboring man who seeks a square deal from a political party will get it from the Republican party."—Senator Harding.

Heavy Going for Democrats.

With the president pulling one way and the congressional committee pulling another, and the deague organization making heavy weather in Europe, what wonder that the Democratic presidential nominee and his manager are having their difficulties with the ratification issue?

Their troubles are the greater, too, because the Republicans, realizing their position, are openly expressing a determination to hold their opponents to the casus belli selected with noise and fury at San Francisco.

Coolidge Commands Confidence.

It is certain that whatever public responsibility comes to Governor Coolidge, the country will be able to tell where he stands and what to expect from him. He will build no smoke screens to hide his policies; he will indulge in no evasions and no vagueness. More than ever, Senator Harding ought to be well satisfied with the running mate the convention gave him, and more than ever the public ought to have confidence in the soundness and good balance of the Republican national ticket.

MAN KILLED BY PUNCH ON JAW

Controversy Over Responsibility for Automobile Accident Ends Fatally.

NECK BROKEN BY BLOW

Man Is Hit When He Makes Uncomplimentary Remark About Woman and Is Dead Before He Hits the Ground—Four Arrested.

Greeley, Colo.—A punch which landed on the jaw killed William Swint of Denver. The blow broke Swint's neck and he was dead before his body hit the ground.

Four men, members of an automobile tourist party en route from Denver to Wyoming, are under arrest as witnesses to the killing of Swint. One of the men, R. H. Blackburn of Wichita, Kan., is said to have struck the blow that killed Swint. The four men with two women, wives of members of the party, left Denver in two automobiles bound for Wyoming, where they intended to look up some homesteads.

Cars in Collision.

Swint and his friend, H. Farrington, also left Denver about the same time intending to do some fishing in the northern part of the state.

The Swint machine overtook the homestead seekers just south of Fort Lupton, and in trying to pass one of their cars, collided with the one driven by Blackburn. After inspecting the damage Swint agreed to drive to Fort Lupton where he said he would make a money settlement. When they arrived there a controversy arose as to who was to blame for the accident.

Swint, it is alleged, made some uncomplimentary remarks concerning one of the women of the party, whereupon Blackburn struck him a powerful blow on the jaw with his clenched fist, knocking him down.

Caught by Deputies.

The homestead seekers then quickly re-entered their car and drove rapidly northward leaving Swint lying on the ground. Harrington at first thought his friend had been knocked unconscious and it was some time before he realized that he was dead.

Harrington stopped some passing automobiles and asked them to send him assistance, which they did. When it was found that Swint was dead, a telephone message was sent to the sheriff at Greeley, who immediately sent deputy sheriffs in different directions looking for the Blackburn party. They were found north of Evans and placed under arrest.

MAN SOUGHT "SUNDAY" WIFE

Child's Illness Made Father Seek Woman Whom He Saw Only One Day a Week.

Chicago.—Because his child was seriously ill, U. C. Hatfield, appealed to the authorities to help him locate his wife, whom he sees on Sundays only.

The separation of the couple was due, not to trouble, the man declared, but to the fact that "she wanted to work, so she started out to find a job and a furnished room. She didn't give me her address. We were together every Sunday though."

Hatfield wanted his wife to see their baby before threatened death came.

Benefit to Little Girl Taking Ziron Described by Mother Who Says Skin Is Now Clear.

WHEN their little ones are poorly, anxious parents are often unable to find just what to do. If the child's health is run-down, and needs strengthening, due to poor blood, loss of appetite, or the weakness that follows a spell of sickness, you may benefit by the experience of this father, Mr. A. P. Davidson, who writes from Route 1, Primm, Tenn.:

"I have a little girl, 4 years old, and she had been in bad health for 18 months. Had no appetite. I tried different kinds of medicine.

"I got one bottle of Ziron, and it cleared her skin and gave her appetite. She is very playful, gaining weight every day. I took Ziron. . . .

"I think every one should use one or two bottles (of Ziron) each spring and fall. I am sure that would be better for good health."

The experience of this father has been helped by Ziron since. Ask you in choosing this valuable tonic for similar conditions.

Ask your druggist about it. Ziron is sold with a money back guarantee. He sells it.

FAMOUS OLD BOSTON ABODE

Province House, Once One of the Most Famous Colonial Mansions, Has Been Partially Preserved.

There stands today on Bossworth court in Boston but a portion of the old Province house, a most interesting relic of Colonial days; and the rest of the court is lined with modern office buildings. But in 1820 it was considered a very genteel part of town. Oliver Wendell Holmes lived in the old Province house for 18 years.

At the farther end of the court stands an iron-wrought archway, decorative of design, which was used in the early part of the nineteenth century as an entrance to the governor's garden, a part of the Province house grounds. This has been carefully preserved, as have the stone steps which lead to the lower level. The Province house was immortalized by Hawthorne in his "Twice-Told Tales."

The historic staircase now is gone, and only a portion of the exterior of the house if left. It was built in 1697 by Peter Sargent, a wealthy London merchant, and was considered one of the handsomest residences in town. During the days of its popularity the governor gave many balls there.

It sometimes happens that a law student gives up the law business to engage in the son-in-law business.

Twins are more common among mothers of between twenty-five and thirty-five years than at other ages.

that's a start. There's the man who shadowed you—would you know him again if you saw him?"

I shook my head doubtfully.

"I'm afraid not," I admitted, "you see—"

"Don't bother to explain. You either would or wouldn't, and that's all we need to know now. There's old Mr. Gaston and his wife. It's queer about their ducking out so suddenly and leaving no address, but maybe they're only scared. Let's see who else is there—the Bradford servants and the old man's, the old washerwoman—and the families who live in the house. We've got the circle pretty well covered, haven't we?"

More and more I had begun to appreciate how valuable the services of an experienced detective would be likely to be in helping to solve the mystery.

"Look here, Gorman," I said, "why can't you take charge of this case for us?"

"What's in it?" he asked.

My face fell, and my enthusiasm died a sudden death. Once more I was confronted by the specter of my poverty. Of what use my talking to a high-priced investigator like Gorman when all the money I had in the world was less than two hundred dollars, out of which I had to live until I found employment. Yet I must serve Barbara Bradford.

"If you clear up this case," I announced, "I'll give you every cent I've got in the world."

He shook his head.

"It ain't enough. If I take this case, it won't be for the money that's in it. For that matter I can get all I want from old Gaston for getting his pearls back. That'll be enough."

"Then you will take the case," I cried jubilantly.

"On one condition. That you'll promise to keep everything away from the police."

"I'll promise that for myself and Miss Bradford, too. That was the one reason she advanced against my telling you about things. She was afraid you'd call in the police."

"Never fear about that. There's nothing I'd like better than to put it over that bunch of young reformers they've got down in Center street. This hotel work don't suit me, anyhow. I've been thinking of opening up an office of my own. The recovery of the Gaston pearls would be a nice feather in my cap to start with."

"I see," I replied, "but you'll need money for expenses and that sort of thing, won't you? I have—"

"Leave that part of it to me," he retorted with a quizzical smile. "After all the years I was on the police force I ain't exactly broke by a long shot. All you've got to do is to keep your eyes open and let me know all that goes on in the apartment house. I'll attend to the rest. Don't do anything, though, without consulting me first."

"I'll gladly promise that."

"Good enough. We'd better arrange then to meet here every day at three sharp. It's as good a place as any."

"I'll be here."

"And look out you're not trailed. They may try shadowing you again."

"Who do you mean by they?" I asked eagerly.

"Them that trailed you yesterday," replied Gorman with a grin. "If you don't know, I don't know either—yet."

From his manner I was confident that he already had a shrewd suspicion as to the identity of some of the miscreants. The maze in the center of which he had placed Miss Bradford and myself meant far more to him, undoubtedly, than it did to me. More than likely his vast knowledge of the methods of criminals and his acquaintanceship with others like Lefty Moore had given him clues enough as to where to look for the plotters. I realized that it would be useless to question him further. He would admit suspecting no one until he was sure of their guilt, a quality I admired greatly.

"You can count on me," I repeated. "I'll be here at three tomorrow."

Yet how foolish it was for any of us to predict what we will be doing or where we will be twenty-four hours from now. Seldom do things happen in the routine of our lives as we had anticipated. I was not there the next day at the time appointed. By no possibility could I have been there, however much I might have wished to. Many things had happened in quick succession.

How it came about that my promise to meet Gorman went unfulfilled can best be explained by narrating the events of the evening after I returned to the Granddeck. It was nearly five when I left the detective. I strolled leisurely down town and had dinner in the cafe where on one occasion I had seen the scar-faced man. I lingered there for a long time over my coffee hoping in vain that he might appear. I even ventured to cautiously question the waiter and head waiter, describing the man as best I could, but both of them insisted that they never had seen any such person. As I walked home I kept a wary eye out to make sure I was not being followed, but apparently he was now shadowing me.

It was nine-thirty when I reached home. It had been arranged that Barbara about ten would signal me that we might have a chat from our respective windows. As I sat in my room waiting for the time to come, I was reviewing the case in all its aspects. Indeed there was hardly a waking moment that I was not thinking of the many mysteries about us. I was wondering if, when the case was cleared up the mysterious whispers that we all had heard would also be explained. I recalled Claire Bradford's unexpected visit to my apartment the evening before and her confusion when I had captured her. I wondered if the explanations she had offered had been the truth. Was she really trying to locate the source of the whispers? I looked interestedly up at the section of the wall that I had found her inspecting. What had she hoped to discover there?

I decided to make a close inspection of both sides of the wall. As I lighted up the sitting room and hall for this purpose, something unusual came to my notice that had hitherto escaped me entirely.

THE INNER WALL OF MY ROOM—the one running along the hall of the apartment—HAD THE APPEARANCE OF BEING AT LEAST FOUR FEET THICK.

It seemed so absurd that I refused to believe the evidence my eyes had given me. In these modern days of steel construction there was no reason for a wall being of medieval proportions. I sprang to my great-aunt's work basket and began rummaging to see if I could find a tape measure, and luckily my search was quickly rewarded.

I sketched a rough diagram of the rear rooms, and began measuring them off, carefully checking my figures as I went along. I found myself growing wildly excited as the tape measure confirmed what my eyes already had told me. The inner wall was at least four feet thick.

With thrills at the thought of the possibility of a secret passage there, I climbed up on a chair just as Claire Bradford had done, and began inspecting the wall inch by inch. Even as I did so I could not help laughing at myself. The idea that a modern apartment building might contain a secret passage was utterly ridiculous, yet as I pounded lightly on the wall it gave forth a hollow sound, vastly different from any other part of the room. I was convinced that between my room and the hall there was space enough at least for a passageway in which a man might walk.

As I, Trembling All Over at the Thought of the Peril She Had Been In, Put My Arms About Her and Helped Her In.

I surveyed with growing interest the wooden paneling that in my room ran clear up to the ceiling. In the other rooms there was no paneling. Mounting the chair again I pressed sharply against the wood at the point from which the sound had seemed to come. It seemed to me it gave a little to my touch. I struck one of the sections a sharp blow. It dropped back a full half-inch, leaving what looked like a doorway—a space three feet wide by five feet high. The bottom of the opening was hardly two feet from the floor. If there was a passageway here, this panel certainly would explain how my rooms had been surreptitiously visited.

Feverishly I worked at the panel trying to push it further back. If there was a passageway there in the wall I was determined to see whither it led. My efforts to move the panel further seemed hopeless. As I worked at it I heard a tapping on my window sill.

It must be Barbara. In my excitement over the find I had forgotten all about the time. I sprang from the chair and rushed to the window. I found her peering out, trying to ascertain why I had not answered her signal.

"Oh," she breathed with relief, as my head appeared "you were there. Did you see the detective?"

"Yes," I replied, speaking as low as my excited state would permit me, "but just now I discovered something vastly more important."

"What is it?"

"A secret passageway leading into my room. It seems to run along the hall. The wall there is at least four feet thick—room for a man to walk. There is a panel in the wall in my room leading into it. I was just prying it open when you signaled."

"Oh, how I wish I could see it!"

"Why can't you? Slip out of your front door, and I'll be at my door to admit you."

"I can't do that. Mother and Claire are in the front part of the house playing bridge with some guests. They will be sure to hear me going out."

"Come in tomorrow morning, then," I suggested.

She did not answer, and before I realized what she was doing, Barbara was out on the ledge making her perilous way across to my window.

"If Claire can do this, I can," she announced triumphantly, as I, trembling all over at the thought of the peril she had been in, put my arms about her and helped her in.

"Darling," I cried, still holding her in my arms, "don't ever do that again. It's too dangerous. Promise me, Barbara, dear, you'll never again try that."

With her pretty face flushed at the terms of endearment that had unwittingly escaped me, she laughingly released herself from my arms.

"That was nothing," she said in a tense whisper. "Where's the panel?"

Relieved to find that she was not angered by my presumption, I hastened to turn up the light and pointed at the hole in the wall. As I had done, she sprang up on the chair and endeavored to push the panel further back, but was unable to budge it. Quicker witted than I, she then tried sliding it along. At the slightest touch it slid back in a groove, revealing the opening—leading into what?

Striking a match, we both of us peered in. The space between the walls was certainly high enough and side enough for a man to walk there in comfort. So far as the flickering light of the match enabled us to judge, it ran the length of the hall, and near its further end there appeared to be some steps.

"Come," cried the intrepid Barbara, "let's explore it."

"No," I said firmly. "We must do nothing until I have seen the detective. We have put the case in his hands."

"But we must find out about it," protested the girl.

"Tomorrow," I said. "We know where it is. We know where the voices and whispers come from now."

"I wonder," she said thoughtfully, "if there is the same sort of a passageway in our apartment?"

"Promise me that if you find there is one, you will not attempt to explore it alone."

As we argued about it we both stopped short and with blanching faces listened. From somewhere—it sounded as if it was right below us—we heard sounds as if two people were struggling. Then came a woman's shriek, a wild scream with the death terror in it. The sound seemed close at hand. It seemed to come right up from the opening in the panel by which we were standing.

Once more there came an awful scream—a scream stopped off short as if some brutal hand had throttled the woman's throat.

"What is it?" cried Barbara.

"Listen," I commanded. "It seems to come from the floor below."

Holding our breaths we strained our ears for further sounds. Suddenly a shot rang out, and there was a thud as if a body had fallen to the floor. Then all was silence.

With terror in our faces we turned to each other, seeking an explanation which neither could give.

"Mother—Claire!" cried Barbara. "They'll be alarmed. I must go back to them at once."

"She's been murdered. Get the police quick."

Taught Chinese Lacemaking.

The art of lacemaking was first taught to the Chinese of the Chefoo district by foreign missionaries about twenty-five years ago. They believed that by teaching lacemaking the women and girls would find profitable employment within their own homes, and the subsequent spread of the industry has fully justified their efforts. Although first taught in Chefoo, Chi Hsia Hsien was the first district in which lace was extensively made.

Time Measured by Candles.

The Chinese, besides using water clocks, also invented joss-sticks, which burned uniformly. The joss-stick is somewhat similar to what good old King Alfred of England is said to have used way back in the eight hundreds. He was a great educator, and discovered that tallow candles could be used for dividing the time which he allowed his nobles in which to make complaints against each other.

GREER INSPECTS PRISON CAMPS

STATE ASSISTANT INTENDS TO UNIFY FARMING AND GARDENING WORK.

PROTEST INCREASE IN RATES

Objection Is Registered Before Public Service Commission Against the Raise.

Montgomery.—L. F. Greer, assistant state inspector of prisons and prison camps, has begun a tour of Alabama's seventeen institutions, where he will endeavor to unify the farming and gordening work carried on by the state's charges. Through the methods which Mr. Greer intends to introduce, it is expected that a material annual saving to the state will be effected, by production of the inmates of the state's institutions of a large quantity of food during the long summer months.

Protest Against Temporary Increase.

Montgomery. — The only protest voiced against the proposed temporary scale of increase in freight rates for railroads in Alabama, pending confirmation of the award of 25 per cent by the ederal labor board, was the objection registered before the Alabama Public Service Commission by Hugh Morrow, representing the Sloss-Sheffield interests is Birmingham, and J. L. Davidson, secretary of the Birmingham Coal Operators' Association.

Manganese Ore Converted To Steel.

Mobile.—Carrying the first cargo of the manganese ore brought here from Brazil by the steamship Santa Rosalia for the United States Steel Corporation, the steamboat Clio left for Birmingport, according to information from the local office of the Mississippi - Warrior system. The Santa Rosalia brought the first of what ies said to be a series of shipments of this ore through the port of Mobile for the mills of the United States Steel Corporation in the Birmingham district, where it will be converted into steel of a very high quality. Because of inadequate river shipping facilities, a condition the state harbor board is seeking to remedy through an amendment to the state constitution to provide state aid for the improvement of harbors and river traffic, a large amount of the ore will have to be shipped by rail, it is stated. The cargo of the Santa Rosalia was 7,800 tons, the largest importation of manganese ore to come into this port.

Rains Damage Cotton.

Dadeville.—The excessive rains for the past two weeks have damaged the cotton crop in this section to a large extent. Cotton is very late any way, and the rains being favorable for the boll weevil, it is thought now hat the yield will be considerably below that of last year. The corn crop is very fine and is about made.

Weevils Multiply After Rain Ceases.

Tuscaloosa.—M. S. Fitts, who lives on the Hargrove road, and who owns one o fthe best farms in the county, made a thorough examination of his cotton field, after the rains ceased. He says he found from two to five boll weevils in every open bloom, and does not think that another boll of cotton will develop in this sections.

Coosa River Reaches Danger Stage.

Gadsden.—The Coosa River at this place has reached the danger stage, and backwaters are now over the lowlands near the city. It is feared much damage has been done to corn through overflows, but the beating rains of the past week have certainly injured cotton to a great extent, according to all expert observers.

Can Handle Crop.

Tuscaloosa.—After the burning of the compress at the depot several days ago, it was feared there would not be warehouse room in the city to take care of the cotton that would come this way. Csarlie Davis, who has put his warphouse in shape to handle cotton, says his building and the Rosenau warehouse will be sufficient to house the cotton that will be brought here, while Northport has ample facilities for taking care of the crop made on the west side of the river.

Alleged Cotton Fraud Case Heard.

Anniston.—Taking of testimony for the government continued in the trial of the Savage Cotton Company officials and others charged with use of the mails to defraud. Women witnesses who had testified at the hearing in May, again gave their testimony, including Miss Ethel Hayes, secretary to H. T. Lamkin, one of the North Carolina cotton men, alleged to have been victims of the cotton deals, which are said to have involved approximately $500,000. Miss Sarah C. Cunningham, formerly stenographer in the Savage Company's offices at Talladega, identified papers and documents relating to the alleged fraudulent deals. A number of government witnesses are yet to be called, in the government's effort to convict D. H. Riddle, W. A. Savage, A. M. Savage, W. O. Wooten, W. G. Hardy, T. A. St. John and S. E. Graham.

Inspectors End Work In Mobile.

Mobile.—Completing the work of checking up the books and collecting delinquent taxes from all persons or firms in Mobile required by law to pay the special sales war tax on certain commodities, the corps of 11 United States tax inspectors, headed by Gunter O'Rear, with their headquarters in Birmingham, have left the city. They reported that they had no trouble with anybody in the city in adjusting their sales taxes. Their work here was completed in two weeks—exactly the length of time they had scheduled themselves to do it in.

Four More Miles Finishes Pike.

Talladega.—With the completion of work on about 4 miles of roadway between here and Howell's Cove, which is being reworked and recherted, the pike leading from Talladega to Lincoln will have been finished. This highway is said to be one of the best in this section having been built under government specifications, with nothing over a 3 per cent grade at any point and a culverts constructed of concrete. In highway construction Talladega County has been taken rank among the most progressive counties in this conection in the state. Standard pikes are gradually reaching out over the county while the present program contemplates a complete system of substantial roadways throughout the county.

Lunch Stands Closed.

Montgomery. — No more lunches will be peddled to passenger on trains stopping at Calera. The places that heretofore have furnished these lunches have been closed by order of Dr. S. W. Welch, state health officer. Dr. Welch states that on several occasions in recent months he had found the places in which the lunches referred to are prepared were insanitary and improvements ordered by him were not installed. Furthermore, he states it has been reported to him recently one case of ptomaine poisoning and two cases of cholera morbus, which were directly traceable to sandwiches sold by the lunch rooms in questions.

SWOPE COMES THROUGH

Congressman King Swope of Kentucky had the distinction of opening the debate on the soldiers bonus bill which passed the House of Representatives in the closing days of the last Congress. Mr. Swope takes a special pride in his record on legislation for the benefit of world war veterans as well as those of former wars. Some of the measures which received his hearty support were the so-called "Sweet bill" increasing the compensation of disabled soldiers, a bill to reform courts-martial practice, bills to increase the pensions of Spanish, Civil, and Mexican war veterans, and the soldiers' bonus measure.

Capt. Swope was a cracker jack officer in the army. The editor of the Union-Banner was a "buck" under his command and we know that he can hold a tight line. Mr. Swope seems to be holding his own in Congress just as he did in the army, and we wish him every success.

COX'S FATAL BLUNDER

It becomes more apparent every day that the recent pilgrimage of Gov. Cox to the Wilson shrine at Washington, and his solemn avowal of devotion to the policies of the President, have split the ranks of Democracy. Those who nominated Gov. Cox at San Francisco thought they were naming a man with some independence of mind, and the courage to reach and upholdhis own decesious. When Cox was nominated he should have become convinced that he was a bigger man than Wilson in his party councils. The Wilson candidate had been defeated at the convention and Mr. Cox had won out. Instead of hastening to Washington to receive his instructions from the president, Democrats feel that Gov. Cox should have written Mr. Wilson outlining his interpretation of the party platform and defining what his stand would be on the league of nations issue. Instead of that they have witntssed two cringing candidates soliciting an audience with the deposed head of their party, and emerging from the conference palpably awestruck by the words of wisdom they had heard, adopting as their own the policies of the repudiated boss. It was a sickening sight to those who thought they had picked upstanding men for candidates.

WHO EXALTETH HIMSELF SHALL BE ABASED

Wahington, August 24.—That Cox uses the language of the Pharisee and places the brand of insincerity upon his own utterances, is the assertion of the Republican Publicity Association in a statement given out today. The statement says:

No man familiar with scripturt will fail to observe the striking similarity between the Cox declaraton in the opening paragraph of his speech of acceptance that he thanks God that he is free and unfettered and the declaration of the Pharisee that "I thank God that I am not as other men." If Cox's statement is true, it is the first time in history that Tammany Hall has given its support in the convention to a candidate without knowing pretty dtfinitely what he would do if nominated and elected. The haste of Mr. Cox to deny obligations with which he has not been charged and the well known customs of Tammany leaders combine to cast doubt upon the sicerity f his statement.

But the truthfulness of his assertion of freedom need not be left to inference or suspicion. Mr. Cox has already given the lit to his declaration that he is unfettered by promists. On July 18, at the close of his conference at the White House, he declared that whatever Mr. Wilson had promised, he would put forth his best effort to give.

It is notorious that President Wilson made promises which he concealed from the American people even in violation of his express agreement that the promise should be disclosed. In the treaty alliance with France and Great Britain, for instance, it was agreed that that treaty should be submitted to the Senate at the same time as the treaty with Germany. In spite that agreement, President Wilson neither submitted the treaty of this withholding of information concerning his agreement, yet tht Democratic nominee for the presidency has bound himself to perform all the promises Mr. Wilson may have made.

Mr. Cox not only does not take up the standard of Democracy free from promises but has made the most amazing and subservient promise ever known in American politics. If Mr. Cox would sacrifice his intellectual independence by making a promise in blank as he did on July 18, after he had secured the nomination, how can he expect anyone to believe his claim that he had made no promises in order to secure the coveted place at the head of the ticket?

By the long list of broken pledges the Democratic party forfeited the confidence of the country. By opening his speech of acceptance with sacrilegious protestations of political virtue, Mr. Cox invites the suspicion that he is a great hypocrite as his party or the historic Pharisee whose language he saw fit to appropriate. The nation has just suffered more than seven years of a holier-than- thou executive and is not likely to subject itself to another.

SHERIFF'S SALE—REAL ESTATE

The State of Alabama,
Chilton County.

By virtue of an execution issued out of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, and to me directed, whereby I, as Sheriff of said County, was commanded to make the sum of Twenty Two Thousand Seven Hundred Twelve and 38-100 Dollars principal and interest, and Twenty Three and 85-100 Dollars cost of suit, the amount of a certain judgment and costs therein, obtained at the Fall Term, 1916 of said Court, against W. I. Mullins, E. A. Matthews, W. H. Sartor, P. D. Wilson and N. A. Kicker and in favor of Birmingham Trust and Savings Co., a corporation, and also by virtue of another certain execution issued out of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, and to me directed, whereby I, as Sheriff of said County, was commanded to make the sum of Twenty One Thousand One Hundred four and 35-100 Dollars, principal and interest (less a credit of $5009.61) and Twenty One and 15-100 Dollars cost of suit, the amount of a certain judgment and costs therein obtained at the Fall Term, 1916 of said Court, against W. I. Mullins, E. A. Matthews, W. H. Sartor, P. D. Wilson and N. A. Kicker and in favor of the Birmingham Trust and Savings Co., a corporation, I have levied upon and will sell to the highest bidder for cash at Public sale at the Court House door of said County, between the hours of 11 o'clock A.M. and 4 o'clock P.M., on all the right, title, interest and claim of the above named W. I. Mullins, in and to the following described real estate, viz:

Monday, the 20th day of Sept., 1920,

A certain lot or parcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad, described and bounded as follows, to-wit: Commencing at a point on the line of the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company two hundred and ten (210) feet south of the intersection of said right of way and Main Street (said Main Street now being known as Second Avenue) and running thence in a westerly direction parallel with said Main Street four hundred and eighty-five (485) feet, more or less, to the line of W. D. Sartor's land as said line of W. D. Sartor's land was known or existed on the 10th day of August, 1893, thence in a southerly direction along the line of said Sartor land line and a continuation thereof three hundred (300) feet, thence in an easterly direction parallel to said Main Street four hundred and eighty-five (485) feet, more or less, to said right of way, thence in a northerly direction along said right of way three hundred (300) feet to the point of beginning, being a part of the land which was conveyed to John Randolph by F. C. Randolph on the 12th day of February, (1892) by deed which is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama, in Volume 24 of Record of Deeds on Page 387. The said lot or parcel of land above described is known by the Official Map of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, and marked upon said Map "E. Y. McMorris University School." The words "Main Street" wherever they occur in the foregoing description refer to the street now known as Second Avenue.

Also a lot or parcel of land west of the South and North Alabama Railroad described and bounded as follows: Beginning at the south east corner of the lot marked on the Official Map of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, "E. Y. McMorris University School" and running thence west one hundred and sixty (160) feet, thence south eighty (80) feet, thence east forty (40) feet, thence south two hundred and eighty (280) feet, thence east to the right of way of the South and North Alabama Railroad Company, thence north to the point of beginning.

ATKINSON APPOINTED STATE CAMPAIGN MANAGER.

Mr. J. B. Atkinson has been appointed as State Campaign Manager of the Republican party in Alabama, having received his appointment thru Chairman Long of the State Republican Executive Committee.

Mr. Atkinson has opened State Campaign headquarters in Clanton, and upon entering upon his duties, makes the following announcement:

"I feel like the Republican ticket will poll a vote at the coming election that will be an eye-opener in Alabama." Mr. Atkinson further impresses his determination in the interest of the Republican party by asserting that he will render every aid and assistance to the party in an effort to secure the election of the entire Republican ticket.

He invites every Republican in the county to call at the Headquarters and greet [illegible]

KINKS IN THE LION,S TAIL

The expansion policy, closely followed by England for over a century, is precisely that which the league of nations must adopt if its principles are to be carried out. It is the theory of the league to dominate the world, and to carry that theory into execution it must follow closely the methods adopted by England in extending the British dominions. But the people of England are chafing under a foreign policy that forces them into almost continuous military campaigns in various parts of the world. Not only are Britons generally calling for a change, but some of the leading minds of the Empire are condemning further expenditures for territorial expansion.

In the first place it is felt that England has taken upon herself too many mandates, and she has on her shoulders half a dozen foreign countries, in addition, all of which are in a state of revolution. Palestine, Armenia, Turkey, Persia, East Africa, and Mesopotamia are all discontented, and active rebellions are in progress in Ireland and India. Mr. Asquith, Lord Robert Cecil, Lord Rothermore, and others, all favor a more consertive policy, which would include withdrawal from Mesopotamia, Persia, and other sources or irritation. It is even questioned in high circles if India is worth keeping.

If the people of England are protesting against a system which admittedly was adopted for British aggrandizement alone, what would the people of the United Staes say if they ere compelled to support a similar policy, not for their own benefit but for the welfare of the old world? Yet such would be the precise effect were the league covenant to be adopted by America. We ould have saddled upon us all the costs and sacrifices of a world-wide imperialism, with not a single compensating advantage.

Commissioner T. J. Dorminey was here on business Monday.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

To be Held in School District Number Twenty-Three of Chilton County, Alabama.

Notice is hereby given that a special election will be held at the regular voting place in Maplesville in District No. 23 of Chilton County, Alabama, on the 20th day of September, 1920, to determine whether or not a special district tax of thirty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property shall be levied and collected annually on the taxable property of said district for the present tax year and continuing for a period of ten years. Said levy is proposed to be made for public school purposes within said district. Mr. Gordon of York, Ala., declares is rid of Constipation, Indigestion, Sluggish liver and Kidney trouble

Heard so much about the New Medicine, wanted to try it, and now is glad that he did.

"I had heard so much about the new medicine Dreco, I was anxious to try it, and after two days I was convinced that it was grand medicine," stated Mr. R. B. Gordon; a well known farmer of York, Ala.

"I have suffered all my life from stomach trouble, indigestion, constipation, and a sluggish liver. I've tried medicine after medicine, but never did more than temporary relief, but I am convinced that Dreco is different from the others. It seemed to be the vtry thing my stomach needed and the indigestion ceased almost immediately; my bowels began acting regularly and in a smooth natural manner. My liver got active and the billiousness passed off. My appetite increased and my nerves became so that I sleep like a baby. Dreco is a great medicine and I think everyone should be told about it."

All druggists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.
SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Company, The Public, The Employees

Adequate and efficient telephone service is essential to the continued prosperity of all commercial enterprises, and a telephone in the home for social intercourse is as necessary as a telephone in the place of business.

No telephone company can furnish this service without the full support of the public it serves. This is true because the interests of the public, the telephone company and its employees are identical; each must co-operate and neither can permanently profit at the expense of the other.

The Company furnishes the Plant and receives Profits.

The Employees furnish the Effort and receive Wages.

The Public furnishes the Revenue and receives Service.

The telephone situation is as much the concern of the public as it is of the Company and its employees. The sound support of the public should be based upon a knowledge of the facts.

The telephone industry in Alabama faces a crisis unparalleled during its entire history, the cumulative effect of conditions during the past four years; conditions which this Company was powerless to influence or control.

It is the purpose of this Company to fully inform the public of the facts of this situation.

This is the first of a series of advertisements to place before the public all the facts of the telephone industry in the State of Alabama.

It is the duty of all who have need for telephone service now, and in the future, to carefully read and consider these facts and, if convincing, to give a quick, direct and cordial support to the Company.

If any statements are questioned, they can be verified.

Our whole claim for your support is based upon established facts.

The next advertisement will give a detailed statement of the Company's investment, expenses and revenues for the years 1916, 1917, 1918 and 1919.

Goodyear Mileage—and Tires for Small Cars

A well built tire yields much more mileage for each dollar of cost than a tire purposely made to be offered at a sensationally low price; buy the tire, not the price.

Built to deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost, Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, save inconvenience, disappointment and money.

Their value results from the application of Goodyear experience, expertness and care to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for the real worth and endurance that Goodyear builds into them.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

MONEY TO LOAN

$50,000.00

I have succeeded in arranging with one of the largest Fire Insurance Companies in America, with millions and millions of capital and surplus, for the above amount —and more if needed, to be loaned to farmers of this section, with which to insure their property, including Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton, Coopers, Verbena, and surrounding territory.

The loans will be made in this way: We inspect and estimate your property, including dwelling and contents, barn and contents, smoke house, feed stuff, mules and cattle, and insure you for three fourths value against fire, lightning and wind storms, figuring you up for five years for only four and one-half years premiums, you paying one-fifth cash and the other four-fifths in four annual installments, without interest.

This strictly applies to farmers and good risk. If you will insure your home, we will also carry your tenant houses for you.

If interested, please write, phone or call on me, and I will be glad to consider your application. I also write old line Life Insurance and sell Singer Sewing Machines.

Now listen, people! You do not owe me one cent, neither do you owe my company anything, but you do owe yourself and your wife and children protection against Fires, Lightning, Wind Storms and Death.

Judge Reynolds and son Omar, M. D. Foshee, J. L. Easterling and W. M. Wyatt went over to Columbiana last Saturday, where Judge Reynolds made a speech in a joint political discussion with Fritz Thompson. We have been around over the state quite a bit with Judge Reynolds in his campaign for the senate and it looks like he is going to poll a record vote in November.

Mr. Wiley Foshee urges the farmers of Chilton County to be here at the court house on next Saturday to select delegates to the American cotton Association. He says if the farmer doesn't look after his business no one else will do it for him. This is true, and at this time the farmers' interests are very valuable and should be safe-guarded in every way possible.

Torpid Liver

Black-Draught "has no equal for headache, sour stomach, torpid liver and feverish colds . ." declares Mrs. Annie Whitmore, of Gate City, Va. "It is easy to take and does not gripe, as a lot of medicines do," she adds. "It is good to take in a hot tea for colds, or can be taken in a dry powder. I can't say enough for Black-Draught and the sickness it has saved us."

Thedford's

has been found a valuable liver medicine, in thousands of homes. "I do not use any other liver medicine," says Mrs. Mary O. Brown, of Europa, Miss. "It is splendid for sour stomach, a bad taste in the mouth or torpid liver. I keep it all the time, use it with the children and feel it has saved us many dollars in doctor bills and many days in bed."

Films Help to Foreign Trade

Motion Pictures a Silent Partner of Uncle Sam in His Export Trade.

CREATES DEMAND FOR GOODS

Latin People Disposed to Pattern After What They See on Screen That Pleases Them—Aids Live Stock Introduction.

Washington.—Uncle Sam has as a silent partner in his export trade the motion pictures.

How the "movies" are developing trade and spreading confidence in American goods and American methods, and creating an Americanized atmosphere which should prove the strongest possible asset toward permanency of trade in South America, is told by Dr. Julius Klein, commercial attache at the American embassy, Buenos Aires, who was formerly chief of the Latin American division, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

The Latin people, he points out, are disposed to pattern after what they see in the motion pictures that appeals to them. Thus the films have made them familiar with the appearance of American automobiles and of what they can do. The movies have created a demand for American-made office furniture by showing the fittings of a business magnate's office, which the South American merchants in their prosperity are eager to copy.

As regards ready-made clothing—the South Americans, particularly in Cuba, have gotten into the habit of ordering a suit of clothes like their favorite hero wore in a certain film. Thus the merchants have come to stock up with good lines of ready-made clothing, which are very popular. The movies have had a like effect on industrial development.

All this, Doctor Klein emphasizes, has happened naturally and has not been forced as trade propaganda.

Boom to U. S. Trade.

The more use that can be made of educational films introducing industries comparable with their own industries—such as agriculture, cattle-raising, mining—the more benefits to American commerce will result. Such films can and should carry a romantic scenario, such as appeals most strongly to the Latin temperament, with cutins on our methods in industries similar to theirs. As we show them a new and better method their confidence in us and the output of our industries grows cumulatively.

Germans and Italians particularly have been thus endeavoring to ingratiate themselves in South American countries, Doctor Klein says, and the influence of the Italians in the South American markets from an economic and commercial viewpoint must be reckoned with.

American manufacturers of farm machinery are now co-operating with the Philippine department of agriculture and natural resources, in an endeavor to arouse in the farmers of those islands a true appreciation of the possibilities by using such machinery. Motion pictures are being prepared to show the most approved methods of cultivation, preparation of seed, use of farm machinery, harvesting and storing crops, and methods of packing and handling where these processes are involved.

Aids Live Stock Introduction.

Introduction of American breeds of live stock and poultry into South America, particularly Argentina, is to be aided by the use of motion picture films prepared for this purpose by the United States department of agriculture. These films also will show American methods of breeding live stock and handling it in its many phases from the farm to the home table. The Argentine government has shown special interest in the introduction of American methods of handling live stock, as it has indeed in the agricultural practices of the northern half of the continent generally.

As evidence of this, the Argentine embassy in Washington has already purchased ten films on these subjects for educational use in Argentina and has frequently had United States department bulletins translated into Spanish for home consumption.

The Buenos Aires & Pacific railway has also been a heavy purchaser of such films for use along its system. Its representative in this country was recently negotiating with the United States department of agriculture for films showing the swine industry in the United States, and in making arrangements for the introduction of American swine in Argentina.

It is planned to show important swine-breeding farms, the work in the big Chicago packing houses and the preparation of the product for the table. Pictures will be made of the various types of American hogs, and an effort will be made to give some idea of the vastness of the industry in this country.

National Anthem Turned Policemen Into Statues

Boston, Mass.—By playing "The Star Spangled Banner" over and over an Italian band kept two policemen, who ordered them to stop, standing at salute in the Fells reservation, near here, until their arms dropped numb and helpless. A few Italian women and children, who were along for an outing cheered and applauded in great glee. Then the bandsmen fled.

Soon after the tumultuous strains had begun resounding through the woods Policemen Jordan Frost and Roberts appeared and informed them they must stop, as they were in the state reservation. The leader at once ordered "The Star Spangled Banner" played.

Last March his right arm was affected by paralysis. He cannot use it now.

That's why he asked for a salary cut. His request was granted.

CATTLE RUSTLERS USE AUTOS

Cattle Are Now Taken Across the International Boundary by New Method.

Regina, Sask.—The motorcar, it seems, has achieved another success by winning its advent into the cattle rustling business. The old and well-known practice of cattle rustlers, when they used to drive their stolen herds before them, is now a thing of the past. A few days ago three calves were stolen from herds near Bengough and spirited across the international border by two motorcars. Three of the rustlers were arrested on this side of the line and two others in Montana and are now awaiting trial.

Adrianople Is a Beautiful City

Airman Describes Romantic Charm of Mosques and Gardened Homes.

DECADENCE OF CITY GOES ON

Strangers Treated Kindly in an Atmosphere of Friendship—City Endures Its Shabby Gentility With Pride and Calm.

Adrianople, Thrace.—The decadence of two centuries, present political and economic disintegration, wars without end, and an uncertain future, have been unable to destroy the ineffable charm the Turks originally gave to this city of eighty-odd thousand souls. Adrianople is still a holy city in faith and in appearance. Romance still abides here.

"The Orient is the only place left to Europe where cities seen at close range are beautiful," remarked Jules Sebotin, a French aviator, while visiting the most beautiful of all mosques, Sinan's masterpiece here, the mosque of a thousand windows but one, erected at the order of Sultan Selim II., in the sixteenth century.

The first impression of the city has been one of infinite beauty. Arriving from across the lofty Balkans in an airplane, the city had been seen with a rush, a place of spires, and slate domes and red roofs, planted at the intersection of three rivers. It had been a welcome sight. It had come at the end of a four-hours' ride, and it was the journey's end to a tired aviator.

Charming Aloft or Afoot.

Seen from aloft, the city, surrounded by poplars at its outer rim, its house gardens within the city showing green vines and flowers, its outlying fields bare, aroused memories of Mardin on mountains, Diarbekr by the Tigris and hosts of other Turkish cities, always sleeping in beauty, whether visited by sunshine or moonlight.

The longer the stay in Adrianople the more the charm of its beauty grows, a charm that is as great afoot as aloft.

Adrianople is a city that has the tone of country friendship about it, not unlike a county seat of the South. The center of the agricultural exchange business of Eastern and Western Thrace, it is frequented by peasants and traders of Turkish, Greek, Bulgarian, Jewish and Armenian nationalities. There is record of but one American ever having done business in the city, and he came here from Paris and bought up all the brooms.

While no day knows what the next day may bring forth in the way of political strife and crime, today the city preserves this tone of friendship and order. Strangers as they go along the streets or visit the shops are treated with kindly concern. The Turkish officers salute courteously and there is no glint of hostility in the eyes of the Turkish soldiers carrying their new rifles, recently distributed to them by Col. Djefer Tayar Bey.

The decadence of Adrianople goes at a dignified pace. There is little or none of the seething squalor and dirt and noise and poverty of Constantinople. There is none of the clamor of Constantinople's street cars and automobiles.

Pride in Shabby Gentility.

There are a few ragged beggar children who besiege the stranger, but for the most part Adrianople endures its shabby gentility with pride and calm. Here there are none of the fallen houses and dusty streets which characterize the majority of the cities of Asia Minor.

Prayers are called from the minarets as of old; also the old and new bazaars do a slender business in selling American and European calicoes and homespun cloths and Turkish silver mounted pipes and cigarette holders, rugs, junk, to passing peasant customers; or else when these are lacking they swap with each other, after the happy manner of all the Orient.

Decadence seems to have heightened the beauty of the majestic old mosque of Sultan Bayzid. The windows are broken in, the locks are rusted in the doors, the grass is growing up between the flagstones, the fountain in the court no longer splashes its water in the sunshine, and the interior of the mosque itself is slowly deteriorating.

Few worshipers come here, but on the drowsy Friday afternoons the Mussulman's day of worship, loose a devoted band of musicians and singers. The writer stumbled upon this group and one of the red-fezzed band saluted with the simplicity of the Turk and said, "Allah ismarladik."—"May God abide with you."

GRAFTS OWN FLESH ON BODY OF WIFE

Chicago Surgeon Explains Operation to Students as He Dexterously Wields Knife.

Chicago.—With steady hand and nerve, and calmly going about his business as if he were performing the simplest operation, Dr. Orlando P. Scott, a surgeon of Chicago, cut strip after strip of flesh from his own thigh and grafted them on his wife's foot and ankle as he rested on a portable table at her bedside. The entire operation was performed without a single administration of anaesthetics and in the presence of a number of doctors and nurses. Sobs came from different parts of the room as Doctor Scott, without so much as a wince of pain, drove the surgeon's knife into his flesh and then speedily grafted the strips upon his wife's foot.

A fellow physician stood by him to dress his wounds. Several times, as Doctor Scott drove the knife into his flesh, he turned to the assembled student doctors, explaining technical points of the operation to them.

Doctor Scott performed the operation to save his wife from disfigurement and possible loss of her right leg. Mrs. Scott was injured in an automobile accident and gangrene had set in.

Hoodoo on This Farm Holds Bad Luck Record

West Chester, Pa. — Last week was one of misfortune for William Fryer of near Kimberton, Chester county. On Monday, while harvesting hay, one of his horses was stung by an insect and is still in a serious condition. Mr. Fryer then fell from the floor of a straw mow, and was badly cut and bruised. During the afternoon, Mrs. Fryer fell from a cherry tree and was injured severely.

All moved along quietly on the farm until Saturday. In the morning a cow gave birth to twin calves, but all three animals died later. During the night, another of his horses became entangled in the strap of a halter, fell and broke its neck.

PET CAT ATTACKS TEACHER

Feline Bites Woman Because One of Her Kittens Had Been Taken Away.

New York.—Miss Maude E. Ross, a school teacher, living at 312 Decatur street, Brooklyn, is at home suffering from wounds inflicted by a pet cat which sprang at her without warning.

The cat escaped twice, and efforts are being made to recapture it for examination by the board of health.

Miss Ross was in her home when the cat, a large one of the tiger variety, entered. It had been a household pet for a number of years. Ten weeks ago it gave birth to two kittens, one of which was taken away from it a week ago. Miss Ross was about to greet tabby when it suddenly sprang at her.

Miss Ross screamed, but the cat continued its attacks and sank its teeth into her right leg.

SCORNS FINE; GOES TO JAIL

Brooklyn Woman Declares Sentence for Speeding Unjust and Takes a Cell.

New York.—Given the alternative of paying a $25 fine or passing two days in jail, Mrs. Eloise B. Farhurst of Brooklyn flatly refused to pay and announced her intention of serving the time. She actually did pass an hour in jail, but at the end of that time her mother paid the fine and she went home.

Mrs. Farhurst was sentenced by Magistrate Flah in the Brooklyn Traffic court, who explained she could pay the fine under protest and then appeal. She refused such a compromise.

"I will not pay the fine," Mrs. Farhurst said. "I will serve the jail sentence because I know I am innocent of speeding. I was hardly moving when the officer stopped me."

THE POPULAR BANANA.

For those who have nervous indigestion and a too acid stomach, the banana is the popular breakfast fruit because of its lack of acid in its composition. To combine with cooked or uncooked breakfast foods it is held in high esteem. Bananas for serving uncooked, should be well ripened to be wholesome, especially for children.

Moulded Cereal with Bananas.—Turn any leftover cereal into cups rinsed with cold water, half filling the cups. When cold, scoop out the centers and fill the open spaces with sliced bananas; turn into a buttered pan, fruit side down and set into a hot oven to become very hot. Remove with a cake turner to the cereal dishes and serve with sugar and cream.

Porto Rican Baked Bananas.—Select underripe bananas; put them without removing the skins into a very hot oven to bake until the skins burst. Send to the table in a folded napkin and do not remove the skins until the moment of eating. Serve with plenty of butter.

Banana Croquettes.—Remove the skin and coarse threads from five bananas, cut the banana in halves, trimming the ends; brush with beaten egg which has been mixed with a tablespoonful of water, then roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve with lamb chops or with roast lamb. Currant jelly sauce may be served with them prepared as follows:

Melt half a glass of jelly in a scant cup of boiling water, add half a cupful of sugar, and a teaspoonful of corn starch mixed with a little cold water, let cook five minutes, then add a tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

Bananas With Cherries.—Stew a pint of cherries with five or six of the meats from the stones, add water to the juice to make a cupful; sweeten to taste, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and set aside to cool. Pour over sliced bananas and serve. Other fruits like strawberries, currants and pineapple may be used. Serve with sponge cake as a dessert.

Have you the wealth of a sound mind, a strong body, and a pure soul? What great possessions are yours! May the gold within you be a blessing to all the world—you cannot be too lavish with it; keep giving it away; put it out at intervals and it will double its value in a short time.

DESSERTS, SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON.

Fruit juices thickened with gelatin are favorite desserts for warm weather as they are both appetizing and sufficiently satisfying after a hearty meal has been eaten.

Snow Pudding.—Soak one and one-fourth tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water fifteen minutes, then dissolve in one cupful of boiling water, add one cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of lemon juice. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then strain into a large bowl, and set in ice water to cool, stirring occasionally. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff and when the gelatin begins to thicken add the beaten whites and beat together until very light. When stiff enough to mold pour into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Make a boiled custard, using the yolks of the eggs well beaten, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a pint of hot milk; cook until smooth and flavor when cool with vanilla. Unmold the pudding, pour the sauce around it and serve.

Gateau de Princess.—Bake a sponge cake in two jelly cake tins. Cut the center from one cake, leaving a rim one and one-half inches wide. Cover the cake with jelly, jam, fresh berries sweetened or with sliced fruit. Place the rim over the cake and frost the rim if desired or decorate with whipped cream.

Orange Ice.—Make a sirup, using four cupfuls of water to two of sugar, boiling twenty minutes, add two cupfuls of orange juice, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice and the grated rind of two oranges; cool, strain and freeze.

When using only a small mount in the freezer the ice need not fill the freezer, only come well above the mixture in the can.

Emergency Salad.—Take two parts of cabbage and one part tart apple, run through a meat chopper, season with salt, pepper, minced green onion, celery or green pepper.

Spanish Bean Soup.—Press two cupfuls of canned beans or leftover baked beans through a sieve. Add two cupfuls of strained tomato or boiling water and catsup, season well and serve hot.

Be firm! whatever tempts thy soul
To loiter 'ere it reach its goal,
Whatever siren voice would draw
Thy heart from duty and its law,
Oh! that distrust. Go bravely on,
And, till the victor-crown be won,
Be firm.

THE DELECTABLE CHICKEN.

Chicken is a favorite meat with people the world over and no matter how served, if well cooked, it is always popular.

Maryland Chicken.—Dress and cut up a chicken, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in flour, egg and crumbs, place in a well-greased dripping pan and bake in a hot oven, basting with one-third of a cupful of butter. Arrange on a platter and pour over two cupfuls of cream sauce.

Chicken Curry.—Singe and cut the chicken at the joints in pieces for serving. Cover with boiling water, add two teaspoonfuls of salt and a half saltspoonful of pepper. Simmer for half an hour or longer if not tender, drain, dredge with seasoned flour and brown lightly with a tablespoonful of butter. Fry one large onion in the same fat, mix one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar and one tablespoonful of curry powder and brown. Add one cupful of water or stock, one cupful of tomato or one sour apple chopped with salt and pepper to taste. Pour this sauce over the chicken and simmer until tender. Add one cupful of hot cream and serve with boiled rice.

Jellied Chicken.—Bring to the boiling point two cupfuls of chicken stock from which the fat has been removed, add to it one tablespoonful of gelatin which has been soaked in four tablespoonfuls of cold water. Press into a mold four cupfuls of seasoned cooked chicken, pour over the stock, put under a weight and chill until firm. Any other meat may be served in the same way.

Chicken Pie.—Dress and cut up one chicken as for frying; cook until tender. Season when nearly cooked. Lay the pieces in a baking dish, add one pint of stock thickened with two tablespoonfuls of flour, and pour over the chicken. Add a slice of onion. Make a biscuit dough, cut out as a biscuit and cover the top of the dish of chicken. Add cream or rich milk and bake until the biscuits are brown. Serve from the baking dish.

If not to fly, why has the robin wings,
While the green desert dares him to be free;
Why does he yearn to reach remotest things,
The mountain's rim—if it were not to be?

SEASONABLE DISHES.

We really do not know how to cook vegetables unless we can make them both edible and attractive; not unless we can conserve every fraction of their food value and are so familiar with their composition that we can develop it by cookery. The really efficient cook wastes nothing—neither the vegetable itself, the water in which it is cooked, nor even the parings or tops. So says the expert dietician, Ida Bailey Allen.

Scalloped Beans.—Butter a baking dish and add two cupfuls of white sauce or a tomato sauce to four cupfuls of cooked string beans, with one small chopped onion. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Braised New Cabbage.—Melt one-fourth cupful of sweet fat in a saucepan, add two green apples and two onions finely chopped; cook gently for three minutes, then turn in one good sized cabbage, shredded, three cloves, one-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper. Cover tightly and simmer for two and one-half hours.

Coconut Sponge.—Scant half an envelope of granulated gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water. Make a custard of two cupfuls of milk, three eggs, one-third of a cupful of sugar; cook until smooth and thick, remove from the heat and add the gelatin. When the mixture begins to set add one cupful of shredded coconut, a few grains of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Use just the yolks in the custard, beat the whites stiff and fold in at the last. Line a mold with sections of orange, pour in and chill.

Corn Custards.—Mix one cupful of grated corn with three slightly beaten eggs; add one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of onion juice and a few dashes of paprika. Put into small molds and steam, covered with greased paper. After 20 minutes remove and serve with white or tomato sauce.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR AUGUST 29

BEGINNING OF SOLOMON'S REIGN

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 1:5; 3:13.
GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom: and to depart from evil is understanding.—Job 28:28.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Solomon's Choice.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Wise Beginning.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing the Best Things.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—True Wisdom and How to Get It.

I. Solomon Anointed King (1: 5-40).

David had hitherto failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). He is now stirred to action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission and soon the people shouted "God save king Solomon!"

II. Solomon's Acts to Establish His Kingdom (1: 41-2: 46).

Coming to the kingdom at such a time as this, he noted certain dangerous elements, which, if allowed to develop, would weaken if not destroy his rule.

1. Adonijah placed under surveillance (vv. 41-53). Though he had attempted to usurp the kingdom, Solomon placed him on good behavior. In this treatment, Solomon displayed both clemency and dignity, which are praiseworthy in a ruler.

2. Adonijah executed (2: 13-25). Solomon ordered him executed because he made an underhanded effort to become king.

3. Abiathar removed from the priesthood (2:26, 27). This man had joined Adonijah in his plot of usurpation. Solomon removed him from office and appointed Zadok in his stead.

4. Joab executed (2:28-35). Joab, too, was a party in Adonijah's rebellion. Beside this he had treacherously murdered his rivals in the army. He was succeeded in the generalship by Benaiah.

5. Shimei executed (2:36-46). Shimei had deserted David and joined his enemies, even bitterly cursed him. Solomon first paroled him and confined him to Jerusalem, but when he broke his parole he had him executed.

III. God's Gracious Offer to Solomon (3:4, 5).

Solomon made a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. It was not that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee" placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired.

IV. Solomon's Wise Choice (3:6-9).

The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice. God so deals with his children that a choice must be made by everyone. Solomon was keenly sensible of the difficulty and the responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Besides all this, the disturbing elements set in motion by the usurper, Adonijah, were to be dealt with. In his reply to God he pleads that he was not king as a result of his own choosing, but because of God's loving kindness. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can truly exercise that same boldness of faith. When called to positions of honor and trust we should not become high-minded and vain, but humbly present ourselves before God for help.

V. God's Unstinted Gift to Solomon (3:10-15).

Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. The Lord is always pleased when we place ourselves before him in such attitude. Solomon got more than he asked for. Because he put wisdom first, God saw that he could be trusted with material good, also. Christ taught the same thing when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33. He that puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (James 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (I Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist, architect, poet, and a moral philosopher. When we ask what God wills, we shall surely get what we ask.

LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

Those Wags.

"You say the revolver you bought had six chambers?"

Speedy Relief From Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When lifting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any results and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. I met a lady who told me she had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I felt relief after taking two bottles of Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. Rogers, 593 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even let the bed clothes touch my side. I gave up my work thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had saved her life at one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pains. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Bertha J. Parker, 3320 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

Father and Daughter Get Relief by Eatonic

R. J. Powell, Sweetwater, Texas, says, "Eatonic helped me at once, but it was my daughter who got the marvelous benefits. She could not even take a drink of water without awful misery, but it relieved her; she is feeling much better. All this from one box, so send me four more at once."

Hundreds of people now take eatonic; one or two tablets after each meal keeps them in good health, feeling fine, full of pep. Eatonic simply takes up the excess acidity and poisons and carries them right out of the system. Of course, when the cause of the misery is removed, the sufferer cannot help but get well.

You will find it a quick, sure relief for heartburn, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy, bloated stomach. It costs but a trifle and your druggist will supply you. If you don't feel well, you give eatonic a test. Adv.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Womens' complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

CLEANS OUT TONES UP WHOLE SYSTEM

When you're clogged up by CONSTIPATION, jaundiced by a torpid LIVER, devitalized by poor BLOOD or soured by DYSPEPSIA your case calls for Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup—an old physician's famous prescription, in successful use for 68 years as an all-around family medicine.

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH

The regular monthly services were held at the Friendship Baptist Church, just north of town, last Sunday and Sunday night. Rev. W. P. Lowery, the pastor, conducted the services, both of which were well attended.

During the revival at Friendship a month ago, the church put on new life, and is now doing better work than it has ever done before. This is due to a great extent, to the inspiring efforts put forth by the wide awake pastor, Rev. Lowery. He is a splendid preacher and this church, which is yet young, is right with him in trying to do something for the cause of Christ. At the service last Sunday night one new member was added, a young Mr. Thomas, who will be baptiatd at ten o'clock the Fourth Sunday in September at the Church baptising pool.

Prayer meeting is held at this place every Sunday night, which is truly an inspiration. Very reasonable numbers attend these prayer meetings, and everybody takes part in the work. We invite all in reach to come out next Sunday night, and any other Sunday night that you can. We will be glad to have you.

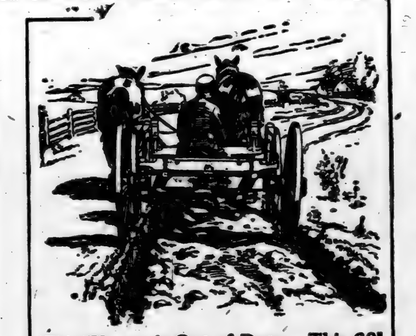
Which Wagon?—

The One that Fits the Road—or the One that Rides the Ridge

Recommended by the Government. The standardized wagon fits the prevailing track made by automobiles and is the wagon you will want to buy.



This Wagon is Out of Date. This 60" wide track wagon no longer fits the roads when they are muddy and soft.

WOULDN'T you rather buy the style of wagon recommended by your Government, especially when it is designed to pull easier, ride smoother, and last longer — the wagon that fits the roads and does not ride the ridge?

The Standardized Weber "Auto-track" Wagon saves wear on itself, other wagons, automobiles, and rubber tires.

The Weber fifth wheel and swivel coupling wagon is either sold at a price much too low or most other wagons are sold at prices much too high, quality considered. Compare and draw your own conclusion.

To date the leading wagon manufacturers of America have sold at the most conservative estimate 100,000 standardized auto-track wagons. From this introduction it is but a step to universal use of this type of wagon. Wouldn't you rather be identified with progress and recognized as an up-to-date farmer by doing your hauling with such a wagon than to be classed as an unprogressive "back number" by buying a 60-inch wide-track wagon, thereby helping some manufacturer and dealer to "unload" an obsolete type? Think it over — and then come and see us about a standardized auto-track Weber.

THOMPSON AND REYNOLDS TO HAVE JOINT DEBATES

Hon. Fritz Thompson of Centerville has promised to engage in joint discussion of the political issues of the present campaign with Judge Reynolds at Clanton in the near future. If Mr. Thompson don't get cold feet and "renig" this will be an interesting event. Just as soon as details can be arranged and the date set, we will make full announcement in the Union-Banner. All people who want to see a Democrat get a political skinning should be on hand if this bout is formally staged.

Following is the wording of a letter sent to Mr. Thompson by Judge Reynolds:

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 23, 1920.
Hon. J. F. Thompson,
Centerville, Ala.

I find that our people here will be delighted to hear you and me on a joint debate discussion of the political issues of the day. As we have agreed for two meetings, one at Centerville and one at Clanton, I am writing to ask you if Saturday, September 4th will suit you to come to Clanton. We will try and get you a good crowd out and advertise the meeting the best we can.

I have promised to go to Ashland at that time but if you will meet me here I will get some one to fill my appointment for me at Ashland.

I shall be ready to go to Centerville any day that suits you, if you will let me know in advance so that I can arrange to not have conflicting appointments. Please let me hear from you right away. With best wishes to you, I am,

Yours Very Truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

Is Your Skin Ablaze With Fiery Itchings?

Don't Continue to Suffer Because of Wrong Treatment.

Impurities in the blood cause millions of tiny disease germs to set up their attack on the surfaces of the skin, and in the form of pimples, boils, scaly eruptions and itchy, burning irritations, begin their disfiguring and destructive work.

These disease germs can be reached only through the blood and local applications have no effect whatever. That is why salves, ointments, lotions, washes and other remedies applied to the skin can do no more than give mere temporary relief.

If you want genuine relief from the tortures of skin diseases, lose no time in discarding all local remedies, and begin taking S. S. S.

THE ALL DAY SINGING AT PROVIDENCE, BEAT NO. 16

On last Sunday, August 29th, a very enjoyable day was spent at this place singing praises to God.

The house was called to order by W. H. Robinson at 10 o'clock with a song and public prayer. Bro. Riley Robinson was elected chairman for the day, and he appointed as program committee E. A. Norris, T. L. Robinson, G. C. Powell, and as secretary, J. W. Cleckler.

The following directors were placed on program for the day: R. M. Robinson, T. L. Robinson, J. W. Cleckler, G. C. Powell; recess 15 minutes; S. M. Yates, Edward Taylor, R. T. Grant. Recess for dinner one and one-half hours.

After noon session: W. H. Robinson, J. R. Robinson, C. H. Robinson, J. N. Castleberry; recess 15 minutes; a quartett was rendered by R. M. Robinson, G. C. Powell, C. H. Robinson and O. R. Robinson, which was very fine.

But the greatest feature of the day was the last lesson when Brothers W. H. Robinson, T. L. Robinson, R. T. Grant and R. Robinson all sung a song each in the old time book. This was enjoyed by everybody present.

Organists for the day were: C. H. Robinson, Mrs. Etta Patterson, Miss Alice Wyatt, Miss Martha J. Mims.

Everybody semed to enjoy the day in singing praises to the Lord. Dismission in prayer by Rev. W. W. Robinson.

R. ROBINSON, Chm.,
J. W. CLECKLER, Secy.

SHOULTS NEWS

The singing at Pleasant Grove was a great success on Saturday, August 21st. It was sad to say good bye to Mr. Franklin on the last day of the singing school, and we hope he will come back soon.

A revival started at Pleasant Hill Methodist Church last Sunday. Rev. Butram from Maplesville will preach during the week. We hope everybody will attend these services.

Mrs. Nettie Bearden was called to Selma last week to be with her daughter, Mrs. Rhodes, who was reported very sick, but we hope she isn't dangerously ill.

Quite a crowd enjoyed the good singing given at the home of Miss Myrtle McAfee last Friday night. Everybody knows that when Miss Myrtle gives an entertainment of any kind the time will be very pleasantly spent. Miss Myrtle is making preparations to go to high school this winter. She has worlds of friends who regret to see her leave.

We are glad to say that Miss Ruby Shoults has returned home from hospital in Montgomery and is doing well.

A number of people from this community went to Rehoboth last Sunday to hear Rev. P. G. Maness preach once more. It is not often that we have the oportunity to hear such a wonderful man preach. It has been many years since Bro. Maness was at Rehoboth and it was such a happy meeting.

A goodly number of our young people went to Antioch to hear Bro. Maness preach last week. He held a most successful revival there during last week.

Many are planning to go to Mulberry this week to hear Rev. Maness preach. He is holding a revival out there this week.

Mrs. John Mitchell has gone to Selma again this week to be under the care of a physician for a few days.

The many friends of Mr. Eugene McGee were sorry to learn that a few days ago he relapsed and the physician was called back, but glad to hear he is better now.

Miss Allie Walker spent a few days of last week with her friend, Miss Daisy Latham at Lawley.

Mrs. T. C. Snead and children from Centerville have been visiting relatives here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamrick visited their daughter, Mrs. Grover Merchant at Tabernacle last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Walker are expecting their daughter, Mrs. A. H. Seeley from Massachusetts some time soon. She will be accompanied by her husband and baby. They will spend the winter here with relatives.

FOR SALE—One six-eye Grand Washington Range, everlasting fire box, economical wood burner, bakes perfectly—none better. Also one golden oak bed, one set springs; one typewriter. Mrs. R. O. Headley, Clanton, Ala.

Miss Lucile Stoudemire of Prattville spent several days in Clanton with Miss Mary Smith.

Mrs. Clyde Jones has returned home from Birmingham where she was the guest of Miss Sula Speer.

Mrs. V. J. Heard and daughter have returned home after a visit to Mrs. Kyle in Decatur.

Miss Mary Frances Driver, after enjoying an extended trip to Canada, New York and other eastern cities, is stopping for a few days with her aunt, Mrs. N. A. Kicker, before returning home in Evergreen.

Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Mrs. John M. Bridges and Mr. Omar Reynolds motored to Birmingham Tuesday.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Dr. and Mrs. Hinkle Entertain.

On last Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock the hospitable doors of the pretty country home of Dr. and Mrs. Hinkle were thrown open to their many friends. The occasion being their 25th anniversary.

This home was never lovelier than on this occasion, the entire apartments presenting a most picturesque scene.

The guests were received by Mrs. M. L. White and presented to the receiving line composed of Dr. and Mrs. Hinkle and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Janner. Then conducted to the punch table presided over by Misses Anice Kemp and Mary Upchurch.

Trailings of clematis and smilax formed a lovely bower on the porch where the punch table was placed.

The library, where the receiving line stood was beautiful with decorations of roses, ferns and stately palms. The dining room was adorned with baskets of nasturtiums and ferns. Here the many handsome and useful gifts were displayed on a table presided over by Mrs. Earl Upchurch.

Mrs. Hinkle's gown was orange geargette beaded in jet beads, wearing a corsage of brides roses. Mrs. Janney's costume was of dainty lingerie and lace also wearing brides roses.

Victrola music was enjoyed throughout the afternoon in charge of Miss Della Latham.

After an interesting contest, Mr. Hosea Downs was presented a handsome piece of silver. Late in the evening a delicious ice course, further carrying out the color scheme of yellow and green, was served to about a hundred guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Gore Hosts.

Among the most enjoyable outings of the summer was a barbecue given by Mr. and Mrs. Marion Gore on Friday night at their home. Several kinds of barbecued meats with salads, sandwiches and tea, were served to a numbero f invited friends. Those invited to take part in this occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Hance Alred, Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Callen, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Curry, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gore, Dr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Luckie, Mr. and Mrs. Thad McSwain, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Simpson, Mr. Macey Jones Dr. T. H. Neighbors, Dr. Arthur Johnson, Prof. J. L. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Parrish, Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Maye, Mr. and Mrs. Mallie White, Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Mullins, Mrs. Mary Ann Mullins, Mrs. Willie Jones, Misses Bettie Mullins and Lamar.

Mrs. W. H. Sarton and Miss Willie Belle Sartor made a business trip to Montgomery Tuesday.

Mrs. T. C. McSwain left Monday for Auburn to visit Dr. and Mrs. Drake.

Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Latham were visitors to Clanton last week.

Birthday Party Enjoyed.

Little Miss Mary Foshee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Foshee, entertained a number of her little friends on last Wednesday evening, the occasion being her eighth birthday.

After the guests all arrived a watermelon cutting was enjoyed on the pretty Kicker Grove. Merry games were played throughout the evening the most popular being the pinning on of the donkey's tail, for which Miss Gamma Middleton won the girls prize a pretty fan, and Joe Earl Gowan the other, an immense pencil.

The house was prettily decorated in cut flowers and ferns. The dining room was most attractive with the birthday cake being central decorations of the table while pink and green ribbons were gracefully draped. Here a delicious ice course was served to Misses Gamma Middleton, Josephine Littlejohn, Martha Foshee, Sammie Johnson, Edna Gray, Thomas Louise McSwain, Cathrine Hayes, Jenice Danforth, Mildred Roper, Ethel Jones, Bernice Williams, Augusta Roper, Mary Frank Smith, Virginia Alred, Fannie Moore, Mary Foshee, Messrs Bill Middleton, Joe Earl Gowan, Raymond Mims and Phillip Foshee.

Mrs. Watts Moore Entertains.

Mrs. J. Watts Moore proved a charming hostess on last Wednesday, when she delightfully entertained the young matrons card club with several extra guests. In the living room where the tables were arranged tall cut glass vases filled with roses adorned the room. The score prize was won by Mrs. Guy Roberts and the guest prize, a box of powder, fell to Mrs. Davidson.

After the game a tempting salad plate with frozen punch was served to Mrs. Amzi Gowan, Mrs. Eric Hart, Mrs. Harvey Chandler, Mrs. Carrie Mullins, Mrs. Guy Roberts, Mrs. Macy Jones, Mrs. W. P. Splawn, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. R. E. Luckie, Mrs. Grady Reynolds, Mrs. John Bridges, Mrs. Hance Alred, Miss Bettie Mullins and Miss Kathleen Mullins.

E. C. Maye S. S. Class Meets.

A very interesting meeting of the E. C. Maye Sunday School Class was held Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Elna Roberts. The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Roberts and the topic for the afternoon was "Religious Education." After the programme a social hour was enjoyed. When delicious sandwiches and tea were served.

Mrs. Macy Jones left Thursday for Montgomery to visit her mother, Mrs. Giddens.

Mrs. Guy Roberts and Miss Lessie Reynolds spent Monday in Birmingham.

Mrs. Grady Reynolds went to Birmingham shopping Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Mike Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans Parrish spent Tuesday in Birmingham shopping.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

On Monday night last a very unanimous meeting of the building committee was held and further steps taken for the erection of the new church building. Bids for the building have now been properly advertised for and it is fully expecetd to let the contract by the 30th of September, for construction to begin the first of November. In the event that this is possible, it will give us two good months in which to do most if not all of the outside work. In order to let the contract it is essential that the pledges be paid soon as possible, and the same can be paid in person to the First National Bank where it will be deposited to the credit of the building fund and used expressly and only for that purpose. All checks paid out are carefully safeguarded and countersigned by two members of the committee.

The services of this church will be held next Sunday as usual—morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:45 p.m. Please note the change of time for the evening service. At the night service the subject wil be "The Meanest Man in Town" and will be illustrated with interesting stereopticon views. This will be a pleasant and profitable evening to all who attend. The Sunbeam Band meets at 2:30 p.m., the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m., and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 7 p.m. We will appreciate the cooperation of the parents in making these organizations a success by encouraging their young people to attend. Loyalty in attendance at the church services has much to do with a really successful church. With the splendid future outlook of the church every member who is able should stand by their church and attend its services regularly every week.

We cordially invite everybody to all of our services.

The farmers meeting at the court house last Saturday seemed to be a bit at "logger heads" with the ginners. The farmers pledged themselves not to pay more for ginning this year than they did last year, and the ginners said they would have to have a raise in the price this year if they ginned the cotton. Now dang it all; what do you think about that?

PUBLIC SPEAKING AT CLANTON ON FRIDAY

HON. POPE M. LONG, JUDGE L. H. REYNOLDS, JUDGE A. P. LONGSHORE AND OTHERS TO SPEAK TOMORROW

There will be a public speaking at the court house in Clanton on next Friday, September 3rd, when the leading political issues of the day will be discussed by the most able speakers of the State.

Hon. Pope M. Long, Chairman of the State Republican Executive Committee, will speak at 10:00 A.M. on "The League of Nations."

Judge L. H. Reynolds will also speak before noon in the interest of his candidacy for the United States Senate.

At 1:30, P.M. Judge A. P. Longshore, candidate for Congress from the Fourth District, and Judge Weaver, both of Shelby County, will address the people at the court house.

The Women of the County are Especially Invited.

Mrs. Oscar R. Hundley of Birmingham will be given a place on the program to make an address in regard to women voting. Other speakers will also discuss the matter of getting the women of the county qualified and ready to vote.

All the old and new members of the County Republican Executive Committee are urged to be present, as the present campaign in the county will be orgahized and put into action on that day.

Everybody is urged to attend the meetings both morning and in the afternoon.

W. G. CULP, Chm.,
J. Z. MIMS, Secretary,
County Republican Ex. Comm.

THOMPSON CAN'T COME HERE

We regret to inform our readers that Hon. J. Fritz Thompson of Bibb County, that brilliant exponent of modern Democracy, cannot come to Clanton to engage in joint discussion with Judge Reynolds. He has replied to Judge Reynolds' letter of last week and eased out of the challenge by saying that he cannot engage in political discusions that are not authorized by his party committee, or some sort of a committee he seeks to hide behind.

We have a lingering suspicion that Fritz recollects how near he came to losing every speck of his political hide over at Columbiana a few weeks ago; and now he is wise to see that he does not run across Reynolds and Longshore again.

Honest John, now Fritz, we don't blame you. If a fellow should do us like they did you at Columbiana we would be inclined to sever diplomatic relations with him too.

Miss Leona Pipes left Monday for a visit to friends in Birmingham. While there she will attend the Pan-Hellenic dance.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Pipes will leave shortly for a visit to relatives in Kentucky, before returning home they will visit their son, Hoke, in Virginia.

Mrs. Amzi Gowan and children returned home Friday after a few weeks visit to relatives here.

Mrs. R. E. Luckie and children, Mrs. J. Watts Moore, spent the week end with Mrs. E. S. Parrish in the City of Birmingham.

Attorney E. E. Calloway of Columbus, Miss., is in Clanton this week on legal business.

DIVIDENDS FROM THE GARDEN

Showing Made This Year Should Make All Resolve to Have Their Own, If Possible.

Home gardens are declaring dividends, regular, extra and midsummer specials all being included in the distribution. These profits have been coming to the home gardener from the time the first lettuce, the first radish, the first green onion was ready for the table. The variety of dividends is limited only by the wisdom of the man who planted the garden. The earlier dividends are accompanied now by others more seasonable, the entire distribution increasing the pleasures of those who taste and enjoy.

The man who prepared the garden plot, who made the soil ready, who laid it out, planted the seed, put out the plants and gave care and thought and attention each day, has already had his investment back in greater health, to say nothing of the pleasures that have been his in helping and studying the productive forces of nature. Now he gets the special dividends in delicious table offerings, everything tasting better because of the toil and thought he gave it. And he can laugh and grow merry over some high prices quoted, because the little back-yard garden spot, to which he gave time and toil, has helped him solve the high cost of living in part. What is there that pays so much for the work as the back-yard garden?—Ohio State Journal.

BEAUTIFY THE WASTE SPOTS

Unsightly Places May Be Given an Attractive Appearance if Paid a Little Attention.

Borders in the garden and yard are like frames that lend beauty to the picture. In many gardens and lawns there seems to be no space that can be spared for flowers, yet there are walks of cement, brick or cinders, waste spaces along the alley, or around small buildings which if bordered with some flowers would change the entire appearance of the place.

China astors, old fashioned pinks, English daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssum, candy tuft, and verbenas are good varieties for almost any soil or climate. In places where a taller border would bring out the picture, use sweet William, Oriental poppies, or the stately hollyhock. Then find a high place for a bird house, or plant some shrubs for nest places.

The true home picture is lacking without the birds and flowers.—The Thrift Magazine.

Town and Country.

I wonder when ambitious cities will learn that it is a dangerous business to be everlastingly campaigning for a greater population. Nearly every town and city in the United States had one slogan, "More population in 1920." This has been going on for the last fifty years until we see our farm population decreased to the danger point. The 1920 census will show five million less people living on the farms in this country now than there were in 1910. It will show an increase of population for the nation of twenty millions. This means twenty-five million more people in the towns and cities and five million less people to feed them. Unless these city folks can find a substitute for bread, meat and potatoes, something serious is going to happen.—John A. Simpson, Farmer.

The Small Towns.

It has been figured up that there are about 12,000 small towns in the United States, half of them with populations of 500 or less. It is these small towns that the rural people are intimately associated with. They sell their produce there, buy the things they need; in fact, these are a part of the rural community. Some of these small towns will become cities, but a very large per cent of them will remain as they are. It is no disgrace to live in a small town, but the rule is that these people are waiting until next year, or some future year to improve their schools, put in sidewalks, a water system, or a sewer system to safeguard the health of the people, or before taking any steps to improve the social and living conditions of the children.—The Thrift Magazine.

Billboards Indicted.

Not alone because they are a blot on the landscape, boardings are considered an evil in more tangible ways. When they are not strongly supported there is always danger of their falling over in storms. Unless they are of fireproof material they are easily inflammable and often serve to carry fire from one building to another. If the boards are not raised several feet from the ground the space back of them almost invariably becomes a dump for refuse and a convenient place for criminals to hide.

Signboards nearly always shut out sunlight and air. To prevent this as much as possible, some cities limit the height and width of the board. The importance of breathing space around a building is recognized by a number of millionaires.

Acts on the Liver, Regulates Kidneys, Purifies the Blood

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in the back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

INVENTIVE GENIUS ROBS CALOMEL OF NAUSEA AND DANGER

Doctors' Favorite Medicine Now Purified and Refined from All Objectionable Effects. "Calotabs"—the New Name.

What will human ingenuity do next? Smokeless powder, wireless telegraphy, horseless carriages, colorless iodine, tasteless quinine,—now comes nauseless calomel. The new improvement called "Calotabs" is now on sale at drugstores.

For biliousness, constipation and indigestion the new calomel tablet is a practically perfect remedy, as evidenced by the fact that the manufacturers have authorized all druggists to refund the price if the customer is not "perfectly delighted" with Calotabs. One tablet at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no nausea, no griping, no salts. By morning your liver is thoroughly cleansed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite. Eat what you please—no danger—go about your business.

Calotabs are not sold in bulk. Get an original package, sealed. Price, thirty-five cents.—(adv.)

POULTRY

CARING FOR BREEDING DUCKS

If Not Kept for Production of Market Eggs Fowls Should Be Given Grass Range.

Breeding ducks, if not kept for the production of market eggs, should have a grass range, if possible, after the hatching season is over and be fed sparingly on a mash of 1 part, by weight, corn meal, 2 parts bran, 1 part low-grade wheat flour, 1 part green feed, 8 per cent beef scrap and 3 per cent grit, given once or twice daily, with one feed of mixed grains; or the mash may be made of 3 parts, by measure, corn meal, 4 parts bran, 2 parts low-grade wheat flour, three-fourths part beef scrap, and 2 parts of green feed, with a small amount of grit and shell or mineral matter.

Feed Pekin ducks for eggs, beginning about December 1, on 1 pound of corn meal, 1 pound of low-grade flour or middlings, 1 pound of bran, 15 per cent of beef scrap, 15 per cent of vegetables or green feed, and some grit, feeding this mash twice daily, in the morning and at night; also giving 1 quart of mixed corn and wheat to every 30 ducks at noon when they are laying heavily. These laying rations should be fed throughout the year to Indian Runners or to any breed of ducks kept principally for the production of market eggs, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say. If the Indian Runner ducks are not laying, they should be fed sparingly. All rations are by weight unless otherwise stated. Thirty laying ducks (Pekins) will eat about 10 quarts of moist mash at each meal.

FEEDING FOWLS FOR PROFIT

Early Hatched Chick Will Reach Laying Maturity Before Commencement of Cold Season.

The first rule for getting a good profit from poultry is to get the chicks hatched early, and the next is to keep them growing so that they will reach laying maturity before the commencement of cold weather. There is no profit in keeping a chicken just alive, whether it is intended for laying stock or for the market. One reason why more care should be exercised in feeding fowls is that the chicks know less about what is good for them than do the fowls. The healthy chick is a hungry thing and will eat what is given it; the digestive organs being weak are less able to dispose of objectionable feed than are those of older fowls.

Young chicks should be fed a little at a time and often, poultry specialists in United States department of agriculture say. They should be fed early in the morning and just before going to bed at night, and not less than three times in the intervening period. For the first two weeks they may be fed three meals of soft feed and two of hard, and after that age two of soft and three of hard, less soft feed being fed as they grow older. No more moistened soft feed should be given at one time than they will eat up clean.

OBJECTS IN CULLING FLOCK

Insures Feed for Best Layers and Saves Fowls Best Suited for Breeding Purposes.

Culling of the flock serves two purposes: First, it insures that the feed will be consumed by the better-producing hens, thereby increasing the profit. Second, it makes it possible to save those best suited for breeders, both on account of their better production and on account of their superior strength and vitality—qualities so essential to layers if they are to stand up under the severe strain of heavy laying. Weeding out the poor hens gives those left more room and a better chance.

ESSENTIAL FOR YARDED HENS

Charcoal, Grit and Oyster Shells Should Be Kept Before Fowls All the Time.

Where the chickens are kept in small bare yards, fine charcoal, grit and oyster shells should be kept before them all of the time, and cracked or ground bone may be fed. The bone is not necessary for chickens that have a good range.

For Catarrh and Catarrhal Conditions

The evidence of one man like Mr. Arendt is more convincing proof to you of the merits of Pe-ru-na than any written words of ours. For fifty years Pe-ru-na has been the standby of the American family for diseases due to catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the organs of the body. Thousands, like Mr. Arendt, have proved the effectiveness of Pe-ru-na for coughs, colds, nasal catarrh, stomach, bowel and liver disorders or any disease characterized by a catarrhal condition.

If your suffering is the result of a catarrhal disorder try Pe-ru-na. It is a true, tried medicine.

SHE KNEW WHAT WAS IN IT

Little Eve Fairly Well Acquainted With the Varied Contents of the Family Bible.

Bishop Hoss said at a Nashville picnic:

"The religious knowledge of too many adults resembles, I am afraid, the religious knowledge of little Eve.

"'So you attend Sunday school regularly?' the minister said to little Eve.

"'Oh, yes, sir,' said she.

"'And you know your Bible?'

"'Oh, yes, sir.'

"'Could you, perhaps, tell me something that is in it?'

"'I could tell you everything that's in it.'

"'Indeed!' And the minister smiled. 'Do tell me, then.'

"'Sister's beau's photo is in it,' said little Eve promptly 'and ma's recipe for vanishin' cream is in it, and a lock of my hair cut off when I was a baby is in it, and the ticket for pa's watch is in it.'"

Forgiven.

"Can you help me out, sir?" said the seedy looking stranger. "I've had some hard luck."

"I suppose you've seen better days?" replied Mr. Twobble.

"Oh, yes, sir. I once got $75 a week for playing in a jazz orchestra."

"Well," said Mr. Twobble, as he thoughtfully thrust his hand into his pocket, "I'm a humane man and I won't hold that against you. Here's a quarter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Other and More Cogent Reasons Induced the Old Gentleman to Hold His Wife's Hands.

As the Londoner sat in the village inn, drinking a modest pint and chatting with the local residents, he got on the subject of married life. He advanced the opinion that true happiness was more often to be found in the peaceful country than amid the turmoil of a town.

"Well, I ain't so sure about that," said one old chap. "But I do know as I sat here last night and held my old woman's hands for two hours by the clock."

"There!" said the visitor in triumph. "That upholds my argument, and shows how much you love her."

"Love her!" gasped the old chap. "Why, if I'd 'a' let go she'd 'ave scratched my bloomin' eyes out!"—London Answers.

ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Such Cases.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

All Tired Out?

Are you burdened with a dull, nagging backache? Does any little exertion wear you out? Does it seem sometimes as if you just can't keep going? Modern life with its hurry and worry, and lack of rest, throws a heavy strain on the kidneys. The kidneys slow up and that tired feeling and constant backache are but natural results. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

Mrs. J. L. Rhoades, 202 Furness St., Selma, Ala., says: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, for they strengthened my back and relieved an ache in the small of it. My back hurt me mostly on getting up in the morning when it was stiff and sore. I always had a tired feeling and lacked ambition. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and one box made me feel a great deal better."

Something New in List of Accessories

WE ARE more allured by lovely accessories of dress than by essential clothing, and these furbelows provide us a continuous, pleasing performance. Something new claims attention all the time, and spices up our work-a-day world of dress. It is the daintiness and freshness of neckwear, or the richness of brocades in hats and bags or nosegays of ribbon flowers, or flowers of organdie or artificial fruits of yarn and numberless accessories made of ribbon that keep the mind occupied and the pocketbook busy just now.

Among the newest ornaments there are chokers (collars) of ribbon with full rosettes, to be worn close up around the neck. They are made of rather narrow ribbon and the rosettes have, as a rule, several short hanging ends. Just ahead of the autumn leaves are new blouses that show neck finishing resembling that perennial favorite, the frothy jabot, but the surest indication for fall seems to be the plaited upstanding ruff of ribbon drawn close to the throat with a narrow ribbon tie.

Another item that we may be sure of is the shopping bag of handsome ribbon. There is a new line of these ready for presentation to fall shoppers, and some of them have hats to match. Tops of the bags reveal new designs, and there are many handsome tassels used for finishing them. The soft draped crowns popular in fall hats lend themselves to the hat-and-bag-to-match idea. A handsome set appears in the illustration in which a narrow brimmed shape of plain velvet has a crown of brocaded ribbon draped so that it terminates in two points at the side. Of course these two points exist merely to support two handsome tassels that dangle from them and brush the shoulder. The shopping bag to match is pictured mounted on a metal ring with round top which probably holds a mirror on the reverse side. One may lay a safe wager that it contains a small ribbon covered box that carries compact face powder and a lip stick.

AND NOW THEY TALK OF SUITS

THE first hats and the first suits for fall have made their entry. They almost reconcile one to the passing of summer and succeed in making fall welcome. Women are remarking of the suits, their straight but chic lines, their trim fastenings up the front, their high necks and with all this their lack of severity. For these suits are embellished with embroideries, needlework, used with much discriminating reticence. Handsome composition buttons, sparingly used where buttons are needed, match the cloths in color. Coats are somewhat longer, skirts are sufficiently full for comfort and remain plain, belts are narrow and sometimes long, but often they lap across the front and fasten with a button at each side. Fur is much in evidence in high collars and occasionally in large patch pockets and in cuffs. There is no indication anywhere that women will favor very short skirts—in fact good sense and good taste govern the styles thus far presented. It is a matter for rejoicing—the first things are nearly always the best, and these new suits have caused great enthusiasm among well informed and well dressed women.

Two of the earliest models are pictured here and they include one that has a plaited skirt and a jacket with vest of brocaded ribbon. On the pockets at the sides there is a pretty arrangement of narrow braid, and this also finishes the long sleeves. This model is made of serge. The most liked cloths are those on the order of duvetyn, that is, having a velvety surface, of which there are several varieties with names of their own. A suit of this kind is shown at the right with wide collar of fur.

"Eatonic—Worth Its Weight in Gold"

Writes Mrs. E. L. Griffin from her home in Franklin, N. H. "'I feel like a new person. Stomach feels fine after eating—all from taking your wonderful eatonic. It's worth its weight, in gold."

Millions of sufferers from sour, acid, gassy stomachs, heartburn, indigestion, bloating, full feeling after eating, should try eatonic. Just try it—that's all, and get relief, new life, strength and pep. It produces quick, sure and safe results, because eatonic takes up the harmful acids and poisons and carries them right out of the body. Of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well—quick!

The cost is a trifle. Your druggist will supply eatonic, so, if you want better health, all you need do is—try it TODAY. You will surely feel big benefits at once. Adv.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

Felt Fagged Out

South Carolina Man Says Ziron Helped Make Him Feel Stronger.—"A Good Builder."

"I HAVE been taking Ziron and found it to be a splendid tonic, a good builder, and a help to me," says Mr. D. B. Brunson, of New Brookland, S. C. Mr. Brunson explains that he was in a run-down condition, "and when I would get up in the mornings," he says, "I would be so tired, and felt fagged out. I had indigestion, also.

"I decided to use Ziron and see what it would do. I found it just as recommended. It made me feel stronger, and did away with the tired feeling."

ZIRON, of which Mr. Brunson speaks, is a scientific compound, prepared from pure, soluble iron salts, with other tonic ingredients, forming a valuable, building medicine for pale, weak people.

Ziron helps to enrich the blood with iron and tone up the general system.

Many people have been benefited by taking Ziron. Why not try it and see what it will do for you? It may help you. If it doesn't, take the empty bottle back to the druggist's, where you bought the Ziron, and get your money back. This offer applies to the first bottle of Ziron that you take, and is good at any drug store.

Insist on Ziron. Accept no substitute.

THE MEETING OF THE FARMERS AT COURT HOUSE SATURDAY

Pursuant to the call issued in last week's Union-Banner, a large number of Chilton County farmers met at the court house in Clanton last Saturday for the purpose of considering the present situation that confronts growers of cotton, and to elect county representatives to the Cotton Association in Montgomery.

Rev. W. S. Cox was elected chairman of the meeting and W. T. Bean elected Secretary.

The purpose of the meeting was stated as follows: To try to formulate plans whereby the farmers would be in a position to demand more than 30 cents per pound for their cotton and more than $30 per ton for their seed. Various speakers discussed the proposition from every angle, but no definite action was taken on any matter, except the election of W. S. Cox, W. T. Bean and J. D. Collins as delegates to the American Cotton Association.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the coort house in Clanton again on next Saturday, September 4th, at 10 o'clock, a.m. to hear the reports of the delegates from the American Cotton Association, and to take any action that may be deemed proper on any matter that may help to better the condition of the formers.

Every cotton grower in Chilton County is urged to attend this meeting next Saturday. Don't fail to come, as the time is at hand when something must be done to save the day for the cotton growers.

YOUNG MAN SHOT SATURDAY

Robert Turner, a young man 21 or 22 years old, was accidentally shot last Saturday afternoon at his home on the Monkey Wrench Wilson place just north of Clanton. It is said that the accident happened while the young man was engaged in cleaning his pistol. The bullet entered the stomach, plowed its way through the bowels and lodged just under the skin in his back.

Turner was rushed to a hospital in Birmingham and the latest report from him was more favorable than was expected, as it was thought at first that the wound would prove fatal.

The young man was a soldier in the recent war, going all through the conflict in France without a wound. It seems strange that he should get by all the big whizz bangs of the Boches, and come home to become the victim of a little old rusty pistol in his own hands.

MARS HILL NEWS

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a small space in your paper.

Health of this place is just fine. We are all glad to say that Uncle Tommie Watson is still living.

We are all proud to see these few days of sunny weather. Fodder pulling is all the go here now.

Miss Bettie Langston is visiting relatives near Birmingham.

Several of the young folks have been attendng the meeting at Jemison.

Mr. C. M. Scott and family, also Mrs. Hattie Scott, attended the singing at Center Hill Sunday afternoon and report a nice time.

The protracted meeting is going to start at this place the second Sunday in September.

Miss Jewell Scott, Miss Mae Clark, Miss Bessie Guthrie and Miss Beulah Guthrie attended services here Sunday night.

Our school closed Friday with a ball game.

Mr. Grady Brantley and wife has moved back to Brompton.

Come on everybody and let's all have a good meeting. Peaches and water melons are nearly all gone, but we will find something else to eat.

Mr. J. A. Maddox of the Clanton Mill and Gin Co., announces to his customers that he has installed an electric motor equipment with which to run his gins in the future, and thereby he expects to be able to render better service. The coming of the Alabama Power Company to Clanton enables men like Mr. Maddox to employ electric energy to run their machinery and thereby get away from the stringency that is hanging over the coal and fuel situation. As long as the Coosa River keeps running Mr. Maddox can gin cotton right on and let the coal stay in the mines.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

To be Held in School District Number Twenty-Three of Chilton County, Alabama.

Notice is hereby given that a special election will be held at the regular voting place in Maplesville in District No. 23 of Chilton County, Alabama, on the 20th day of September, 1920, to determine whether or not a special district tax of thirty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property shall be levied and collected annually on the taxable property of said district for the present tax year and continuing for a period of ten years. Said levy is proposed to be made for public school purposes within said district. The boundary of said District Twenty-Three is as follows:—Beginning at the north west corner of Section 6, Township 21, Range 12, thence east four miles to the north east corner of Section 3, Township 21, Range 12, thence south two miles to the north west corner of Section 14, Township 21, Range 12, thence east one and one-half miles to the north east corner of the NW¼ of Section 13, Township 21, Range 12, thence south one mile to the south east corner of the SW¼ of Section 13, Township 21, Range 12, thence east one-half mile to the north east corner of Section 24, Township 21, Range 12, thence south one mile to the south east corner of Section 24, Township 21, Range 12, thence west one mile to the south west corner of Section 24, Township 21, Range 12, thence south one mile to the south east corner of Section 26, Township 21, Range 12, thence west five miles to the south west corner of Section 30, Township 21, Range 12, thence north five miles to point of beginning.

This the 19th day of August, 1920.
J. L. GORE,
Sheriff Chilton County, Ala.

Jim Grant brought us the annual watermelon last Saturday. It was a great big Watson, the finest of the kind we have seen this year.

The Chilton Cafe serves anything you want to eat, well cooked, nicely prepared, and at the right price. You wont have to wait either.

FIRST WOMAN TO REGISTER IN CHILTON COUNTY

The first woman to qualify as a legal voter in Chilton County under the provisions of the Susan B. Anthony Amendment to the Constitution of the United Staes was Mrs. Mollie Murrah Sessions, the clerk in the County Tax Office. She was issued her certificate of Registration last Friday, August 27th, by County Registrar, J. R. Parnell. In discussing the incident of her registration Mith Mrs. Sessions, the matter of politics was of course mentioned, whereupon Mrs. Session pledged her loyalty and allegiance to the Republican party.

You can hear it in our store

—the phonograph that is featured in Vaudeville's strangest act

Perhaps you've seen it—Signor Friscoe's "Magic" Xylophone Act.

It's the hit of vaudeville's "Big-Time."

Signor Friscoe's "magic" is an Official Laboratory Model of the New Edison. We have one exactly like it.

Signor Friscoe's instrument is an exact duplicate of the original Official Laboratory Model, which cost Mr Edison three million dollars to perfect. Our instrument is also an exact duplicate of this famous three million dollar original. We guarantee it to be able to give the same marvelous RE-CREATIONS of music, which Signor Friscoe's Official Laboratory Model gives in vaudeville.

Come in and test the astonishing realism of this instrument for yourself—in Mr. Edison's Realism Test.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

You've read how the New Edison has proved its perfect realism. Four thousand tests have been given, in which more than 50 different artists compared their art with its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. Leading newspapers conceded that there was no difference between the two.

Has any one suggested to you that these comparison tests are "faked"— that the artist imitates the New Edison?

Signor Friscoe's performance makes such an assertion positively ridiculous. Every week, 20,000 people see his hammers ripple over the xylophone keys. Suddenly he holds them aloft—still.

The rippling music continues.

Slowly, the gorgeous curtains of the back-drop part. The audience gasps. The New Edison stands revealed. It has taken up Signor Friscoe's performance, and is now RE-CREATING it alone. The effect of this extraordinary magic can rest upon only one fact: No one can distinguish any difference between Signor Friscoe's performance and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. Signor Friscoe could not possibly imitate the New Edison, because the xylophone can not be made to imitate any other instrument, so as to deceive its hearers

Signor Friscoe's act is not an Edison enterprise He has simply been clever enough to use the New Edison for what it is worth. Why don't you?

PRICES

The price of the New Edison has increased less than 15% since 1914 This includes the War Tax.

Mr. Edison has staved off price advances by personally absorbing more than half of the increased cost of manufacture.

Because of the exceptionally high quality of materials and workmanship demanded by the Edison Laboratories, and the continued scarcity of both, it may be necessary to advance prices. But rest assured that this will not occur, unless Mr. Edison is forced to it.

Our Budget Plan—the thrift way of spending—will help you buy now. Let us tell you about it.

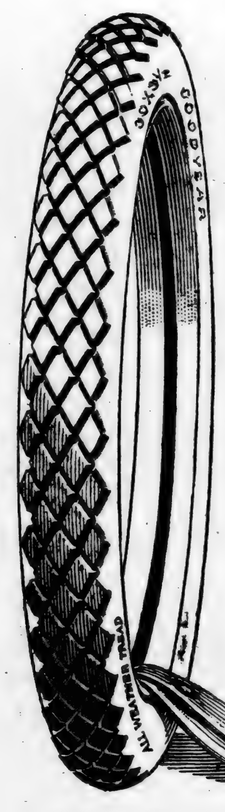
The Economy of Using Goodyear Small Car Tires



So-called bargain tires, made up for sensational sales and offered at ridiculously low prices, do not attract careful buyers.

They are far more concerned with what they get than with what they pay because they know that in the end it is performance and not price that delivers actual tire economy.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½- and 31 x 4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

30x3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread..... $23.50

30x3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread..... $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30x3½ size in waterproof bag..... $4.50

WEAK, NERVOUS, ALL RUN-DOWN

Missouri Lady Suffered Until She Tried Cardui.—Says "Result Was Surprising."—Got Along Fine, Became Normal and Healthy.

Springfield Mo.—"My back was so weak I could hardly stand up, and I would have bearing-down pains and was not well at any time," says Mrs. B. V. Williams, wife of a well-known farmer on Route 6, this place. "I kept getting headaches and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband, having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me.

"I saw after taking some Cardui ... that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person.

"Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me ... My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."

Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

Is Your Skin Ablaze With Fiery Itchings?

Don't Continue to Suffer Because of Wrong Treatment.

Impurities in the blood cause millions of tiny disease germs to set up their attack on the surface of the skin, and in the form of pimples, boils, scaly eruptions and itchy, burning irritations, begin their disfiguring and destructive work.

These disease germs can be reached only through the blood, and local applications have no effect whatever. That is why salves ointments, lotions, washes and other remedies applied to the skin can do no more than give mere temporary relief.

If you want genuine relief from the tortures of skin diseases, lose no time in discarding all local remedies, and begin taking S. S. S.

Fall Announcement

The rapid growth of our business is the best evidence of our progressive methods. Our sales for the first eight months of this year shows a wonderful increase over the same period in 1919. Inspired by judicious optimism, and the loyal patronage of the people of Clanton and surrounding territory, we are constantly forging ahead.

The pessimistic merchant or retailer who expects poor business usually gets what he is looking for, while his more progressive optimistic competitor enjoys good trade because he has prepared to meet the demands of his customers. We anticipate good business during the fall months and active demand for seasonable goods and we have backed our judgment by providing

OUR GREAT INCENTIVE TO DEVELOP THE WATERWAYS

ALABAMA HAS MORE NAVIGABLE RIVERS THAN ANY OTHER STATE
1570 MILES OF WATERWAYS OPEN TO STEAM NAVIGATION.

Water Transportation for Freight is the Cheapest Transportation on Earth

But the freight carrying capacity of the rivers can not develop beyond the freight handling capacity of the seaport.

The rivers can no more rise higher than their source than River Traffic can exceed the facilities for handling this traffic at the rivers' outlet, the port.

Congestion of the Port is Death to River Transportation!

Those who would kill the rivers, first strangle the seaport, and the deed is done.

To preserve water transportation to the use of the people, Alabama must own and control the terminals at the state's only seaport—Mobile.

This can be done without cost to the taxpayers, by lending the credit of the state for the construction of wharves, cotton warehouses, grain elevators and modern freight handling devices at the seaport.

These terminal facilities will pay for themselves. They will be owned and controlled by the state. They will keep the rivers and seaport free from monopoly. They will result in lower freight rates.

The voters of Alabama can help to achieve this Transportation Independence by voting for the SEAPORT AMENDMENT at the general election, November 2nd.

For 17 years Louisiana has backed its port, making New Orleans the second seaport of the United States. Alabama can do no less.

The House of Whispers

"WHO SHOT HER?"

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson is occupying the apartments of his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. The Gastons, leaving on a trip, tell him about mysterious noises and "whispers" that have scared them. He becomes acquainted with Barbara Bradford, who lives in the same big building. He instinctively dislikes and distrusts the superintendent, Wick. The mysteries in his apartments begin with the disappearance of the Gaston pearls from the wall safe. He decides not to call in the police, but to do his own investigating. It is soon evident that someone has access to his rooms. Becoming friendly with Barbara, he learns that her apartments are equally mysterious. She tells him that several years before her sister Claire, who lives with her, had made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson takes Miss Kelly, the telephone girl, to dinner with the idea of pumping her. Gorman, a hotel detective, recognizes her as the wife of Lefty Moore, a noted burglar. Nelson tells his story to Gorman and puts the case in his hands. Nelson finds a secret passage, with a panel door in his room. He realizes he loves Barbara. He and Barbara hear a shot in the building.

I sprang after her, but she moved so quickly that she was out of the window and safely home before I could stop her. Only waiting to see her off the ledge I turned back and hastily pulling the panel into place I dashed for the front of the house. The screams and the shots I was sure had come from the apartment directly below mine. I was certain that there had been murder done there, and my mind was made up to investigate it at once. If I moved quickly there might be an opportunity to catch the murderer red-handed. I let myself out and dashed down the one flight of stairs. As I arrived there, the ascending elevator stopped, and Mr. Wick burst out, followed by an excited elevator runner. Wick was carrying a revolver in his hand.

"Did you hear anything?" he asked excitedly.

"I heard a woman screaming in this apartment and then a shot."

"I heard it, too. In which apartment was it?"

"Right here," I said, pointing to the door.

"Miss Lutan's," he said. "Let's go in. Here's my pass-key. You open the door. I'll be right behind you with my revolver."

CHAPTER VIII.

Inserting the key Mr. Wick handed me, I turned it sharply and flung the door wide. It revealed a luxuriously furnished apartment, the front rooms of which were extravagantly ablaze with light.

For a moment the three of us, Mr. Wick, the elevator boy and myself, stood there with our ears alert for any sound from the apartment. While I do not admit to being a coward, the unknown has its terrors for all of us, and I must confess that the knowledge that Mr. Wick had his revolver drawn was indeed comforting. All was silence in the place.

"John," said Wick to the elevator boy, "you stand here right by the door

"She Has Been Murdered," I Cried; "Get the Police at Once."

and keep your eye on the elevator. If anybody tries to sneak past you, you holler for us."

"'Deed I will, Mr. Wick," said the boy, with chattering teeth. "I'll holler, all right."

"Go ahead, Mr. Nelson," said the superintendent, "I'm right behind you with the revolver."

Without waiting to explore the front rooms, I turned at once and ran down the long hall to the sitting room. If, as I suspected, murder had been done here, I was confident that the scene of the tragedy would be the room directly under mine. The screams I had heard—and the shot—had seemed to come from under my very feet.

Although the lights in the front of the hall were burning, the sitting room was in darkness. As I reached the door, my fingers sought the button, and as the flare of light illuminated the room I looked hastily about me. There was no one there, but my one quick glance showed me that the door of the wall safe, located similarly to the one in the apartment above, was standing wide open, Quirkly I sprang to inspect the room corresponding to mine, a room, it will be recalled, opening off the sitting room. Here, too, was darkness, and as I turned on the lights, I stood aghast with horror.

On the floor, close up to the inner wall, lay the contorted body of a beautiful young woman. Her eyes were wide open and staring. One arm was twisted under her, and the other hand was clutching at the front of her bodice, where a blotch of ghastly red indicated the path of the shot that I had heard.

"It's Miss Lutan," said Mr. Wick's voice behind me.

"She's been murdered," I cried; "get the police at once."

As I bent over her to see if there was any evidence of life, I saw imprinted in her tender white throat the marks of her assailant's brutal fingers.

"Come," I said, "help me lift her on to this couch, and then telephone at once for a doctor."

Mr. Wick had been all the while standing there, staring at the body as if stupefied by the tragedy, but he obeyed my directions, and with him at her feet and I at her head we laid her down on the couch, where I proceeded to loosen her gown and to try by artificial respiration to restore her blood to circulation.

"Get the doctor at once," I commanded again, "and 'phone for the police."

"John," called out Mr. Wick, "go to the 'phone and tell Miss Kelly to send for Doctor Hunt to come at once."

"Tell her to get the police, too," I insisted.

"And let the burglar escape while we're doing it," objected Mr. Wick. "Come on, let's look through the apartment. He may be hiding somewhere still."

Together, while the boy was 'phoning, we went from room to room, peering into closets and under beds. There was no one there and no traces of the murderer's presence. Even the servants' quarters were untenanted. Only one thing happened that struck me as peculiar. As I started up the hall to search the bedrooms, I looked back and caught Mr. Wick furtively closing the wall safe. His action in surreptitiously closing this without saying anything to me made me suddenly suspicious of him. I recalled that Detective Gorman had put Mr. Wick into his circle of suspects along with the burglar's wife. Could it be possible that the superintendent of the building himself was in connivance with the band of criminals who had been harassing the Bradfords and me? I determined to watch his every move.

"There's no one here," I said, as we completed our round of the various rooms. "The murderer has made his escape. Hasn't that boy 'phoned for the police yet?"

Mr. Wick seemed so averse to carrying out my suggestion about the police that I think he must have sensed the suspicion in my voice.

"I think I had better ask Mr. Kent about it first," he said nervously.

"Who's Mr. Kent?" I demanded.

My thoughts were so taken up with the unexpected tragedy that the name at first meant nothing to me. Suddenly I remembered. It was to the apartment of Mr. Henry Kent that Miss Kelly had 'phoned last night when she was dining with me. I recalled, too, that Gorman had charged me to find out all I could about him.

"Who's Mr. Kent?" I repeated sharply. "What's he got to do with it?"

"He's the owner of the building," explained Mr. Wick. "He doesn't like the Granddeck to be mentioned in the papers. He says any notoriety is bad for its exclusiveness. I don't believe he'd want the police called in. In fact, sir, I'm sure he wouldn't."

"Whether he wants it or not," I said firmly, "it's got to be done. You can't keep murders out of the paper. Either you call the police right away or else I will."

My threat forced him to telephone against his will. I could quite understand his employer's aversion to having a crime in the Granddeck made public. But there was no help for it. There had been a dastardly crime committed, and the police must be informed. Yet it was not to the police that Mr. Wick was telephoning. It evidently was to Mr. Kent's apartment in the building.

"Miss Lutan's been shot by a burglar in her apartment," I heard him say. "Mr. Nelson and me just discovered her body. What's that, sir?"

Just what Mr. Kent's reply on hearing the shocking news had been I had, of course, no means of knowing, but whatever it was, over the superintendent's face came an expression of incredulity and amazement.

"What do you think," said Mr. Wick, turning to me; "he says for me to call up Headquarters at once."

"Of course," I said, "it is the only thing to do."

Nevertheless, as Mr. Wick waited for the number, he kept shaking his head and muttering under his breath something that sounded like:

"To think of his telling me to call in the police!"

With the doctor summoned and the police sent for, there seemed to be little else for us to do but wait, so Wick and I sat down together in the rear sitting room with the elevator boy still on guard at the door.

"Who was Miss Lutan?" I asked.

"Why, Daisy Lutan, the actress," said Mr. Wick in surprise. "I supposed every one knew her."

"I've heard about her," I hastened to say, "but I had no idea that she lived in the Granddeck. Did she live here alone?"

"She keeps a maid, an old woman that has been with her for years."

"Where's the maid tonight?"

"Out to the movies, I s'pose. That's where she goes every night when Miss Lutan isn't playing. When she is, she goes to the theater with her."

"Then Miss Lutan is not playing now?"

"Not for the last month."

"Had there been any one here with her tonight?"

"I'll ask the elevator boy."

"John says she came in alone about fifteen minutes ago," said Mr. Wick when he came back. "She went out about seven. Her own chauffeur was driving her then, but when she came back she was in a hired taxi. That's something I can't understand."

"Women of Her Type Always Have a Lot of Men Friends."

"How do you suppose the murderer escaped?"

I was trying every avenue of questioning to see if I could not surprise Wick into some damaging admission. I was beginning to suspect that he knew far more about Miss Lutan's murderer than he was telling. I felt somehow that his whole search for the man who had killed Miss Lutan had been entirely perfunctory, a bluff to deceive me. In my growing dislike for the man, I felt that it would not be beyond the range of probability for Wick to have been standing guard at the door while a confederate rifled the apartment.

"I'm no detective," he answered noncommittally. "All I know is that he has gone. He certainly ain't here in the apartment."

It was on the tip of my tongue to suggest that we look in the secret passageway. I felt that the shock it would be to Wick to learn that I knew about this might lead him to open his lips. I felt certain that it was by way of a similar passageway to the one I had discovered in my room that the murderer had escaped. But before I could make up my mind to speak the doctor arrived.

He made a hasty inspection and then said tersely:

"There's nothing here for me to do. This woman has been dead for some time."

"How long?" I asked.

"It is impossible for me to judge—maybe twenty minutes, perhaps an hour. I should say that death was practically instantaneous. She was killed by a bullet penetrating the heart. Who shot her?"

He looked sharply from me to Mr. Wick, as if suspecting that it might have been one of us.

"A burglar got her just a few minutes ago," Mr. Wick explained. "Mr. Nelson and me heard a scream and a shot. We let ourselves in here with my pass key and found her here. It must have been a burglar that she surprised when she entered the apartment."

"It looks like it," assented the physician. "There are marks on her throat where he tried to strangle her screams. Have you notified the police?"

"Yes," said Mr. Wick.

"There's nothing more that I can do, then," said the doctor, making his preparations to depart.

"Would you not wait until the police come?" suggested the superintendent. "They'll be here any minute and probably they'll want a statement from you."

"Very well," said the doctor, "I'll wait."

As we waited the three of us chatted about the crime and about the dead actress. From the conversation I learned that at the height of her meteoric career on Broadway Daisy Lutan had become the wife of the young son of a very rich family. His parents insisted that she had trapped him into matrimony and after long legal wrangling she had been divorced about a year ago. She had received a large sum in settlement, and this with her earnings as an actress enabled her to live in luxury.

"Hadn't she a sweetheart now?" I asked.

"Better make it plural," sneered the doctor, "Women of her type always have a lot of men friends."

"No men ever came to see her here. I'm positive of that," said Mr. Wick.

"Of course not," said the doctor sarcastically. "The reputation of the Granddeck apartments must be protected at all costs."

As we talked two detectives in plain clothes arrived. They viewed the body and proceeded to question the doctor.

"How was this woman killed?"

"By a revolver shot right through the heart."

"Who is she?"

"Daisy Lutan, the actress."

"Who did it?"

"It must have been a burglar," interjected Mr. Wick. "My theory is that she came in unexpectedly and found him at work."

"Who found her?"

"These gentlemen," said the doctor, including both Mr. Wick and me with a wave of his hand.

The detectives turned to Mr. Wick first.

"Tell us about it," one of them directed.

"My name is James Wick," he began as if he was reciting a familiar lesson. "I am the superintendent of the Granddeck apartments. I was in the elevator about half an hour ago when I heard a woman screaming and then the sound of the shot. I took out my revolver and got off at this floor to investigate. At the door I found Mr. Nelson. He, too, had heard the screams and the shot and thought they came from this apartment. I took out my pass key and we went in."

"Were there any signs of the burglar?" asked the other man.

"No, we looked all through the apartment and found no one."

"Was anything missing?"

I waited with bated breath to hear if Wick would tell of having found the wall safe open. If he did not I felt it would be conclusive evidence that there was something he was trying to conceal.

"I didn't notice anything missing," he said glibly. "I wouldn't know, anyhow. I don't know what stuff she had here."

"Who would know?"

"Her maid might. She's out now. Generally she's home by eleven o'clock."

"Did she keep only the one servant?"

"Only the maid and a chauffeur."

"Then she was all alone in the apartment?"

"Yes. She'd gone out all dressed up about seven in her own car. She came home unexpectedly in a hired taxi not more than half an hour ago."

"Did she come home alone?"

"Sure she was alone. At least the hall boys told me so. I did not see her come in, myself."

More and more I was convinced that Wick was lying. I was sure he knew far more about affairs than he was admitting. Why did he keep harping on the fact that Miss Lutan had come in "unexpectedly?" What means had he of knowing what time she was expected home? Furthermore he said he was in the elevator when he heard the screams and the shot. I did not believe it would have been possible for the sounds to have carried that far. The walls were all deadened, and the room where the tragedy had taken place was at the back of the house many feet distant from the elevators. I wondered if the burglar had not been in the place with Mr. Wick's connivance, while he stood guard outside. As he heard me coming he might have taken refuge in the elevator. And why did he have his revolver so conveniently ready?

The detective who had been questioning Wick turned to me.

"Who are you?"

"Spalding Nelson."

"What do you do? Where do you work?"

"I'm a clerk."

"A clerk living at the Granddeck apartments," he sneered. "You must have a good job."

"I haven't any at present," I replied. "I'm living here in Mr. Gaston's apartment, taking care of it while he and his wife are away."

I could see that my statement that I was only a clerk and was not at present employed had not made a favorable impression on the detective.

"Will you explain what you were doing at the door of this apartment when the superintendent arrived?" he demanded with a growing suspicion in his tones.

"That's easy to explain," I retorted. "I was in my apartment directly over this one. I heard her scream and then the shot. It seemed to come from the floor right below me, so I ran down to investigate."

"Is that right?" he asked, turning to Mr. Wick.

The net about Nelson is drawn closer.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Having a purpose in life is essential to right living. Unless a man is now living to a purpose, he has either not yet begun to live, or he has got through living; and in either case he is out of place in the world.

COLD MEAT COOKERY.

So often a few slices of some choice roast, steak or stew is allowed to waste because the family is tired of it, when a little different way of serving the meat, a new sauce, would make it a most attractive and appetizing dish.

Roulade de Boeuf.—Take a pound of cold roast beef, free it from skin, bone and gristle, and put it through the meat grinder with a third of a pound or less of ham or bacon, lean and fat together. Season highly with salt and pepper, add a teaspoonful of finely minced olives, a few drops of tabasco, a teaspoonful of minced parsley, a little lemon peel and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix all together and add a half cupful of cooked macaroni, cut in one-inch lengths and tossed in butter. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, and the whites beaten to a stiff froth. Mix well, roll and cover with a greased paper and bake in a well-greased baking pan in a moderate oven one-half hour. Serve with the following sauces: Add salt and pepper to a pint of tomatoes which have been put through a sieve. Add a teaspoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of onion juice, or a half clove of garlic minced. Cook until reduced slightly in bulk.

Cannelon a la Royale.—Take a pound of cold roast veal, free it from skin and fat and grind it twice through the meat chopper. Add to it a quarter of a pound of ham also minced. Add salt, pepper, minced parsley, half a teaspoonful of minced shallot, a little grated lemon rind and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix well, add two well-beaten eggs, shape in a roll, cover with buttered paper and bake a half hour.

Mutton Reheated.—Underdone mutton can be turned into a very nice dish. Cut a sufficient number of slices from a leg of mutton; cut in rounds or squares. Place a tablespoonful of butter in a plate. Add to it a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and salt to taste. Have ready well-browned toast, place a piece of mutton on each, place in a hot oven and bake ten minutes.

Because in a day of my days to come
There waiteth a grief to be,
Shall my heart grow faint, and my lips be dumb
In this day that is bright for me?

Because of a subtle sense of pain,
Like a pulse-beat threaded through
The bliss of my thought, shall dare refrain
From delight in the pure and true?

REFRESHING FROZEN DISHES.

One may have such a variety of frozen dishes with the foundation prepared like the usual vanilla ice cream. Various sauces, fruits, nuts, all add to the attractiveness and lend variety.

Banana Sherbet.—Put three cupfuls of water and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar in a saucepan; boil five minutes. Add the juice of one lemon and two oranges, with a little of the grated rind of each and one cupful of banana pulp. Scrape off the stringy portion of the bananas before putting through a sieve. Beat the sirup and fruit mixture till cold, then stir in three cupfuls of whipped cream, measured after whipping, or the whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Freeze until soft like mush. Serve in frappe glasses.

Banana Jelly.—Take one pint of banana pulp, the juice of one lemon, one-fourth cupful of orange juice or any good fruit juice, one-half cup of sugar, one-third of a package of gelatin, one-third of a cupful of cold water. Soak the gelatin in cold water, put the bananas through a sieve, add the sugar, the juice and let stand until the gelatin is softened and dissolved over hot water. Mix all together thoroughly and turn into a mold. Let stand in a cold place to become firm. Serve with cream or a custard.

Honey Taffy.—Boil (270 degrees Fahrenheit) one cupful of sugar, one cupful of water together until it makes a hard ball when dropped in cold water. Add vanilla or other flavoring, pour into a buttered dish and cool until it can be handled, then pull.

Honey Hermits.—Take one cupful of shortening, one and one-half cupfuls of honey, one teaspoonful of soda, three eggs, five cupfuls of sifted flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two and one-fourth cupfuls of raisins, chopped, two and one-fourth cupfuls of nut meats, chopped. Dissolve the soda in the honey, warmed, add the shortening and cream together. Beat the eggs well, add the flour, salt and cinnamon, and lastly the raisins and nuts. Sift until stiff and drop from teaspoon on a buttered sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

Eggs aux Tomatoes.—Put a half pint of tomato pulp well seasoned in a well-buttered baking dish. Add a tablespoonful of butter, set into the oven for ten minutes then remove, add four eggs, added carefully, poach. Cook from three to four minutes and serve from the dish.

Governor Roberts of Tennessee certified by registered mail to Secretary of State Colby Tennessee's ratification of the woman suffrage amendment ater receiving from Attorney General Frank M. Thompson an opinion that a writ of certiorari and supersedeas issued by Chief Justice D. L. Lansden of the state supreme court in effect set aside an order temporarily restraining the governor from taking such action. This announcement fell like a bombshell on the ears of the anti-suffragists.

The lumber producers lack cars to ship lumber to the car builders so the car builders cannot make cars to ship the lumber in. As a result building costs are mounting higher. This is not because production is slowing down, but because enough freight cars cannot be secured.

An amended order making W. M. Carter and John Green, chief clerks, of the Tennessee senate and house, respectively, parties to the temporary injunction restraining the governor, secretary of state and speakers of the senate and house from taking any action with regard to certifying ratification of the woman suffrage amendment to Washington, is the only important development in the contest over Tennessee's ratification of the measure. The original bill filed by citizens opposed to suffrage is based largely on the contention that action on the amendment by this legislature was inhibited by the state constitution.

USE MACHINES IN CUTTING CORN

The Proper Time for Cutting Corn In Order to Preserve Its Full Feeding Value Is So Short That the Saving of Time From the Use of Machinery for Harvesting Often Means More In the Farmer's Pocket Than Merely the Wages Saved.

Cutting corn with machinery does not reduce materially the cost of cutting. It does, however, enable the farmer to cut a given acreage much more quickly, and, in that way, often proves profitable. The proper time for cutting corn in order to preserve its full feeding value is so short and other work is usually so pressing that the saving of time often means a great deal more in the farmer's pocket than could any actual saving in wages and other cutting costs. This is the view taken of corn-harvesting machinery by the United States department of agriculture, as expressed in Farmers' Bulletin 992, the Use of Machinery in Cutting Corn. The saving is greater in cutting corn for silage than for fodder, the bulletin continues.

The two types of corn-harvesting machinery, the corn binder and the platform harvester, are discussed in detail. Under normal conditions, it is stated, the binder drawn by three horses will cut about seven acres in a ten-hour day. One man will be required to operate the machine and two to shock the corn. These three men working with corn knives would probably be able to cut about four acres in a ten-hour day. The binder, therefore, does nearly twice as much work as the three men could do without it.

Objection to Binder.

There are, however, limitations and objections to the use of the binder. If the corn is badly blown down, the binder may not be able to handle it and may have to stand idle through a season. The binder necessarily knocks off some of the ears, and it may be necessary to send a man over the field to pick up the ears by hand. Men at first find it harder to handle the bundles from a binder than to handle loose stalks. Some binders drop the bundles so nearly behind the machine that the horses have to walk over them on the next round, and thus considerable damage is done to the corn. However, the specialists say, these objections can be minimized even where they cannot be completely obviated.

In order to make the use of the binder worth while, the reduction in labor and the saving due to getting the work done at the proper time must more than pay for the use of the machine, the twine, and the labor of the horses.

The saving is greater when cutting for silage, for several reasons. The binder saves the labor of at least two men in cutting. Often the saving in time due to having the stalks in bundles instead of loose will enable the operator further to reduce the size of the crew. If only a small amount of silage is to be put up, a binder would not be a paying operation unless there were a large quantity of other corn to cut. The co-operative use of both binder and cutter is discussed and is recommended where the only corn cut is that for silage. Co-operative ownership and use of the binder is said to be frequently advantageous for small farmers. The use of the corn elevator in connection with the binder is discussed and both the advantages and disadvantages pointed out.

Platform Harvester Cheaper.

The platform harvester, while a cruder machine than the binder, is much less expensive to purchase, requires only one horse instead of three or four, and two men instead of three. Its day's work is about four or five acres. Generally, the equivalent of the labor of one man is saved every day the platform harvester is used. The work is harder with the platform harvester than with the binder. But the platform harvester can be used more profitably on small farms than can a binder and it can stand idle a greater part of the time or wear out sooner than a binder and still be a profitable investment. In cutting corn for silage, the platform harvester will not save as much labor as a binder.

DECREASE INDICATED IN ANIMAL PRODUCTS

Losing Ground in Value of Exports Since 1893.

World War Brought Percentage Up Suddenly to 29.4, or Almost Double What It Had Been In Preceding Five Years.

Animal products have been losing ground in relative position in the value of the agricultural exports of this country since 1893. In that year they were 20.8 per cent of the value of all domestic agricultural exports, and, by 5-year averages, they were 28.4 per cent in 1894-1898, 27.2 per cent in 1899-1903, 24.8 per cent in 1904-1908, and 16.9 per cent in 1909-1913.

Then followed the world war. This brought the percentage for animal products up to 29.4, or suddenly to a fraction almost double what it had been in the preceding five years.

The percentages for crops and crop products being complementary to those for animal products, it follows that crops gained relatively when animal products lost, and lost when they gained. It is to be remembered that values are involved and not quantities.

Steady gain in relative position in the imports of this country has been made by animal products, and the war accentuated the gain. From 1894-1898 to 1914-1918, the fraction representing these products increased from 27.5 to 39.1 per cent.

COWPEAS ARE ADVANTAGEOUS

Plant Can Endure Considerable Drought Under Favorable Circumstances—Good as Feed.

Cowpeas are lovers of warm sunshine and can endure considerable drought under favorable circumstances. There are few crops equal to cowpeas for feed, for soil improvement and for human food. They may be planted late with a considerable assurance of a crop.

KEEPING FLIES FROM COWS

Mixtures Recommended by Dr. C. H. Eckles Applied Advantageously With Spray Pump.

The following two formulas of a reasonably priced "fly repellent" were recommended by Dr. C. H. Eckles when he was professor of the department of dairying of the Missouri university college of agriculture:

1. Fish oil 1 gallon, oil of pine tar 2 ounces, oil of pennyroyal 2 ounces, kerosene ½ pint.

2. Fish oil 1 quart, petroleum 1 quart, carbolic acid 1 ounce.

These mixtures, like the ready mixed ones, are applied most advantageously with a hand spray pump. The spray is generally applied once a day, just before the evening milking.

REPORT ON INLAND PORT BY EXPERTS

PREPARE FOR WATERWAYS CONFERENCE IN MONTGOMERY SEPTEMBER 15.

DEVELOP ALABAMA RIVERS

People of State to Be Shown How They Can Utilize the Waterways.

Experts Report On Inland Ports.

Montgomery—Complete reports will be made to the waterways mass meeting of all that is being done and attempted for the development of Alabama rivers and seaport. These statements from authoriative sources are expected to be one of the most important features of the gathering in Montgomery on September 15, in the opinion of Clayton T. Tullis, of Montgomery, chairman of the committee having charge of the arrangements on the part of the state harbor commission, of which he is a member. The two senators, the senator-elect and all of the congressmen present and designated, and all of the members of the legislature, are expected to be in attendance, both to hear these reports and to give their own views on the subjects embraced therein. The people of the State are to be shown how they can utilize the waterways to their own advantage and their representatives will be shown how they can assist in the work to be planned by the Alabama Waterways Association, which is to be organized at the Montgomery meeting.

THE CHILTON COUNTY S. S. CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association was held in Clanton August 23, 1920.

We were very glad to see so many schools represented. We are sure every one that attended was benefitted by the splendid speeches made by our state workers, Mr. J.B. Green and Miss Bean, and our people here at home, Rev. Carter, Rev. Maye and Miss Gibson. Short talks were made by others such as our county president, Mr. Flummer. They were all helpful, and we feel sure everyone went home with a determination to do more for the Master in the future than in the past.

Reports show that our county president, Mr. D. J. Flummer, Teenage Supt., Prof. J. L. Johnson, have been very busy. We regret so much that we didn't have Mr. Johnson's report made, but time was short, and it, with the report of our district president, was left off.

The best work done was not reported. The secretary's report shows about eighty schools in county; twenty-four sent in their reports; 1850 reported in Sunday School, including home department and cradle roll. If we had reports from all the schools these figure would have looked real good. We hope to make it better next year.

The county officers are: President, Prof. J. L. Johnson, Clanton; Vice President, D. J. Flummer, Thorsby; Secretary & Treasurer, Della Willitms, Verebna; Adult Supt., J. C. Patjllo, Verbena; Teenage Supt., R. L. Duffey, Mt. Creek; Elementary Supt., Mrs. Maggie Boone, Verbena.

Following are district presidents: District No. 1, to be supplied; No. 2. Felix Eiland, Thorsby; No. 3, T. L. Lecroy, Maplesville; No. 4, H. A. Harris, Clanton; No. 5, W. A. Calloway, Verbena; No. 6. Howard Oden, Maplesville. Executive Committee: Chairman, Rev. P. G. Carter, Clanton; H. J. Grooms, Mulberry; Miss Bertha Littleton, Thorsby.

Following are the resolutions:

1st. Whereas, there is much misunderstanding among some of the denominations and people of Chilton County, concernig the Alabama Sunday School Association,

Therefore, be it resolved, That a strong propaganda be put on in the county through the county paper by the distribution of literature, by personal visitation, by addresses at the district meetings and the conventions, and in any other way possible setting forth the real purpose and work of the said association.

2nd. That this be done by the officers and executive committees of the county, assisted in every way possible by the headquarters for this State.

Resolved, second, That the Alabama Sunday School Association with its local officers tender their grateful thanks, first, to the County Commissioners for the use of the court house in which to hold the convention; second, to the people of Clanton who entertained the visiting delegates in their homes; third, to all other workers who have contributed in any way for the success of the convention.

Resolved third, Whereas, many schools are giving a credit of 50 per cent on the grades of such pupils who are faithful in their attendance at Sunday School and furnishes a certificate of same. Therefore, we the Alabama Sunday School Association of Chilton County, indorse such actions and respectfully petition the county officials of said county a similar privilege to the teachers and pupils of the respective schools of the county.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Investment, Expense, Revenue

The year 1917 was the best year in the history of this Company. The Company earned during that year more money in the state of Alabama than ever before, or since.

The following figures speak for themselves:

Statement of Investment, Revenue and Expense, State of Alabama.

	1916	1917	1918	1919
Investment	$7,077,758.14	$7,412,337.34	$7,800,878.88	$8,341,724.24
Gross Revenue	1,849,159.87	1,984,168.14	2,219,100.40	2,605,993.84
Total Expenses	1,607,563.36	1,722,564.25	2,059,862.59	2,411,155.47
Net Revenue	241,596.51	261,603.89	159,237.31	194,838.37
Per cent of net earnings to investment	3.41	3.53	2.06	2.34

Contrast that with the per cent of profit earned in your legal business!

This Company has never earned a profit equal to the legal rate of interest in the State of Alabama, so there were no excess earnings during the past. These figures show the actual operations in this state.

The investment shown is all physical property, and is what it originally cost the Company. There is not one dollar for franchise, "going value" or any so-called intangible property.

There is no question of stocks or bonds or capitalization of any kind involved. These figures represent the original cost of the actual physical property of the Company used by the public of Alabama, the actual expenses incurred in operating that property and the gross and net revenue received—nothing more and nothing less.

This property is worth more than the figure representing its original cost. To reproduce this property today would cost not less than 100 per cent more than it originally cost.

If the Company's net earnings were measured by today's value of the property, they would not exceed 3 per cent.

The next advertisement will give the facts of the service situation.

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 4, 1920

Dear Sir:

You have been appointed a member of the Republican Campaign Committee of Chilton County in the coming campaign and you are requested to meet with the Committee and candidates at the court house in Clanton on next Friday, Sept. 10 at 10:00 o'clock, a.m. for the purpose of devising ways and means of successfully waging the coming campaign in this county.

We want two ladies on this committee from each Beat of the county and we expect to appoint them next Friday, and we ask that before that time you carefully consider this matter and be in a position to recommend such ladies at that meeting. Try to select ladies that can be of most service in getting the ladies of your Beat to register and vote in the November election.

We must begin at once the work of seeing that all the Republican ladies of the county register and vote, for if they do not our ticket stands a good chance of being defeated in the coming election.

All the candidates are expected to be at the meeting next Friday and we shall be greatly disappointed if you are not present. With best wishes for the success of the Republican party, I am, Your very truly,

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL HAS SPLENDID OPENING

The Chilton County High School began the fall term Wednesday, Sept. 1st, with a very fine first day attendance, which manifests a real interest and desire of parents that their children attain the best standing possible during this scholastic year. The enrollment has reached 143 to date. There are many more who expect to enter. You are urged to enter at once as you will find some difficulty in doing your work after entering late.

The school is progressing nicely under the management of a very enthusiastic faculty who are giving all of their time and energy toward making this the strongest year in the history of the school.

Organization and classification is now about complete and as soon as students have their studies well in hand athletics, literary societies, etc., will be organized.

Parents are invited to visit the school. This is your school and you are expected to visit at your convenience to see what we are endeavoring to accomplish.

PROVIDENCE, BEAT 16

Please give me space for a few words in your paper, as I have not seen anything from here lately.

Our literary school has just closed, which was one of the most successful ones we have have ever had for its length. It was under the management of Prof. J. N. Castleberry as principal and Miss Fanny Vance as assistant. We can freely recommend these teachers to any district. Their untiring efforts will advance any school and give any reasonable person satisfaction. Their loving disposition will win any considerate heart.

I am sure I can speak the sentiment of this district and say that we miss them as badly as any school ever missed their teachers when they left. We will always welcome them in our homes and wish them the greatest success.

Our protracted meeting started last Sunday night. Our Sunday School is progressing nicely, and we are having some fine weather.

J. N. Dennis and daughter, Lillian, were in Elmore County the last of the week.

Now Selling At Cost

Owing to the condition of my health, I will not be able to take care of my grocery store business in the future, and for that reason I am now selling out my entire stock of high grade groceries at cost and below.

My friends and former customers are especially invited to come in and get advantage of the great bargains we are now offering to get rid of this stock.

I have a splendid line of Blue Label Karo Syrup, which I am selling at 70 cents per gallon.

This stuff is going fast; hurry up if you want to get in on any of it.

W. L. CLARK OF PHOENIX CITY WRITES TO JUDGE REYNOLDS

Following is a letter received by Judge Reynolds, from Mr. W. L. Clark, of Phoenix City, Ala. The letter will explain itself:

Phoenix City, Ala., Aug. 30, 1920.

Judge Reynolds, Clanton, Ala:

My Dear Sir:

My attention was called by a little news item in the Tri-Weekly Atlanta Journal under date of August 29th, that you had been nominated by the Republican party of our state for U. S. Senator and that you had accepted and would conduct a vigorous campaign.

I trust this news item is true, even though published in a Democrat paper. I have never had the pleasure and honor of meeting you, but I have read some few statements of yours at different times published in different newspapers of the state, giving your views politically. I have often times wished I might have the opportunity and pleasure of voting for you, and now I hope my wishes may be a reality.

The time is certainly at hand for the Republican party to do some very effective campaigning in Alabama. 90 per cent of the voters of Alabama are absolutely ignorant politically. They need to hear some good political speeches, such as I feel sure you are fully competent to make. Quite a lot of men boost of the solid democracy of the South. I admit the solidity of the South, but the solid part I regret to say is solid graft and corruption. Every time the Republican party undertakes to conduct a campaign in Alabama the democrats raise a howl about the Republican party appointing negroes to office. I challenge any democrat or any man to deny and prove that Woodrow Wilson has appointed less negroes to office than any president who has ever occupied the White House. I believe government statistics will bear me out that Wilson has appointed more negroes to office than any president before him.

It is not my desire to offer you any suggestions to conduct the campaign, but I feel sure you need a weapon to defend the party on the negro question.

Should you need anything more than my little influence and vote in Lee County in your race notify me and my assistance is at your command.

Wishing you success and assuring you of my vote and influence, I am

Very truly,
W. L. CLARK,
Phoenix City, Ala.

CANDIDATTS FOR MAYOR AND TOWN COUNCIL.

The names of Dr. V. J. Gragg and Hon. F. B. Colbor have been announced as candidates for Mayor of Clanton to be voted on in the municipal election September 20th. For councilmen we have heard mentioned the names of M. L. White, Tom Kemp, Dr. T. J. Marcus, J. B. Atkinkson, J. B. Downs, Eric Hart, Dr. N. S. Johnson, V. J. Elmore and T. C. McSwain. The time is short from now till election day, but there will very probably be others to get into the race before it is finally consumated.

SHOULTS

Harvest time is here and people of this community are making good use of the fine weather.

A crowd from here attended the preaching service at Friendship church last Sunday night. Rev. Adams, who preached at Pleasant Grove some time ago is conducting a revival service there this week.

Mr. Hort Walker and Miss Myrtle McAfee, two splendid young people from this community, left Monday to attend the coming session in the Bibb county high school at Centerville. We wish them much success.

Mr. Sam Shoults and family, for mer residents of Selma, have moved them back again.

We are sorry to know that Miss Pearl Kelley is at this time sick with chills and fever. Hope she will soon be well again. Her mother, who fell some time ago and broke her hip, can not walk any yet. This family is having a bad time, and we do sympathize with them.

Mr. Rube Bearden and wife will leave this week for Holt, Ala., where they will make their future home.

So far the people here have not employed a teacher for the literary school, but are trying in every way to get one. Some of this community say they are going to move to some other community on account of the school conditions.

Isn't it strange that people and inteligent people will go everywhere else before they will go to church and Sunday Sshool. We are so sorry that we have men in this community who will not go to church and Sunday School and will not let their children go regulary. They will hitch up and carry their children to negro meetings miles away or to dances. What on earth do they expect their boys to be when they grow up. Children are going to be what they are trained to be. If they are trained in Sunday School and are taught pure and noble thoughts at home, they are going to be naturally without any effort Sunday School men and women, pure and noble. Because they cannot help but live what is in their hearts and what was taught them in child hood; and the main place is at home. A child who has been taught by Christian parents may stray away some times, but will sure come back and amount to something.

But we cannot expect very much of a child who has an ungodly father and mother, taught at home to curse, never to go to church, make and sell whiskey. It makes our hearts ache to think of such people, and yet we have them all over this country.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL OPENED UP ON TUESDAY

The Clanton Grammar School opened on Tuesday with an enrollment of over three hundred pupils, the largest number in the history of the school. This record was not surpassed even in the days before the County High School was established.

The opening exercises were attended by quite a number of citizens. Speeches suitable to the occasion were made by Rev. E. C. Maye, Rev. P. G. Carter, J. J. Pickens, and others.

With this session Prof. J. L. Johnson begins as principal of the school for the fifth year. Miss Icelo Williams of Duncanville, Ala., will have the first grade; this is her third year in the Clanton School. Miss Alice Brown Selman, of Goodwater, has the beginners. Miss Irene Jones of Clanton has the second grade. Mrs. F. B. Collier has the third grade; this is her second year in the Clanton Schools. Miss Bessie Thomas of Clanton has the fourth grade; this is her third year in the Clanton school. Miss Mary Timmerman of Prattville has the fifth grade; this is her third year here.

The most promising outlook shines forth for this years work in the school, both from the fact that we have an exceptionally good faculty in charge of the school, and also that the work will not be hampered for the lack of room in the building. The new structure is especially well arranged to meet the needs of the situation. The upper story that has been added this summer makes the building a credit to our town.

Mr. Sid Plier, the contractor, did an excellent job in constructing the addition to the building. He has the thanks of all the people of Clanton for his diligent efforts in getting the bulding ready for the school on time.

All things considered, this is the most promising session the Grammar School has ever entered. Our splendid teachers, new accommodations and facilities afforded by the new building, and the confidence that exists among the patrons of the school as a result of the splendid work last year guarantees to us the very best for this session. More desks will be purchased right away to accommodate the growing attendance. An incidental fee of $1.00 is charged for each pupil. All tuition is free.

LOCAL REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN OPENS IN CHILTON COUNTY

The great gathering of people at the court house in Clanton on last Friday to hear the speeches that were programmed for the day made the occasion an auspicious one for the opening of the campaign of the Republican party in Chilton County, looking to the success of the county ticket in November. There mas a mighty sentiment of enthusiasm manifest in the people for the endorsement of those things that are being contended for among the Republican candidates and speakers.

At 10 o'clock Hon. Pope M. Long, the State Chairman of the Alabama Republican Executive Committee was introduced to the crowded house full of people who were waiting eagerly for his masterful speech on The League of Nations. They were not at all disappointed in their expectations of a masterful speech. They were treated to a most wonderful digest of the much talked of Wilson League in its relation to the United States. The conclusion made by the speaker was sound and logical enough to convince anybody that this country has no business in going into the league if we are to continue to hold to our fundamental principles of American loyalty and freedom.

Following Mr. Long, Judge S. M. Adams made a few remarks along the same line. Although Judge Adams is a Democrat, he is avowedly opposed to the League of Nations. His remarks were well directed in adding emphasis to some of the points brought out by Mr. Long.

There were quite a number of women from over the county who took advantage of the opportunity and were present to hear the speeches in preparation of themselves for casting their ballot in November. They showed great interest in the explanation of the league by the able speakers.

After noon Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby County, the Republican candidate for Congress from this District, made a speech especially for the benefit of the women of the county who would be qualified and ready to vote in November. There were a great many more women present to hear his speech than were there in the forenoon. He made a very fine speech on the subject of women voting, and his remarks on the subject will prove effectual in bringing our women to a sense of their duty to exercise their right of suffrage at every opoprtunity.

Judge Reynolds made a few scattering remarks at intervals during the day. He did not assume a place on the program to make a speech, but only looked after the general program of the meeting, such as the introduction of the speakers, making of announcements and the like.

It might be said that in addition to the large number of voters from all over the county, the Republican candidates and practically every Republican leader in every precinct was here. The campaign was well launched, and everything put in good condition for the coming campaign. In the afternoon when the speaking was finished the Executive Comittee went into the transaction of business relative to the campaign. A full report of the doings of this committee will be found elsewhere in this paper.

All in all, the day was one spent well and very apropriately concluded for the good of the Republican cause in Chilton County. The influence of this great start will be felt through all the campaign and will produce its result in November by rolling up the usual majority, if not even a bigger one, for the Republican ticket.

MOTORTRUCK IS BIG TIME-SAVER

That Is Greatest Advantage as Expressed by Farmers in Many Eastern States.

WORK STOCK NOT CUT DOWN

Majority of Owners Queried Located Considerable Distance From Market—One-Ton Trucks Meet With General Approval.

"What do you find to be the greatest advantage of owning a motortruck?"

Of 753 farm owners of motortrucks who were asked this question by the United States department of agriculture, 91 per cent said "saving time."

About 25 per cent of these men had found better markets since buying their trucks, but 50 per cent of them had not cut down the number of their work stock by as much as a single head, while less than one man in ten had cut down his work stock more than two head.

"Which merely goes to show," says a department specialist in farm power, "how difficult it is to arrive at a definite conclusion in a matter like this motortruck study we have just completed. It would certainly appear that any saving attributable to the motortruck on the farm is in time saved rather than in expense. Most of these men think that the profits accruing from the saving in time more than overbalance any extra expense entailed by the use of the motortruck. It is significant that the majority of these farmers are located a considerable distance from market,

Of Farm Owners in Eastern States 91 Per Cent State That "Time Saving" Was Greatest Advantage Afforded by Trucks.

more than four-fifths of them being five miles or more from their shipping points, and the saving in time effected by their use of trucks is naturally greater than it would be on the average farm, which lies nearer to market than do most of the farms concerned in this investigation. The experience of the 753 farmers who have contributed to this study should enable the farmer himself to judge with a fair degree of accuracy as to whether the motortruck would prove advantageous under his conditions."

Investigation in Eastern States.

The investigation in question was made during the past winter and spring. Farmers in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Indiana, who have motortrucks for use on their own farms, were asked to report to the department the types and sizes of their farms, the use they make of their trucks, the cost of operating them, the advantages and disadvantages of trucks for farm use, and other related information.

A study of the reports of 753 of these farmers has just been completed by the office of farm management and farm economics. The farms which these men operate are of all sizes and types, and the motortrucks are of all sizes, from one-half to five tons. The rated capacity of very few of the trucks is greater than two tons, however, and nearly half of them are of the one-ton size.

Among the important facts revealed by the investigation may be mentioned the following:

Only 18 per cent of these farms are less than five miles from market and nearly one-fourth of them are 20 miles or more from market.

Ninety-five per cent of the farmers believe that their trucks will turn out to be profitable investments.

One-ton trucks are preferred by more men than prefer any other size. About half of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer sizes larger than they now own.

In the opinions of these men the principal disadvantage of a motortruck is "poor roads."

Trucks Efficient Time Savers.

As compared with horses and wagons, the trucks save from one-half to two-thirds of the time required for hauling materials to and from these farms.

These farmers have return loads for their trucks about one-fourth of the time.

A majority of them still use their horses for some road hauling.

On the majority of the farms all the hauling other than road hauling is done with horses and wagons.

About one-fourth of the men do some custom hauling with their trucks. The average amount received per year by those who do such work is $174.

On the average there are about eight weeks during the year when the roads are in such condition on account of mud, snow, etc., that these trucks cannot be used. The roads on which three-fourths of them usually travel are all or part dirt.

About one-fourth of the farmers have changed their markets for at least a part of their produce since purchasing trucks. For those who have changed markets, the average distance to the old market is seven miles, and the average distance to the new market is 20 miles.

Average Life Nearly Seven Years.

The owners estimate that, on the average, their trucks travel 3,820 miles per year and are used on 173 days per year.

The average life of the trucks is between six and one-half and seven years, and in most cases, depreciation is the largest single item of expense in connection with their operation.

Most of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer pneumatic tires, the owners of one-ton trucks are about evenly divided in their preference, and most of the owners of trucks larger than one ton prefer solid tires.

Over two-thirds of the trucks had not been out of commission when needed for a single day during the year covered by the report, and nearly the same proportion of the owners stated that they had not lost any appreciable time on account of motor and tire trouble, breakage, etc., when using their trucks. However, about one truck in thirty had been out of commission ten days or more.

The average cost of operation of the one-half-ton trucks was about 8 cents per mile; of the three-fourths-ton trucks about 13 cents; of the one-ton about 12 cents; of the 1¼ and 1½-ton about 19 cents, and of the two-ton about 20 cents.

The average cost of hauling crops, including the value of the driver's time at 50 cents an hour, was about 50 cents per ton-mile with the one-half-ton trucks, 34 cents with the three-fourths-ton, 26 cents with the one-ton, 24 cents with the 1¼ and 1½-ton, and 18 cents with the two-ton trucks.

Lessen Cost of Farm Help.

About four-fifths of the men state that their trucks decrease their expense for hired help. On the average they estimate that this decrease amounts to $324 per year.

Over half of the 205 truck owners whose farms contain more than 120 crop acres own tractors. The number of work stock kept on the farms where both trucks and tractors are owned is only slightly less than the number kept on farms of corresponding size where only trucks are owned.

TREES TO CUT FOR IMPROVING THE WOODS.

Trees which are well suited for firewood, and the removal of which will be an improvement to the remaining trees in the stand.

Trees which have been overtopped by others and have had their growth stunted.

Diseased trees, or trees seriously injured by insect attacks, or trees extremely liable to such injury; for example, chestnut in the region subject to blight or birch in the gipsy-moth area.

Badly fire-scarred trees.

Trees of the less-valuable species, such as beech, birch, black oak, blackjack oak, or black gum, crowding the more valuable sugar maple, white or short-leaf pines, yellow poplar, or white oak.

Crooked trees and large-crowned, short-boled trees which will not make good lumber and which are crowding or overtopping others.

Slow-growing trees crowding fast-growing species of equal value.

Sound dead trees both standing and down.

DRINKING WATER IN SUMMER

Fountains and Other Watering Devices Should Be Placed in Shady Places in Hot Season.

During hot weather keep drinking fountains and other watering devices for poultry in shady places. Not only does the shade keep the water cooler, but it results in less evaporation. Whether the drinking receptacle is in the shade or not may determine whether the poultry have plenty of water to drink or whether they go thirsty until the attendant notices the lack of water. Successful poultry management depends on many details of which the proper care of drinking water, according to poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture, is one of the most important.

PROVIDE ENGINE WITH LUBRICANT

Liquid in Crank Base Sometimes Thinned Out With Gasoline and Disaster Follows.

MAKE CERTAIN OF RIGHT OIL

Old Material Should Be Drawn Out and New Supply Put in for Every 1,000 Miles of Driving—Keep Close Watch on Gauge.

The wise car owner obeys his instruction book explicitly. He fills the base of his engine with lubricant when oil is necessary, as indicated by the gauge, but the instruction book does not always advise him further regarding the oiling system. At the present high cost of lubricant more instructions are necessary.

You may have liquid in the base of your engine, but is it a lubricant? Many times this liquid is a combination of cylinder oil and gasoline. Its lubricating properties are poor and should the bearings burn out through lack of oil the owner is apt to blame the oil for the trouble. Then he immediately buys oil of another grade, without knowing the real reason for his trouble.

Make Sure of Right Oil.

The best way to make sure of having the right grade of oil is to use religiously the oil recommended by the manufacturers of the particular car you drive. Depending upon the type of engine, crank-case oil should be changed regularly. Old lubricating oil should be drawn out and new oil put in for at least every 1,000 miles of driving. In special cases it is advisable to renew the oil much offener, but this is the usual length of time it may be left in the engine.

If the engine doesn't get a sufficient amount of oil it will run hot. If the driver does not notice that his oil gauge is failing to indicate, it is doubtful that he would know the engine was hot until it stopped and wouldn't run any more. In such a case he would probably find that one or two, perhaps all, of the bearings are burnt out.

Something Wrong.

When the engine is not getting enough oil it is usually because the oil supply has been allowed to run low or there is something wrong with the circulating system—either the pump is not forcing the oil to the bearings properly or the pipes are plugged or the connections are loose or the strainer is obstructed with foreign matter.

Whenever the gauge does not function properly the trouble should be investigated at once. Make sure, first of all, that there is enough oil in the crank case. Then take a careful look at the oil pipe connections to make sure that they are not leaking. If these are tight take out the oil strainer and clean it and if the trouble is still in evidence disconnect all the oil pipes and stick wires through them or blow them out with the tire pump. Finally, a better adjustment of the oil pump may be made to cause it to pump more oil, provided indications prove it to be improperly adjusted.

STEEL TO REMOVE BUSHINGS

Tool Should Be Bent Slightly Near End and Long Enough to Pass Through Knuckle.

A tool for removing steering spindle bushings may be made from a piece of ¾-inch round steel, which should be bent slightly about two inches from the end. The tool will have to be long enough to pass through the steering knuckle and leave an inch or two sticking out, on which to hammer.

REMOVE CARBON WITH COMMON WIRE BRUSH

Ordinary Scraper Is More or Less Unsatisfactory.

Special Device for Purpose Consists of Some Stranded-Wire Cable and Brass Tubing—Illustration Explains Fully.

The ordinary carbon scraper is a more or less unsatisfactory tool, especially where the only access to the piston and cylinders is through the spark-plug hole. A special tool for the purpose consists of some stranded-wire cable and a piece of brass tubing. One end of the tube is bent slightly, as indicated in the sketch, the wire cable is placed through the pipe, and the end frayed or untwisted. The opposite end of the cable is taped and wound with twine to afford a convenient handle.

A Carbon Remover Which Has a Very Direct and Positive Action Is Made From Stranded Steel Cable.

The tool is used as illustrated; gripping the pipe with the left hand, the right hand is used to move the cable back and forth in pump fashion. The projecting prongs scour the piston head and cylinder walls.

After the carbon is pulverized, the motor is run for a few minutes with the spark plug left out, when the suction and compression of the piston blows most of the loose carbon out of the exhaust port and the plug opening. A piece of steel wire cable should be used in making this tool; soft-iron wire is not stiff enough to be effective. —Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Drain your engine oil every 500 to 1,000 miles. It may seem cheaper to use the old oil now that oil is higher in cost, but repairs are more costly than oil.

Covered With Boils

Interesting Case of a Georgia Man, Who Says He Found Relief by Taking Ziron.

BOILS, pimples, sores, and other skin troubles usually denote impure blood. People with red, iron-saturated blood generally have clear, healthy skin, good complexions, rosy cheeks, and feel as well as they look.

If your blood is bad, weak in iron, the experience of this Whitfield County, Georgia, man should interest you. Mr. Frank Armstrong writes from Varnells Station:

"I wish to say that I have taken Ziron Iron Tonic, and never have regretted one cent of the money that I spent for it. Ziron certainly helped me a lot.

"When I began taking Ziron, I was covered with blood boils, and felt so bad and tired all the time. It was all I could do to go. Now I feel good, and am also well of the boils, and Ziron is what did the work."

How about your blood?

Does it lack iron?

If so, take Ziron Iron Tonic. It will put iron into your blood, help tone up your nerves, and help build up your system.

Negro Soldier's Amusing Explanation as to How It Was He Got His Wound.

A medical corps officer chanced upon a negro acquaintance of civil life one day in France.

"How do you like the army, Mose?" he asked.

"'S'all right so far, cap'n," replied the negro, "but Ah don' know how I'm goin' to like it when dem Germans shoots at me."

"Don't worry about that," replied the officer. "All you have to do is zigzag." And he demonstrated.

The next time the two met, the negro was in a hospital.

"What's the matter with you, Mose?" asked the officer.

"I ain't sure, cap'n, but Ah think I must have been ziggin' 'bout de time Ah oughta been zaggin'."—American Legion Weekly.

Problem to Come.

Little Harry, the pride of a Brooklyn household, was one morning engaged in a wriggling and twisting series of maneuvers to get his arms through the sleeve of an undershirt and then get it over his head. After a number of vain attempts he called upon his mother for assistance, remarking:

HAD USE FOR HIS MILLION

Zeb Would at Least Employ It to Good Advantage, as Far as It Would Go.

A party of baymen gathered round the stove in a little oyster shack on the Great South bay started the old, old question of what they would do if they suddenly came into possession of $1,000,000. Some bought great ocean-going yachts; others endowed schools, and one even offered to contribute his to help out the government.

The question finally came round to old Zeb Banks, noted as the ne'er-do-well of the fishing neighborhood.

"And now, Zeb, you've been keeping pretty quiet," one of them said. "Just what'd you do if you had a million dollars?"

"Well, I don't know 'zactly," responded Zeb reflectively as he spat at the stove. "I reckon I'd pay it on my debts, 's far as it went."—Saturday Evening Post.

DR. THACHER'S LIVER AND BLOOD SYRUP

You're as Sick or as Well as Your LIVER

How's your liver? Are you constipated, bilious, grouchy? Have you dizzy spells, dull headaches, bad taste in your mouth, foul breath? If so, you need Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup; which has been knocking out troubles of your sort ever since the good old southern doctor first prescribed it away back in 1852. On sale at your drug store.

You're as Old or as Young as Your BLOOD

If you would stay young in health as you grow older in years, have a care for your blood. Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup puts life into your blood; purifies and enriches it; makes it tone up the whole system. Also keeps your Bowels open and is a tonic and a cleanser combined. Good for the whole family. Sold at your drug store.

Andy Anton, Thompsonville, Ill., wrote Aug. 31, 1918: "I feel that I should send in my testimonial for Dr. Thacher's Liver Medicine, which I have used for twelve years. Before I used it I could not do a whole days work; because I was so weak in my kidneys, but I am now strong and healthy"

J. M. Sexton, Box 147, Ocala, Fla., wrote Jan. 22, 1919: "I used a bottle of your Dr. Thacher's Liver And Blood Syrup in my family with a four-year-old child that had bad kidneys, caused by measles. Found it to do more good than all the medicines that I ever got hold of."

Still Unsubdued.

Marian had formed the bad habit of sucking her thumb. Her parents had given considerable time and energy trying to cure her of this.

The day that a little sister arrived in the home her father said: "Now, Marian, you must never suck your thumb again, as the baby might see you, and do it, too."

Marian coolly replied: "When I want to suck my thumb I'll turn my back on her, and she will never know anything about it."

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

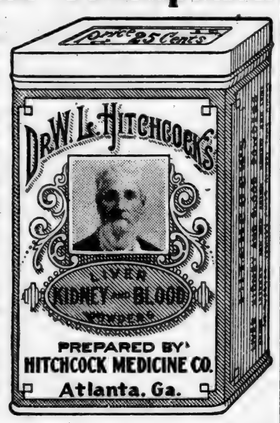
Relief for Torpid Livers and Habitual Constipation



The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25 cents, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. Keep it in the home for ready use whenever any member of the family begins to feel "out of sorts." It will prove a household friend and a valuable remedy.

FOOD VALUE OF CORN SILAGE

Crop Is More Easily Harvested and Put Into Silo Than Rye, Cowpeas or Alfalfa.

Almost any green crop can be made into silage successfully. Much care, however, must be taken to expel the air from such hollow-stemmed plants as the small cereal grains by cutting fine and packing firmly. Other crops, of which legumes are examples, are deficient in the fermentable constituents needed for palatable silage. On the other hand, a few crops, such as the saccharine sorghums, have so much sugar that unless cut at a more mature stage they have a tendency to produce sour silage.

In most parts of the United States more food material can be obtained from an acre of corn as silage than from an acre of any other crop that can be grown. Corn is more easily harvested and put into the silo than crops like rye, clover, cowpeas, or alfalfa, and when cut for silage the maximum quantity of nutrients is preserved. Experiments have shown that corn, when siloed, lost 15.6 per cent of the dry matter, against 23.8 per cent when cut for fodder and cured in the field. Moreover, there is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder, since good silage properly fed is all consumed. When corn is cut for silage the land is cleared and left ready for another crop sooner than when the corn is shocked or is husked from the standing stalk. Corn can be put into the silo at a cost not above that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding.

Farmers' Bulletin 578 on the Making and Feeding of Silage may be had by addressing the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

SCRUB SIRE NOT ECONOMICAL

Common and Inferior Cattle Never Bring As Much Money on Market as Better Grades.

The only reason that the average person can give for using a scrub sire in any line of live stock breeding is that they think they are making money by using a cheap animal. They do not figure into the future and see that it is the offspring of this animal which will either make or lose them money. The corn breeder does not think of selecting the nubbins with which to plant his corn field. Neither can the live stock man afford to select a sire which will not produce a better and more uniform class of stuff. A glance into the live stock market will convince one that the purebred sire with the proper individual merit will be a paying investment. When common and inferior steers are selling for nine cents, a better grade of steers in the same kind of flesh are usually selling for from 10 to 11 cents. In addition to this, the better cattle usually will put on gains more economically.

CHANGE PASTURE FOR SHEEP

For Best Results It Is Imperative That Animals Have Grass Not Too Closely Bitten.

For best results it is imperative that sheep have frequent changes of pasture, that a "fresh bite" be had, that grass may not be too closely bitten, that worms therefore will be less likely to infest them and that they may have a surer supply of mineral matter as well as organic matter in their feed. Lambs especially must have new seeding each spring. On the sheep-tainted and contaminated pastures they infest themselves with worms. On new grass they escape worms and besides that, find such grass more palatable and easily masticated and digested.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

TO MEET THE EMERGENCY

Youngster Had Little Difficulty Making Up His Mind as to What He Would Do.

As the old lady strolled on the cliffs near a seaside town she came across a lad dressed in the well-known scouts' rig.

"What do they teach you in the scouts?" she asked him, with a beaming smile.

"To be manly citizens, and true to king and country," replied the lad promptly.

"And what are you going to be when you grow up, my little man?" went on his self-appointed examiner.

"A soldier, to fight for the king," was the patriotic reply.

"Very brave," applauded the old dame. "Now, suppose you saw the king's coach dashing along, with runaway horses, straight toward the edge of this cliff, what would you do?"

The youngster eyed her in disgust. Evidently she was one of those people who never imagine a boy has any sense. He determined to settle her once and for all, so he replied:

"I'd shut my eyes, and sing, 'God Save the King.'"—London Answers.

Not as She Expected.

A home town society matron of thirty-five underwent an operation this spring. On her recovery she was assured by her friends that the operation had taken ten years away from her looks. Laughingly one day she complained to the doctor: "If three hours on the operating table made me look ten years younger, why didn't you keep me there five hours and make me into a girl again?"

"Five hours there, my dear madam," soberly retorted the surgeon, "would have made you into an angel."—Indianapolis News.

The Financial Coctie.

The unsettlement of foreign exchange has bred a considerable contempt for foreign currency in the minds of certain Americans. The American father of one Yank who had stayed in France to "clean things up" had established a generous line of credit for him. Friend Son began to hit things up rather hard, and in consequence the father received a cablegram reading: "Your son's account already overdrawn 100,000."

To which he cabled back to the bankers:

"If you mean dollars, send him home; if you mean pounds tell him to be careful; if you mean those funny little things let him have all he wants."—American Legion Weekly.

Getting His Bearings.

One day as I was driving along I heard a crack in the vicinity of the rear wheel. Upon investigation I discovered all the bearings gone.

Not being able to continue, I sat down on the running board waiting for help. Before long a seedy-looking man came along in a car making so much noise that he had difficulty in hearing me.

I called out: "Hey, mister, do you know any place near here where I can get some bearings?"

The man looked around quickly, gave me a sly wink and said: "Sure, if you know enough to keep your mouth shut."—Exchange.

Too Early.

Friend wife was coming in on the 4 a. m. train and, of course, my alarm clock failed to register. It was exactly four when I woke up and, dashing out to the garage, started the engine. Still half asleep, I threw the clutch into reverse instead of first speed and whirled through the back door and part of my neighbor's yard, bringing up with a bang almost in the middle of the sleeping tent where my neighbor's family spent their nights. My wife certainly found a warm reception when she reached home. The whole neighborhood was out to welcome her following the riot.—Chicago Tribune.

ALL SET FOR THE RACE

Now that the Republican campaign in Chilton County has been formally launched by the Executive Committee; the candidates having selected their campaign manager and a county campaign committee and a further impetus having been given our cause in the great speaking and rally here last Friday, every Republican in the county should now proclaim himself ready for the fray and be prepared to march forth at any minute to carry out the plans of the campain in electing the Republican ticket all the way from Wiley Littlejohn and Charley Walker up to Harding and Coolidge.

Our campaign manager and his committee are going to have a big job in laying out all the work that is necessary to be done in this campaign. It is going to be no little task if the interests of the Republican party are properly protected and held secure. This is a crucial time in the politics of our county, the like of which none of us have ever seen. The enfranchisement of the women, however rosy it may make the path of politics look for the future, and however much it may purify the ballot box, certainly has placed a burden upon our shoulders for the present. The women must be educated in the ways of politics. It will take smooth persuasion to get many of them to assume their new privileges and obligations. Those of the women who are willing to take up the work must be enlisted so their help may be employed in enlisting the others.

The whole situation taken together is big enough to give us everyone employment from now till the November election. There is no time for side issues. The main job must be done and finished without a single leak if we are to be as secure in the future as we have been in the past.

The New York Times asserts that "there are few real differences between Republicans and Democrats relative to the league of nations." True, but these differences are not only real but vitally important. The Democrats insist upon "the" leage of nations—the Wilson league, without any effective reservations. The Democrats want no peace treaty unless it contains the league covenant. The Democrats want no international tribunal except that provided for in the Wilson league scheme. The Democrats want the United States to be bound to go to war when and where a league council may direct, and for any cause that the league council may deem sufficient. The Democrats want the United States to make the "supreme sacrifice." These are only a few items, it is true. But concerning these demands of the Democrats the Republicans reply that they desire to declare peace now, that they desire then to take up the perfection of international agrements for the preservation of peace and for disarmament, but without sacrificing the right of America to go to war or not as she may see fit from time to time as causes may justify. These are only a few differences, it is true, but they are real, as the Times admits.

Mr. Cox seems to have fairly won the distinction of being the supreme denouncer of the United States. He denounces the Senate for insisting upon the preservation of American independence. He denounces the Republican congress for not reducing taxes when his party's administration was trying to get larger appropriations than congress would grant. He denounced imaginary Republican campaign contributions although his own party, in control of the executive departments, has sent campaign publicity matter under penalty envelope free of postage at government expense and in violation of law. He denounces the Republican proposal to return to peace as quickly as a declaration of peace can be adopted and signed. He denounces child labor although states ruled by his own party have been slowest in the enactment of legislation for the promotion of child welfare. He denounces the high cost of living which his party failed to reduce in accordance with its pledges. He denounces the profiteers whose profits were enhanced by the methods adopted by an administration which his party controlled. He denounces Republican senators whose popular endorsements at the polls surpass his own fondest hopes. As an all-round denouncer Mr. Cox is in a class by himself, but he will find that the country is looking for something besides a denouncer as occupant of the white house.

Emmett C. Powell, who is now on the force of the Tuscaloosa News, was in Clanton Sunday and Monday visiting relatives and friends. Powell is one of the best printers ever graduated from the craft in the Clanton shops and he has a good position on The News as linotype operator. His wife and two boys accompanied him on his brief visit to home folks.

YES SIR, FRITZ IS A DANDY

Solicitor J. F. Thompson made a political speech in Columbiana, Shelby County, last week where he met Judge L. H. Reynolds of Chilton and Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby, both prominent republicans, where they discussed the political issues that now confront the people of the country and which will be decided at the polls in November. From what we can learn, the interest of the Democrats was well handled. Mr. Thompson is an able and convincing speaker and will probably be drafted by the national committee for speeches in other states.—Centerville Press.

If Fritz said anything about the issues that now confront the people, we failed to hear it; and we sifted every word he uttered. All we got from his "well handled interest of the Democrats" was a mess of old rot about nigger and Civil War Reconstruction, which we figger don't concern the people of the country very much now. If he is drafted to make speeches for the Democrats in other states, he will make a fine showing if he "hits and runs" like he did over in Shelby last Saturday. If he is going to other states to speak for the Democrats, why don't he come to Chilton County and speak against Judge Reynolds; or why don't he accept the challenge that has been extended him to speak against Reynolds in his own county, Bibb?

WOMEN WILL VOTE

All the argument in regard to woman suffrage has been concluded. The National Constitutional Amendment granting women the ballot has been ratified by the required number of states, Tennessee last week being the thirty-sixth state to give the proposition its legal endorsement. It now remains but to work out the details of their qualification and registration, and the women of the county will be on a par with the men in going to the ballot box and expressing their opinions about political matters.

The Governor of Alabama has called an extra session of the Legislature to convene on September 14th, for the purpose of setting out the details of how women shall be qualified in Alabama, and making our suffrage laws to conform to the National Constitutional Amendment. Already women are registering over the state. There have been quite a number to register in Chilton County.

Yea, verily, the long-talked of thing called women suffrage is now upon us, and the politicians are wondering what difference it is going to make. We will see by and by.

As for us we are willing to see the women take a hand in the afairs of government in our country. If they can improve upon what the men have done, we shall be glad. We feel confident they will not make matters any worse.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Services will be held next Sunday as usual—morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:45 p.m. The morning subject will be "The Making of a Home" and at night an illustrated sermon with the stereopticon on "The Meanest Man in Town." Please come on time to get a seat. A very nice congregation was present at the service last Sunday night. Sunday School is held at 10 a.m., The Sunbeam Band at 2:30 p.m., the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. All these services are open to the public and everybody is cordially invited, if you are a baptist living in the church and participate in the full fellowship of the church.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

LIBERTY HILL SINGING

The Liberty Hill Singing Society met Sunday afternoon, Sept. 5th, with a large crowd. The chairman being absent, Prof. C. C. Parrish was appointed chairman for the afternoon. Directors for the afternoon were Profs. Blanco Durbin, Glover Smith, Calvin Parrish. Organists were Miss Zelma Lowery and C. C. Parrish. We had several visitors with us whom we were glad to see. We invite them to come again.

THE BAPTIST STATE PAPER

During the month of September an intensive campaign for renewals and new subscribers to the Alabama Baptist will be put on in this county. The Rev. P. G. Carter of Clanton is the organizer for Chilton County and the Unity Association. A few four minute speakers have ben appointed to cooperate with the local churches and meet with them on their regular meeting days to lay this very important matter before them. In the event that one of the speakers is not able to reach the church on that day the pastor is requested to lay the matter before his congregation and take subscribtions and renewals at that meeting. The regular subscription price is $2.00 per year but during the campaign renewals and subscriptions will be received at the club rate of $1.50.

Last fall when the simultaneous campaign was put on all over the South the Alabama Baptist added more new subscribers than any paper. If you are not reached in any other way send your name and subscription to Rev. P. G. Carter, Clanton, Ala., who will see that you are credited at the regular club rate, and receive the paper in due course.

Omar Reynolds left Monday for University of Alabama, where he will resume his studies for the coming session.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
Governor.

Ride Farther on Goodyear Tires in Your Small Car

It is tire performance, not price, that decides what you really pay; hence, do not experiment with tires made to sell at sensationally low prices.

You can secure in Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, a high relative value not exceeded even in the famous Goodyear Cord Tires on the world's finest automobiles.

Goodyear experience and care are applied to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; take advantage of the opportunity to get true Goodyear mileage and economy.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. "The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is

Thedford's

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

SEARCH OUT THE GERMS OF RHEUMATISM

Find Out What Causes Your Suffering and Go After It.

Some forms of this disease have been found to come from tiny germs in the blood, which set up their colony in the muscles, or joints and begin to multiply by the million. You can easily understand, therefore, that the only intelligent method of treating such cases is through the blood.

S. S. S. is such a thorough blood purifier and cleanser that it can be relied upon to search out all disease germs and impurities and eliminate them from the system, and this is why it is such an excellent remedy for Rheumatism.

Go to your drug store and get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and if your case needs special attention, you can obtain medical advice free by writing fully to Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Georgia.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Pollyanna Club Organized.

One of the most delightful social affairs of the week was given on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mallie White. About twenty of the young matrons and young ladies of Clanton organized themselves into a glad club—Pollyanna—with Mrs. J. C. Jones as President.

In the spacious living room where the guests were received, tall vases of roses lent their color and fragrance to the decorations for the afternoon; also ferns were placed advantageously here and there. Late in the afternoon the guests were invited into the dining room where a tempting plate lunch was served to Mesdames Page, Barney Roberts, John Armstrong, P. T. Hinkle, Marion Gore, J. C. Jones, E. E. Upchurch, J. P. Hayes, V. J. Elmore, McDavid, Bamma Cox, Alvessor, White; Misses Mabel and Bessie Thomas and Louise Orr.

Mrs Bridges Entertains for Visitor.

On last Saturday evening at the home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Mrs. John M. Bridges delightfully entertained when Mrs. Peebles Morrow was the inspiration at an informal bridge party.

In the library and parlor the color scheme was most beautifully carried out with golden glow and goldenrod, while exquisite red roses in tall cut glass vases adorned the hall.

After two hours of playing the guests were served a lovely salad plate with iced tea by the hostess, assisted by her mother.

The score prize was a deck of cards which fell to Mrs. Luckie. The guest prize was a pretty box of powder.

Little Folks Party Enjoyed.

Little James Robinson entertained at a pretty birthday party Thursday at the home of his parents. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. After playing several games the little folks were served ice cream and cake by Sarah Luckie, Margaret Robinson and Mary Marlow.

James Wade Celebrates Birthday.

On last Thursday evening James Wade celebrated his tenth birthday on the lawn of his parents home. A number of games and contests were enjoyed, such as a three-legged foot race. Mattie Mae Fiquette won the girls prize a box of stationery, and Archie Harris won a top.

Mrs. Collier served the merry crowd ice cream and cake late in the afternoon.

Master Joe VanDerveer Enjoys a Birthday Party.

Master Joe VanDerveer was host to a number of his young friends on Thursday evening, entertaining at his sixth birthday. Punch was served throughout the evening by Mrs. Van Derveer from a prettily decorated table in the living room. The house was attractively decorated for the occasion in pink and white. The birthday cake made a beautiful decoration for the center of the table. Master VanDerveer included about twenty guests on this occasion. A very interesting feature of the afternoon's pleasure was a fish pond, while pretty favors were given to the little folks. Ice cream and cake was served late in the evening.

Dr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson Celebrate Their Crystal Wedding.

Of the many enjoyable events of the summer, none has been more pleasant than the brilliant reception given Monday night when Dr. and Mrs. Napoleon Johnson celebrated their crystal wedding. The beauty of the decorations made an ideal setting for the evening pleasure.

The guests were received by Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Mrs. McSwain and Miss Mary Sue Mullins, and presented to the receiving line composed of Dr. and Mrs. Johnson and five handsome young daughters. After congratulations the guests registered in the bride's book presided over by Mrs. Earle Gowan, then conducted to the punch table where a most refreshing beverage was served by Misses Kathleen Mullins and Leona Pipes. The living room where the receiving line stood was attractive with quantities of golden rod and stately palms. In the dining room where also the color scheme was pronounced, the many beautiful and useful gifts were on display.

A very enjoyable feature of the eveing pleasure was the contest, "What's in a Name," and after a close cut Mrs. R. E. Luckie was presented a pretty piece of cut glass.

Mrs. Johnson never looked lovelier than on this occasion wearing a handsome costume of white crepedechine. Music for the evening was rendered on the Edison by Mrs. Macey Jones and Mrs. Frank Browder. The color scheme was further carried out in the ices and cake which was served to about 150 guests.

Mrs. Em Peebles Morrow was the weekend guest of Mrs. John M. Bridges in Clanton.

—11—

"I guess so," said Wick. "That's where his room is. He's only been here in the Granddeck a few days. I don't know much about him."

"And that's all you know about it?" said the detective, turning to me again.

I hesitated. Should I or should I not tell them of the wall safe that I had seen Mr. Wick closing? There was no way I could prove it. Undoubtedly Wick would deny having done so. It would be his word against mine. As superintendent his word would undoubtedly carry. I decided it would be best to withhold my information to a more propitious time.

"That's all I know, except what Mr. Wick has told you," I said.

"Very well," said the detective in charge. "You can go now, and you, too, Doctor."

Mr. Wick was escorting the doctor to the door. The detectives had withdrawn to the room where the body lay and were holding a whispered conference. I stepped quickly to the wall safe, and making sure that I was unobserved, tested the knob. It was securely fastened. I congratulated myself on having said nothing about it. Wick, I felt certain, would deny having shut it, and there was no proof that it had been opened when we had entered.

As I returned to my own apartment upstairs, nearing the top of the short flight of steps between the floors I was astounded to see a female figure flitting across the hall and entering the Bradford apartment. Though I had opportunity for only a brief glimpse, I recognized her at once. It was Claire Bradford.

The door of my apartment was standing wide open. I remembered that as I had run downstairs a few moments ago, I had neglected to close it after me. From the direction in which she had come, it was plain that Claire Bradford had been paying another surreptitious visit to my quarters. What could have been her purpose? There must have been some strong impelling motive to make her dare the perilous journey along the window ledge, and now, at the imminent risk of discovery, to pay me a second visit. I began seriously to doubt whether the explanation she had offered me was the true one. I was beginning to feel that there was more than a possibility that she was again in the clutches of the unscrupulous rascal who had once been her husband.

Greatly puzzled, I made a hasty survey of the apartment, but could find nothing that appeared to have been disturbed. Going back to my own room I hastened to place a handkerchief out of my window as a signal to Barbara, for I knew she would be anxious to know the meaning of the sounds we had heard below. In a very few moments I heard the tap of her riding-crop on my sill and hurried to answer.

"What was it?" she asked in an excited whisper.

"Daisy Lutan, an actress, who lived on the floor below, has been murdered—shot."

"Who did it?"

"I don't know. Mr. Wick and I went into the apartment together. There was no one there."

"How terrible!" she exclaimed.

"It is, indeed," I answered, "but it may help us."

"What do you mean?"

"With the police in the house making investigations, there'll be no more threats from the blackmailers for a while. They won't dare bother you for the present."

"Do you really think so?" she questioned with a little sigh of relief.

"I'm sure of it."

"Have the police been called in?"

"Yes; two detectives are downstairs now."

"I'm glad," she said. "With the detectives here, they won't dare molest us, will they?"

"Of course not," I answered. "Is your sister at home?"

"Yes," she answered. "Our guests have just gone. Mother has retired, and Claire is in the living room writing a note. They heard nothing, so I did not tell them anything about it."

"That was wise. They'll hear it soon enough. Has your sister been in the apartment all evening?"

"She hasn't been out all day unless she went out just to drop the letter she was writing down the mail chute in the hall. Why do you ask?"

"I was merely wondering if there was any way she could learn of the murder."

"How could she? Isn't that too terrible about Miss Lutan? But I mustn't talk any longer. Good night."

"Wait a moment," I cried. "There are some things I must discuss with you before I meet Gorman. How about meeting me at the Astor at eleven?"

"I can't promise, but I'll try. Good night!"

There was nothing further that I could do, and I felt sadly in need of rest. Throwing off my coat and waistcoat I began making preparations for bed. The notion took me to once more investigate the secret passageway. I pushed sharply on the panel as I had done before, but this time I could not budge it. I tugged and worked and pounded, but it stuck fast in spite of all my efforts. As I was struggling to force it open, there came a sharp ring at the bell of the apartment. As I was, in my shirt sleeves, I answered it. The two detectives I had seen downstairs stood there.

"What is it?" I asked.

"I arrest you for the murder of Daisy Lutan," said one of them, and with that they sprang forward and pinioned my arms.

"Why, this is absurd," I laughed in their faces, conscious of my utter innocence of the crime. "I had nothing to do with it."

"That remains to be seen. Put on your coat and come along."

Still holding me fast, they went back with me to my bedroom. Clutching me tight they made me put on my coat, and no sooner had I done so than one of them snapped handcuffs on me.

"Look at this, Jim," said one of them, pointing to a spot on the front of my coat.

"That's blood all right," said the other, after inspecting it.

"I got that when I was helping Mr. Wick lift the body to the couch," I protested.

"Tell that to the judge," the detective called Jim scoffed. "Better look around for the gun, Cullen."

"You'll find no gun here," I cried. "I never owned one."

Nevertheless Cullen began rummaging through the drawers of my dresser. Suddenly he gave a triumphant exclamation and drew something from beneath a pile of shirts in the second drawer.

"Here it is," he announced, holding up before my astonished eyes an automatic revolver.

"Here It Is," He Announced, Holding Up Before My Astonished Eyes an Automatic Revolver.

"I never saw it before," I gasped.

The detective merely laughed.

"There's one bullet gone," said the man who was examining it.

"Come along, young fellow," said the other detective gruffly. "The bullet settles it. We've got the right party."

CHAPTER IX.

A prisoner in a police station cell, I passed a sleepless night. Conscious as I was of my utter innocence and confident of my speedy release, nevertheless I had to admit that the detectives from their point of view were perfectly justified in placing me under arrest.

For a burglar to have gained access to the apartments without the connivance of the employees seemed almost an impossibility. For him to have escaped from the building after having murdered Miss Lutan without being detected seemed also highly improbable. Then, too, there was the damning evidence of the blood on my coat and the fact that I had been found at the door of the apartment. I had not observed the stain on my clothing until the detectives discovered it. My explanation of how it had gotten there was the true one, yet I could readily realize that it might sound fishy to others.

On the face of it the tragedy in the Granddeck looked like an inside job. The revolver, with one bullet missing, was the strongest sort of evidence that I was the murderer. Yet I never had seen the weapon before and could not imagine who could have placed it there. There was only one explanation possible. It had been purposely planted there with the definite object of throwing suspicion on me.

The one person—the only person—whom I knew to have been in my rooms after the murder was committed was Claire Bradford. Could she have done it? I remembered that Barbara had showed me a revolver in her possession. I wondered if this could be the same weapon. I did not think it possible that Claire herself could have used it. I could imagine no motive why Claire Bradford would want to kill Miss Lutan, yet it must have been she who had hidden the revolver in my dresser. What had been her motive? How had she got possession of the revolver after the murder?

Come what may, I had no intention of telling any one—not even Gorman—of Claire's second visit to my apartment. For Barbara's sake I made up my mind I would keep my lips closed about that incident, even if I had to stay in prison indefinitely. At the police station when the detectives had brought me in, I had quietly but firmly refused to answer any questions, although they had badgered me for nearly two hours before they let me alone.

"Where did you live before you came to the Granddeck?"

"Where did you work?"

"Where is Rufus Gaston?"

"Where do your people live?"

"Why did you kill Daisy Lutan?"

"Where did you get the money you have?"

"We've got the goods on you. Why don't you confess?"

These were the sort of questions that were flung at me, first by one and then the other. Evidently at first they had had hopes of breaking me down.

"I have nothing to say," had been my unvarying answer to all their questions.

Finally they gave it up and locked me in a cell for the night, leaving me thankful that the honor of being a suspected murderer relieved me from sharing a cell with some of the frowsy prisoners I saw brought past my barred door.

"Haven't you any friends you would like to have notified?" was the last question they asked as they left me.

"I have nothing to say," I repeated once more.

Nor was this answer this time mere stubbornness. Who was there that I could notify of my plight? Birge and Roller, my two intimates, were somewhere on the high seas. The men whom I had known in the office where I had worked, for obvious reasons, were not to be called on. I had no idea of the whereabouts of my aged relatives beyond the fact that they were somewhere in Maine.

I had no intention whatever of communicating the fact of my arrest to my mother. Indeed, I was hoping that she would not hear of it until after my innocence was established.

I thought of Gorman. I would have been glad of his counsel, but I remembered that I did not know where he lived. He had told me he was giving up his position at the hotel. It would be useless to try to find him until morning.

Yet in spite of my apparent friendlessness, although to all appearances there was no one in New York to whom I could turn in this time of trouble, it was a wonderful comfort to feel that I was sure of one stanch friend—Barbara Bradford.

Although we had been acquainted but a few days, and although hardly a word of love had passed between us, I knew that her feeling for me already was something greater than friendship. I knew that she trusted me and that she would remain faithful in her affection for me, no matter what accusations were brought against me. I had been madly in love with her from almost the first time I saw her. Whatever happened, I must keep her out of it. I must find some means of warning her to say nothing to any one. I knew that her first impulse as soon as she heard of my arrest would be to come to my rescue, regardless of the fact that in establishing an alibi for me she would be blasting her own reputation. Under no circumstances, even if I was convicted, must she be permitted to speak. No explanation can account for the presence of a young girl alone in a man's rooms at eleven o'clock at night, even though she and I both knew how utterly undeserving of censure her presence there was and how important had been her motive in coming there.

Mention of Barbara's name in any way in connection with a murder case would be certain to wreck her sister's matrimonial plans. It would mean the ruin of her mother's ambitions and the unmasking of the parlous condition of their finances. It would mean that the reproaches of her mother and sister would be heaped on my Barbara's poor head.

I was still unsatisfied in my own mind as to just what part Claire Bradford was playing in the web of mystery about us. She was emotional and flighty, given to doing rash things. I felt that there was a strong possibility that relations with her ex-husband had been in some way re-established. I felt at times that she was being used as a tool by the conspirators in the Granddeck mysteries. If Claire was involved in any way, it behooved me to move carefully lest she should be betrayed in my efforts to clear myself.

There was nothing for me to do but to sit tight and take my plight as philosophically as I could until I could get in touch with Gorman. As soon as it was morning, I bribed a jail attendant to bring me a morning newspaper. On the first page I found an account of the murder under glaring headlines and read it with intense interest, my conviction growing with each line that I read that the police case against me was far better backed up than I ever imagined it could be.

Then and there I made up my mind never again to believe anything on purely circumstantial evidence. No one knew better than I how utterly innocent I was of that crime, how upright my conduct in New York had been, and how honest my motives for all my recent actions had been, yet this is what I read in the newspaper:

BURGLAR MURDERS WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS

Miss Daisy Lutan Found Mysteriously Shot in her Luxurious Apartment in the Granddeck.

Marks on Throat Where Murderer Had Choked Her

Police Arrest John S. Nelson, a Clerk, Out of Work, in Whose Rooms They Found a Revolver.

Daisy Lutan, an actress, whose matrimonial affairs recently brought her much notoriety, was found last night murdered in her apartment in the Granddeck. She had been instantly killed by a bullet wound through the heart, and there were marks on her throat where her assailant had tried to choke her. John S. Nelson, a clerk out of work, who had been acting as caretaker for one of the tenants in the building, was arrested.

There was blood on his coat when Detectives Cullen and Edwards took him prisoner, and they found in his room a revolver with one chamber empty hidden under a pile of shirts in the dresser.

The apartment Nelson is occupying is directly above that of Miss Lutan. The police theory is that Nelson let himself into the apartment by swinging down from his window, and that Miss Lutan, returning unexpectedly, found him ransacking her rooms.

The crime was discovered by James Wick, superintendent of the apartment house, who was in the elevator when he heard screams followed by a shot. Getting out of the elevator to investigate he found Nelson at the door of the Lutan apartment.

Nelson glibly explained that he had heard a shot and was trying to see where it had come from. Mr. Wick's suspicions were aroused by his manner, and he made Nelson come with him into the apartment and kept him there until the arrival of the police.

Little is known at the Granddeck about young Nelson, and he stubbornly refuses to make any statement about himself. He was employed only a few days ago by Rufus Gaston as caretaker for his apartment. As Mr. Gaston is absent from the city it cannot be learned how he happened to give Nelson employment. The police believe he may have obtained the position through false references in order to gain an opportunity to loot the apartments in the building.

Superintendent Wick had ascertained that Nelson was once employed by a shipping firm in the Wall street district but had been discreditably discharged. His former employer confirmed this, but would say nothing about Nelson beyond stating that he had been discharged for cause.

Although Nelson was not over well supplied with money he had been seen recently ordering elaborate meals in some of the most expensive restaurants. Miss Nellie Kelly, the telephone girl at the Granddeck, reported that only the night before Nelson had taken her to dinner, ordering champagne and hiring taxicabs, and had tried to pump her about the tenants in the building.

The one fact that stuck out in the whole article that seemed of vast importance to me was the fact that Wick had informed the police that I had been discreditably discharged from my last place of employment. How did he know that? Certainly I had not told him. I had told no one of the occurrence except Barbara Bradford, and I was sure she had not revealed it to anyone.

It was indubitable proof to me that Wick, or someone with whom he was conniving, had been having me shadowed. Even my great-uncle Rufus did not know where my place of employment was. Evidently the plot to discredit me had begun the day I arrived at the Granddeck. I had been discharged on account of some mysterious note my employer had received. I began now to believe that Wick must have had me followed to my place of business and to have sent that note for the express purpose of bringing about my discharge. But why? That was the puzzle.

"Old Style" Time Still in Use.

It is not only in eastern Europe, under the influences of the Greek church, that the unreformed calendar may be found still in use. Even in England, where Christmas has been kept on December 25 for many generations, the government does not pay the Christmas dividends on the national debt till Twelfth day, and the midsummer dividends are paid not on June 24, but on July 5.

795,000 BALES STATE FORECAST

CONDITION OF COTTON CROP IS PLACED AT 58 PER CENT ON AUGUST 25.

DAIRY COURSE FOR AUBURN

State Association Agrees To Finance New Department For $10,000.

Alabama's Cotton Prospect.

Montgomery. — Alabama's cotton production this season is estimated at 795,000 bales, according to F. W. Gist, statistician for the federal and state departments of agriculture. This estimate, which is based on the condition reported as of Aug. 25, is 15,000 bales in excess of the forecast made on the same date a year ago. Provision is made in this estimate for a normal abandonment of 1 per cent. The acreage this year is said to be about 1 per cent less than in 1919. On Aug. 25 the condition of the crop was placed at 58 per cent, which forecasts an acre yield of 133 pounds this season. Too much rain and the inroads being made upon the crop by the weevil constitute the burden of the Alabama farmer's complaint, regarding the cotton crop this year, Mr. Gist says. Weevils are now reported to be active in every county in Alabama, he says, also that in most of the area of longest infestation the pest is attacking young bolls as well as the squares and blooms.

Planning Dairy Course.

Selma.—Auburn will have the dairy course that has been agitated recently by those interested in the institute and this special department, it is announced. The dairy course will be established at Auburn and the Alabama Dairy Association has pledged the amount necessary to finance the department which is $10,000. The course will be open this Fall. The money will be loaned by the Alabama Dairy Association to promote this new industrial department of the Polytechnic Institute and those interested in the placing of this important feature of the school will raise the money to repay the loan.

To Build Big Power Plant.

Dothan.—It has just developed since the dispute arose between the City of Dothan and the Georgia-Alabama Power Company that the city some time ago bought a hydro-electrical power site on the Chattahoochee River, and an engineer has been engaged to make a thorough survey of the property, with the view of developing it and bringing the current to Dothan. Whatever the outcome of the controversy between the city and the Georgia-Alabama Power Company is, it is the intention of the city to develop this property, as the $30,000 it is paying for current will take care of the interest on the investment.

Extensions Made At Auburn.

Auburn.—Announcement is made of improvements in the department of architecture at the A. P. I., by which during the coming session it will be enabled to render a much greater service through a more attractive course than heretofore. Prof Frederick A. Biggen, head of this department, states that the expansion consists not only of more commodious quarters but also the selection of an assistant professor of architecture, Prof. Harrington Barlow, who will have especial charge of the instruction in architectural design, and at the same time have supervision of the extensive repairs and alterations now going on in the college buildings.

Prohibition Fight Is Promise.

Mobile.—A bill to permit the sale in Alabama of Bevo and other kinds of soft drinks now prohibited, will be introduced at the special session of the legislature called for Sept. 14. Prohibitionists will fight the bill to the last ditch. The framers of the bill claim the state will be enriched hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. It is claimed that the "wets" want something "with a kick" and that there is danger of the "kick" being a real one. Any liquid that resembles beer is not permitted to be sold in Alabama under existing laws.

Oil Indications In Morgan.

Decatur.—Drilling for oil in Morgan county apparently hinges on the decision of several farmers on the question of blocking leases. F. N. Berry, of Texas, said to represent a syndicate, conferred with representative business men at the courthouse and told them there is every indication of oil in Morgan County. Under the general lease terms, owners of the property are given a royalty of one-eighth of all oil produced.

Voters To Decide On Law Revision.

Montgomery.—Scores of letters and telegrams commending him for including in his call for an extra session of the legislature, a provision for the submission of a constitutional convention, have been received by Gov. Kilby, since the issuance of the official proclamation. Although the date for the holding of a constitutional convention is a matter to be fixed by the legislature, it is not believed the convention, if held, will take place any time in the near future.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

WHAT HAS OCCURRED DURING WEEK THROUGHOUT COUNTRY AND ABROAD

EVENTS OF IMPORTANCE

Gathered From All Parts Of The Globe And Told In Short Paragraphs

Foreign—

Eleven men dead is the toll of the fighting in Belfast August 29. In addition to the six men killed during the height of the battle, five of the wounded died. About forty persons were wounded and some of them will undoubtedly die.

When the rioting in Belfast, Ireland, was at its worst August 29th, women could be seen clad in their night attire, rushing from their homes, attempting to lead their families from the danger zone. Some of them were wounded by stray shots.

The condition of Terence MacSwinney, lord mayor of Cork, Ireland, who is in Brixton jail on a hunger strike, is officially stated to be unchanged. He made this statement: "I am convinced I will not be released; it will be better for my country if I am not."

John Parmentier, administrator of the French ministry of finance, who is in New York city negotiating with United States bankers for payment of the French loan of $250,000 from the United States, has arranged for a loan of one hundred and fifty million dollars with American banks, Paris newspapers report.

No woman will be permitted to enter church unless dressed "in Christian modesty, says a notice circulated in the diocese of Gaudix, Spain, by authority of the bishop. Any woman who displays herself chest or legs conspicuously wil be bared from holy communion and absolution.

Louis Bleriot, the first French aviaotr to cross the English channel, has been ordered by the French courts to pay immediately five million francs into the French treasury. The fine is imposed for profiteering and many other cases will be handed similarly, and some may receive jail sentences.

The Island of Malta, where St. Paul labored for some months, suffered an earthquake shock of considerable force recently. The population was thrown into a panic and property was considerably damaged.

Pope Benedict has been snapped by the movies, to the consternation and amazement of his dignified cardinalate. The United States Knights of Columbus paid him a visit and took movie men along, and prevailed upon the pope to pose for them. The pope was in high spirits and said "Let the Americans have what they want." Visitors said they would have taken what they wanted anyhow.

A Mexican treasury statement says Mexico will export this year more petroleum than all other countries combined, estimated at one hundred and forty million barrels.

The Polish peace delegates while on their way to Minsk to confer with the representatives of Soviet Russia were picturesquely received after crossing the Russian lines. The Poles were escorted along the highway in Soviet automobiles of United States mawe, contianing fantastically garbed guards.

A wireless message from Minsk says that members of the Polish peace delegation and those who accompanied it to the conference with the Soviet emissaries are becoming ill because of the unsanitary conditions under which they are compelled to exist.

French farmers are becoming sleight o' hand artists, mint masters at Paris believe. Every day 335,000 nickels are minted and vanish in thin air. As soon as a Frenchman lays his hand on metal money it is out of circulation for good.

The situation in Korea is become more serious. The conditions are reported to have been aggravated by organization of the activities of the Korean nationalists, especialy in Manchuria.

The delegation of American congressmen touring the Far East were met and entertained by a Japanese delegation in Korea.

Washington—

Attention of the department of justice, it is learned at Washington, has been informally called to threats of Irish women sympathizers to inspire strikes in this country to prevent the movement of British goods. Leaders of the owmen declare they had caused the strike of longshoremen, who had refused to handle British shipping at New York and they have planned, they say, to organize a complete boycott against British goods as a protest against the imprisonment of Lord Mayor McSwinney of Cork, who is dying on a hnuger strike.

A battalion of United States infantry numbering between four hundred and five hundred, under command of Colonel Burkhardt, have arrived at Williamson, W. Va., from Camp Sherman, Ohio. A detachment of soldiers will be stationed at each mine in the strike zone from Kermit east to Delormea, a distance of fifty miles, it is announced.

Cost of producing refined sugar doubled between 1914 and 1919, the United States tariff commission reports. The labor cost amounted to .97¢ per pound.

On September 1 the railroads of the country began operating on their own resources after having cost the government approximately one hundred million dollars monthly for the six months in which their earnings were guaranteed by the transportation act. The carriers will be allowed further aid only through loans from the re-

Combined federal and state expenditures for road building have reached a total of two hundred and fifty million dollars during the current fiscal year, says the chief of the bureau of public roads.

General accord with the views of the United States as to Russia has now been expressed by all of the allied powers except two—Great Britain and Japan. A formal preliminary statement of Italy's concurrence, transmitted through the counsellor of the Italian embassy, has been received, while similar assurances have reached the state department from Poland.

Plans of 142 railroads to spend approximately one billion dollars on improvements and betterments have been disclosed in a report submitted to the interstate commerce commission by the bureau of railway economics.

Candy has not taken the place of alcohol for men who formerly indulged in beverages now under the prohibition ban, according to the secretary of the National Confectioners' association. He places candy fifth in the list.

Governor Roberts of Tennessee certified by registered mail to Secretary of State Colby Tennessee's ratification of the woman suffrage amendment ater receiving from Attorney General Frank M. Thompson an opinion that a writ of certiorari and supersedeas issued by Chief Justice D. L. Lansden of the state supreme court in effect set aside an order temporarily restraining the governor from taking such action. This announcement fell like a bombshell on the ears of the anti-suffragists.

Domestic—

John Leary, president of the Master Horse Shoers' association, at New Orleans, announces that within two years all of the blacksmiths who shoe horses wil be dead and the trade lost, since all men now engaged in that trade are over forty years of age and there are no apprentices.

Capt. J. C. D. Porter and D. A. Newman, both of Oakand, were killed when the new United States destroyer Kennedy backed out of its moorings at San Francisco. The launch was destroyed. The two men who were on the launch were kiled by the destroyer's propeller.

News of the lynching of two negroes, Blutcher Higgins and Dan Calicutt, near Corinth, Miss., because of their alleged attack upon James Whitehourst, guard at a chain gang, has been received at Jackson, Miss. A mob of 1,700 masked men forced the keeper of the Alocrn county jail to turn over keys, took the negroes out from their cells and to a pace two miles from Corinth and hanged them to a telephone pole.

Gov. John J. Cornwel of West Virginia announces that he has requested the commander of the central department, U. S. A., to send a detachment of troops into Mingo county, W. Va., to take charge of the strike situation there.

With practically al of their technical secrets destroyed before they came into the hands of the United States navy, the three German destroyers, which were assigned as units of America's war prize, have arrived at the Norfolk, Va., navy yard.

Without contest by Alfred G. Rupp, New York broker, Lottie Pickford Rupp, movie star, a sister of Mary Pickford, was granted a divorce at Los Angeles, Cal., on charges of desertion and non-support. Proceedings were brief. Both Miss Pickford and her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, testified in the case, which was called at Los Anegles.

Special telegrams from Carlisle, Ky., say damage to Louisville estimated at more than one hundred thousand dollars was caused there by a cloudburst which inundated the valley in which the town lies.

The lumber producers lack cars to ship lumber to the car builders so the car builders cannot make cars to ship the lumber in. As a result building costs are mounting higher. This is not because production is slowing down, but because enough freight cars cannot be secured.

The Harriman interests, recent purchasers of big steamship enterprises throughout the world, have bought from H. F. Kerr and A. L. Clegg a large part of their investments in the Kerr Navigation company for five million dollars, and soon will acquire additional amounts of stock in the corporation, it is announced in New York.

The seven members of the executive board of the Denver (Colo.) Tramway Union must serve out their 90-day jail sentence, the state supreme court declining the application for a stay of execution.

Herbert Medlock, a Macon, Ga., man who was accidentaly shot at a road house near Savannah, Ga., by Mrs. W. D. Durden, and whose condition has been precarious, wil not die, physicians state. The bullet went through his brain, and his condition is amazing even to the doctors.

William E. Kettles, who, as a boy telegrapher, received the message at Washington announcing the fall of Richmond on the morning of April 3, 1865, died at his home in the Charleston district of Boston. He was 73 years of age.

CALOMEL HORROR TOLD BY DODSON

You Don't Need to Sicken, Gripe or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel hendachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.—Adv.

The Latest Style.

"William Dean Howells," said an editor, "often joked about the latest styles.

"'The minister made a witty reference to the latest style in his sermon, didn't he?' Mr. Howells said on Sunday morning to a young lady of New York.

"'Why, didn't you notice?' said Mr. Howells. 'He chose his text from Revelations.'"

"STRANGE HOW WOMEN SUFFER"

Says Tennessee Lady, and Will Just Go Suffering, She Says, When Cardui Is Right at Hand.

Caryville, Tenn.—Hoping her experience may benefit others who suffer from disorders common among women, Mrs. Charles Rains, of this (Campbell) county, says: "I had womanly troubles till I couldn't rest, couldn't sleep, and was nervous and suffered a great deal of pain in my head, limbs and back. I would get to the place where I couldn't move without a great effort.

"For years I had known of Cardui, and it is strange how a woman will just go on suffering when the best remedy in the world is right at hand—but we do!

"But finally the pain was worse, my suffering so great, I knew I must do something. A friend mentioned Cardui and we sent for it. One bottle helped me.

"I took a course of Cardui, regained my strength, built myself up and felt like a new woman.

"Can I recommend Cardui? Yes, and gladly, for it is a God-send to suffering women. I hope when they suffer with troubles common to women they don't wait, but get this sure remedy at once."

Any druggist can supply Cardui promptly. Call on yours today.—Adv.

Home Town Helps

IN TRUE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Example of Small Town Neighborliness That Is the Rule Rather Than the Exception.

This is a story from life for city workers to moralize on.

Howard Kirchgesner is a farmer living on the outskirts of Staples, Minn. While operating some farm machinery, he crushed his hand. For any farmer to injure a hand at this season of the year is pretty serious business, especially when help is so scarce and live stock and crops must be daily attended to.

Kirchgesner went to bed with his hand paining him and wondering how his farm would get along. It looked pretty bad for him. In the morning he was awakened by a commotion in his front yard. He looked out to find Mayor Harry Long, Rev. W. H. Johnson, Harry Manson, Sherm Tower, Jerry Lynch and half a dozen other neighbors from Staples, dressed in overalls and equipped with hoes and other implements ready to keep his farm going while he was laid up.

And from sunup until sundown there was only death for weeds and potato bugs. Then the cows were milked and turned out to pasture and the neighbors departed for their homes.

It would seem that one must turn off from the asphalt pavements to find the places where life is still run pretty much as the heart dictates, and where the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" doesn't wait for an answer. Is it any wonder that the nation and the big city turn to the small town and the country for its captains, when this is the spirit that rules its everyday life.—Minneapolis Journal.

NO ADVANTAGE IN BIGNESS

Los Angeles Man Combats an Opinion That Has Been Long and Generally Held.

Of what advantage is bigness in a city, beyond a reasonable point, except to real estate subdividers? demands a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Personally, I found the Los Angeles of 1890 a more livable and lovable place than the Los Angeles of today.

Great cities are cancer spots on the map, breeding places of unrest and revolt. The trend to the cities is one of the most alarming symptoms of our national life.

Why measure a city by its size and smokestacks? Why not rather enlarge upon its beauty, and comfort, and good citizenship?

Americans worship bigness. Cities are estimated by their population, buildings by their height, men by their bank accounts, and babies by their weight. It is a sign of national youth. Children always delight in "great big" toys. In course of time—say in a thousand years or so—we shall overcome this weakness, and value quality rather than quantity.

Small Town Opportunities.

The general conception of a progressive man is measured by the size of his bank account, but the real measure of progress is to be found in the amount of good a man does for those around him. The mere shifting of wealth from one to another is not a mark of progress, but rather an increase of privilege. Many an ordinary man has become very progressive by coming to a small town from a larger one, because he had better opportunities to develop in the smaller town; while just the opposite could develop a live wire by changing to the city. Progressive men are staying in the small towns, else there would be no growing small towns. It takes effort, and lots of it, to increase the facilities of the small town.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Women Plan Park.

The women of Wellington, a Kansas town, have succeeded in a crusade they undertook a few years ago, to turn an unsightly swamp of 30 acres into a beautiful city park. It has been named "Community Park." It is laid out with artistic landscape effect, replete with trees, shrubs and flower beds. It contains a park house, surrounded with large shade trees, a neat modern stone building, containing a large reception room, dining room and kitchen, that will accommodate comfortably about 250 persons. The park house is used for entertainments, banquets and parties.—Montreal (Can.) Herald.

Courtesy First.

It should be a real pleasure to you to be able to give out information. The more you can be of service and benefit to folks, the more they will think of you and your city. You are a part of Indianapolis—and it is up to you to be a good part. Courtesy first! (Prepared by board in charge of arrangements for convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Indianapolis.)

Good Citizenship First.

Your town won't grow unless you grow. The size of any community is determined by the quality of its citizens, not by their number. Your duty to yourself and to your town is to be a good citizen.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held on the proclamation of the Governor, and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz: The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A. D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging, on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals.

Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and empower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 hereof.

Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constitution of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized.

Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads —by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise and passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilites, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties.

Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become a force and effect immediately this amendment is so ratified.

Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

TAKES POST CARD 26 YEARS TO REACH ITS DESTINATION

Wheeling, Aug. 22—A postal card mailed on May 17, 1894 at 9:30 a.m., and addressed to Mrs. Allen Speyer, 1118 Chapline St., this city, was delivered to the addressee on the afternoon of August 20, 1920, just 26 years, three months and three days after it was mailed. Where the card has been kept in that time the addressee would like to know. The card was mailed in this city, being received as shown by the postoffice receiving clerk's stamp, at 9:30, a.m. on the date above named, and on the reverse side of the card, the outgoing mail stamp shows that it left the postoffice at 4:30 o'clock August 20, this year.

THERE'S ANY OLD WAY NOW

"I am 59 years old and never was sick until 6 years ago when I got stomach trouble. I have spent a fortune for medicine which did not cure me but on suffering and getting worse. A fellow worker told me about Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. After taking 3 bottles I felt like a different man; before taking it I could not lie on my back nor right side. Now I can sleep any old way." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose wil convince or money funded. Sold by Alred Drug Co., and all good druggsts everywhere.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Wyatt visited relatives in Montgomery the latter part of last week. They returned home Sunday afternon accompanied by their little niece, Miss Mary Merle Poole.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Service Situation

Telephone service should be adequate, efficient and dependable; sufficient in quantity, satisfactory in quality and furnished without interruption.

Adequate service is dependent upon adequate facilities.

Efficient service is dependent upon a sufficient number of trained employees to maintain and operate the facilities.

Dependable service is dependent upon both adequate facilities and trained forces.

The facilities are paid for with the money invested in the business. Trained forces are paid with the money paid to the Company by the public for the service furnished.

In no other way can these essential requisites of service be had. The needed facilities are never paid for out of the earnings of this Company, and the employees are never paid out of the capital of the Company.

Subsequent statements will show what the Company has done to meet its obligations to furnish both facilities and forces.

Everyone knows that this Company's service has been dependable. Throughout the war and in spite of strikes and the most abnormal conditions ever known, our service was furnished without interruption. While the service now is not adequate to meet the unprecedented demand, due to causes which will be given later, the facts show that the Company is now furnishing a far greater quantity of service than ever before.

The following figures show the service furnished within the state of Georgia:

EXCHANGE SERVICE

	Telephones Installed	Telephones Disconnected	Net Gain
1915	9,103	8,514	589
1916	9,645	7,591	2,054
1917	8,452	7,111	1,341
1918	7,176	5,737	1,439

An average gain of 1,356 telephones per year. Since 1918 the performance was:

	Telephones Installed	Telephones Disconnected	Net Gain
1919	9,943	6,485	3,458
1920 (5 mo) ..	3,315	1,909	1,406

During 1919 the net gain was 155 per cent greater than the average gain for the four previous years. If the rate of net gain during the first five months of 1920 is maintained throughout the year, the 1920 gain will be 149 per cent greater than the normal average annual gain.

The average number of calls made from the exchange stations has greatly increased, so that the Company is now furnishing several hundred thousands more exchange messages from the same number of telephones, than ever before.

TOLL SERVICE

1915	1,025,278	toll messages
1916	1,103,666	" "
1917	1,255,083	" "
1918	1,367,726	" "
1919	1,379,629	" "
1920 (first 5 mos.) ..	630,674	" "

The volume of toll service during 1919 was 34.6 per cent greater than during 1915, and if the volume of toll service for the first five months of 1920 is maintained throughout the year, the volume of toll service during 1920 will be 47.6 per cent greater than during 1915.

Does this record entitle this Company to your support? If it does, your interest demands that you let it be known.

That every one cannot now be served is due to the unparalleled demand, and the abnormal conditions of the manufacturer and means of transportation; all of which will be shown.

The next advertisement will tell what we must do to adequately serve you during the next five years.

REPUBLICANS SWEEP THE STATE OF MAINE

BAROMETER STATE FORECASTS REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN COUNTRY IN NOVEMBER

PORTLAND, MAINE, Sept. 13. Republicans swept the State in the election today and elected Frederick H. Parkhurst as governor by the largest majority ever given a gubernatorial candidtate in Maine. With only 42 isolated towns and plantations to be heard from, which cast a total vote of about 3,500 in the state election of 1916, Parkhurst's majority over Bertrand G. McIntire, Democrat, will be more than 64,000. The largest previous majority was about 48,000 given the Republican nominee in 1896.

Aided by the women's vote, which went very largely to the Republican candidates, the party rolled up a total vote of more than 53,000 larger than that of 1916, while the Democratic total was increased over that year by only about 2,300. The Republicans elected Congressmen from all four districts and obtained a larger majority in the legislature, besides electing their candidate for state auditor.

The Republicans carried all four congressional districts by large majorities, re-electing Congressmen Wallace H. White, Jr. John A. Peters and Ira G. Hersey, and electing Carroll L. Beedy, of Portland, in the first district, where Congressmen Louis B. Goodall was not a candidate for re-election. They also obtained a commanding lead in the state legislature and elected Roy L. Wardwell, of Augusta as state auditor.

The part played by the new factor of the women's vote was evidenced in all parts of the state women availed themselves of their first opportunity to vote in a state election and the figures showed a large majority of them voted the Republican ticket. The vote for Parkhurst, on returns from more than two-thirds of the state, showed an increase of more than 46,000 over that cast for Milliken Republican, four year ago, while McIntire's vote was less than 1,000 more than that of Curtis, Democrat, in the last presidential year.

Returns from 557 election precincts out of 632 in the state (from 461 cities and towns out of 519), for governor, give.

Parkhurst (Republican) 124,966.
McIntire (Democrat) 64,296.

These same precincts in 1916 gave
Milliken, (Republican), 74,979.
Curtis, (Democrat), 62,453.

The Republican strength was uniform throughout the state. Some of the cities which showed small Democratic pluralities in 1916, returned large pluralities for Parkhurst today. In many others, which went Republican four years ago, the plurality for that ticket was greatly increased this year.

Considerable significance of the outcome in its bearing on the voting for president in November, was apparent from the fact that the campaign was fought out almost wholly on national lines with the League of Nations as the chief issue.

Congressional Figures.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—Returns from 75 precincts out of 91 in the first district give for congress:

Beedy (Republican) 19,027; Haskell, (Democrat) 8,593.

In the second district, 140 out of 145 precincts give: White (Republican) 34,390; Price (Democrat) 21,588.

Daniel's Statement.

Washington, Sept. 13—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who made speeches in Maine for the Democratic ticket, commented upon the election there tonight in a statement which said that the "majority for state officers in September does not foreshadow anything as to the November result."

"The vote in the Monday election does not indicate the strength of the sentiment in favor of the League of Nations in Maine," he said. "Some of the ablest men in the state told me that in a straight league of nations referendum in November Cox and Roosevelt could carry the state on the question, uneffected by state issues, if that issue was presented directly to all the voters of the state."

Harding's Statement.

Marion, Ohio, Sept. 13—Senator Harding issued the following statement tonight after he had been informed that the Maine election result indicated a sweeping victory for the Republican ticket:

"The result in Maine is reassurance that the American people mean to return to representative government under the constitution through the agency of the Republican party and that Maine takes the lead in declaring for America unmortgaged to the old world, but still ready to serve humanity as American conscience impels."

READY TO REGISTER DOGS

Circuit Clerk M. D. Foshee informs us that his supplies for the 1920 dog registration have arrived, and under the law, all dogs must be registered between October 1 and October 15.

Last year the state authorities were very lenient in the requirements of this law because it was a new law and the people did not have much time to become acquainted with it. But this time that is not the case and it is very certain that those who do not get their dogs registered in the time required by law will have to pay a penalty for not doing so.

Everybody is urged to take due notice of the matter and get your dogs registered between October 1st and October 15th.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

There will be preaching next Sunday morning at 11 a.m. by the pastor. Sunday School at 10 a.m. Subject to the will of the church. There will be no preaching at night, as the pastor will continue the meeting now being held at Silurin, where an effort is being made this week to build a church. Some interest is being shown also in the meeting and the pastor will appreciate the prayers of all praying people for this needy field.

The Sunbeam Band will meet on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 7 p.m.

Everybody cordially inivted to these services.

THORSBY LOCALS

Mr. A. L. Legg of Birmingham and Mr. C. E. Lucas of Thorsby have formed a partnership for the purpose of operating a cold storage and meat packing plant at Thorsby, the only business of its kind between Birmingham and Montgomery. They propose to serve fresh meats daily and of a quality that only curing in cold storage can produce. Work has already been commenced on the construction of the cooling rooms.

Mr. L. C. Robinson has sold his store to Mr. J. G. Billingsley, who has sold his farm near Thorsby and will make a venture in merchandising.

Mr. Nels Peterson, our genial station agent, has moved from one of Mrs. Villadsen's cottages, near the railroad, to a more secluded house which he purchased from Mr. R. L. Carter.

Mr. George Freeman has torn down the old livery stable which he owned and is building a neat bungalow which rumor says is to be occupied by Dr. Wood.

Mr. J. R. Martin is preparing to build a modern bungalow on his lots near the Congregational Church.

The Congregational Church people are preparing to make somewhat extensive repairs on their building both inside and outside. Negotiations are also under way to secure a parsonage for the pastor.

Rev. James M. Graham of Birmingham has recently been elected president of Thorsby Institute and has arrived to enter upon his new duties. The Institute is building a new house for their new president on the campus near Bates Hall.

On Thursday evening, September 16th, there will be a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of Thorsby Institute to hear the report of the committee on the Girls new Dormitory, consider such plans and specifications as may be submitted and give such instructions to their committee is may be needed to begin operations on the new building at an early date.

On Thursday, September 9th, at 10 a.m. Thorsby Institute opened its fifteenth school year, the assembly hall being well filled with students, patrons and friends of the school, and the enrollment was the largest of any first day in the history of the school, with many more to come in in the near future. A very noticeable feature of the occasion was the evident spirit of co-operation among the people of Thorsby and vicinity which manifests a growing interest, and appreciation of the school as a valuable adjunct to the educational facilities of this community.

On Friday evening, September 17 the Ladies Guild of Thorsby will give their annual reception at Bates Hall, to the faculty, trustees and their wives, students, new and old, regular contributing friends of Thorsby Institute.

Mr. Robert Robinson is a visitor to his parents in Thorsby.

The many friensd of Mr. S. G. Norton will be pleased to know that he is expected, with his wife, to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Norton during the month of October.

Mr. E. N. Bentley, son in law of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Robinson, has bought the interest of Mr. Monroe Benson, partner of Mr. H. N. Thompson, in the garage business and will occupy the cottage recently vacated by Mr. Nels Peterson.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Powe of Birmingham motored down to Clanton to visit Mr. and Mrs. J. P. VanDerveer.

Mr. J. W. Driver left Monday for Houston, Texas, where he will reside in the future.

REPUBLICANS ENLIST WOMEN OF THE COUNTY IN CAMPAIGN

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the County Republican Campaign Committee, Mr. Howard L. Foshee, the members of said committee representing every beat in the county assembled at the court house last Friday to transact business relative to the progress of the county Republican campaign.

The first thing that was called to the attention of the committee was a few vacancies on the committee, and these were filled by unanimous selection.

One of the main items of business for which the committee was called was the matter of selecting women members of the campaign committee for the several beats to assist the campaign by arousing the women to their duties of registration and voting when the proper time comes. The following is the list of women that were chosen in each Beat:

Beat 1, Miss Hattie Jones, Mrs. Leila Smitherman.

Beat 2, Mrs. J. N. Ervin, Mrs. Mollie Sessions, Mrs. C. W. Scott.

Beat 3, Mrs D O. Manning, Mrs. W. F. DeShazo, Mrs. W. B. Cooper.

Beat 4, Mrs. Lee Vickers, Mrs. E. P. Littlejohn, Mrs. J L Wilson, Mrs. J J Mims, Mrs. R W Littlejohn, Mrs. C D Duke, Mrs. J. Wiley Foshee, Mrs. J B Atkinson, Miss Gertrude Popwell.

Beat 5, Mrs. W S Clark, Mrs. Alfred Robinson.

Beat 6, Mrs. C C Vinson, Mrs. J. W Cagle, Mrs. M F Lett, Miss Mae Poole.

Beat 7, Mrs. Ralph Calloway, Mrs. W Y Nix.

Beat 8, Mrs. T G Milling, Mrs. John H. Ramsey.

Beat 9, Mrs. C S Howard, Mrs. J H Goddard, Miss Genie Collins, Miss Roberta Bean, Mrs. A J Cleckler, Mrs. J L Vines.

Beat 10, Mrs. J T Rockett, Mrs. Newt Vinson, Mrs. R J Eiland, Mrs. Frank Patterson, Mrs. H J Taylor, Miss Zebie Robinson.

Beat 11, Mrs. Leona Giles, Mrs. Mollie Gentry, Mrs. William Cleckler, Mrs. R. W. Heflin.

Beat 12, Mrs. J P Bean, Mrs. Emma Wilson, Mrs. T J Dorminey.

Beat 13, Mrs. L A Calloway, Mrs. J H Anderson, Mrs. H M Dykes.

Beat 14, Mrs. H M Eagle, Mrs. H. S Watkins, Mrs. T J Hubbard, Miss Ursula Jones.

Beat 15, Blonnie Henley, Miss Ida Short, Mrs. Jessie Moates, Mrs. W T Herrod.

Beat 16, Mrs. Lee Robinson, Mrs. R M Robinson.

The ladies who were added to the campaign committee will be expected to look after the qualification and registration of the women in their respective Beats. As soon as the matter has been passed upon by the legislature and detailed provisions made for the registration of women in Alabama these ladies will be informed of the manner and methods that will be used in registration and it will then be their duty to arouse the other women and get them to register and become qualified to vote in November.

It is desired to impress our women that a great duty lies with them in going to the polls to vote this fall. The success of he Republican party in Chilton County lies in their exercise of their franchise. They must not fail to qualify and vote.

It may be determined by the committee that some speakings are necessary in the different Beats. In that event the women who were put on the committee can be of great service in urging the other women to come out to the speakings and there learn of the plans for their registration.

It was thought advisable by the committee that there should be a central committee consisting of the campaign chairman, H. L. Foshee, and two others, who would have general supervision of the campaign, the raising of the campaign funds and the expenditure of the same. By authority of a motion duly passed to provide the above, the chairman, Mr. H. L. Foshee, apopinted Mr. H. A. Harris and Mr. Elbert Littlejohn to act with himself as such committee.

Jndge Reynolds spoke at Mineral Springs, Beat 12, last Friday night, to a large crowd of voters and citizens. His address was in the main an appeal to the women to register and vote in November.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE CLANTON SCHOOL DISTRICT

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 15, 1920.

You are no doubt aware of the fact that on September 20th, 1920 the people of this District will be given the privilege of deciding by the ballot whether or not the present three mill tax will be re-adopted.

Then, again, beyond a reasonable doubt, a large majority of the voters and property holders, as well, have readily seen the advantage of this tax. Two years ago you were promised that if this tax was voted you would be given a nine months free school. This promise has been carred out to the letter, notwithstanding the fact of the high price of everything. More than seventy-five desks and over two hundred dollars worth of blackboards, besides the coal, the brooms, etc., have been paid for exclusively out of the three-mill school tax. You will bear in mind that since the Clanton Grammar School opened a few days ago the school board has been compelled to buy seventy more desks at a cost of $672.00. Thus you see, that by the time these desks are placed in the building and properly put up for us they will cost approximately $10 each. These same desks a few years ago could have been bought for $3.25 each.

This year two additional teachers have been added to the faculty. Then too, to hold our last year's teachers it was necessary to increase their salaries. In fact, every teacher could have received more salary in some other town, but owing to their devotion to the people and school in this District they preferred to remain here at less salary than they could have received elsewhere. With all those added expenses it will take a very large incidental fee amounting to one dollar or more per month for each child, should this three mill tax be defeated.

You will recall that during the County three mill tax campaign your attention was called to the astounding fact that the people in the State of Ala. consumed 127,000,000 cold drinks yearly. These bottles, if placed with the bottom upright would pave 20th Street in Birmingham from Capital Park to Red Mountain, and have thousands left over with which to pave other streets. Now, any intelligent person can readily see that these bottles placed upright would easily pave every street in Clanton and then have many left over to fix some of the county highways. These cold drinks, according to the U.S. government statistics, cost the people of the State of Alabama more then $12,000,000.00. According to the population of this District our cold drinks cost us approximately $15,000.00. How does this compare with out measley sum on which we try to run our school? "If the child is benefitted the State is benefitted, if the child is injured the State is injured." Remember agan, the saying of one distinguished Alabamian, "We are not too poor to educate, we are too poor not to educate."

The corporations including the L. & N. Railroad Co., will pay by far the larges part of this tax.

With the above facts, how can we afford to vote against this tax and thereby deny the children of this District the advantages of an excellent free school?

Do you believe in the greatness of your school, Then why not show it by coming to her aid before it is too late. Help!

Yours for success of your children,
J. L. JOHNSON,
Prin. Clanton Grammar School.

DODSON STOPS SALE OF CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" is Taking Place of Dangerous, Sickening Chemical, Say Druggists

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.—Adv.

"FREEZONE"

Lift Off Corns! No Pain!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

The Verdict.

Spoiled Star—The critics say I am just killing in this part.

The Manager—Yes, they do say you murder it.

Saved An Operation

MR. W. F. NELSON, a merchant of Hixon, Tenn., says: That the daughter of one of his neighbors, Mr. James Roberts, was in such a condition with female trouble that an operation was advised, and the young lady was sent to Chattanooga for its performance. She dreaded the operation, and STELLA VITAE having been recommended, decided to try that first. She has taken six bottles and is happily on the road to recovery. She is able to do her usual work and is in better health than for years before, but continues to use it. She writes: "STELLA VITAE will do all you claim." Her father says "She began to improve at once, after taking STELLA VITAE."

IMPROVED ROADS

NOVEL ROAD-MAKING DEVICE

Southerner Has Patented an Unusual Drag, Which Is Said to Be Quite Effective.

For removing inequalities from dirt highways, a southern inventor has devised and patented an unusual road drag, which is declared to be very effective. The forward part of the contrivance includes three transverse beams, fastened together with two lateral timbers. In the first two crosspieces are set spikes, the points of which protrude from the wood, while the front side of the third beam is faced with metal. The rear portion of the device, which is attached to the front section with chains, consists of two side timbers, nailed to four heavy planks, with their forward edges turned upward and lapped. When the appliance is pulled over a road, the earth is loosened by the spikes, then smoothed and packed by the remainder of the machine, thus finishing the surface in one operation.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NUMBER ALL ENGLISH ROADS

Properly Organized and Uniform System of Sign Posting to Be Used in Great Britain.

The national road scheme will be ready by the autumn.

The scheme consists of the classification of all main and secondary roads in Great Britain, together with a properly organized and uniform system of sign posting. Roads will bear distinctive numbers, so that the traveler need only ascertain the official number of the road, say, from Norwich to Birmingham, to be able to travel from one town to the other without a map.

The experiments conducted under instructions of the ministry of transport to determine the most suitable material for a uniform road dressing, have been successful, and a standard surface has been practically selected. For the present this surface will be applied only to the arterial, and not to the secondary, roads.

By January 1 the new national road scheme will be in readiness to be put into immediate operation.—Daily Mail London.

LARGER CAPACITY OF ROADS

Must Be Doubled to Meet Augmenting Requirements of Transportation Next Year.

We are confronted with the problem of increasing the capacity of our highways. This must be doubled to meet the augmenting requirements of the next year or two. Engineers are wondering along what line this increase shall be provided. One suggestion is to double the width of the roads and increase first cost and maintenance 100 per cent. The most reasonable one is to provide a road of sufficient strength to carry vehicles of 100 per cent greater capacity for a given width of road, as the first cost of these strengthened roads would be only 10 to 20 per cent greater per mile than that of present inadequate highways, says a writer in an exchange. In view of the fact that 50 per cent increase in hauling capacity gives a reduction of 15 per cent in transportation costs, the latter seems the wisest thing to do.

ATTENTION TO EARTH ROADS

Clean Out Ditches and True Up Crown by Use of Light Grader—Four Horses Needed.

The majority of earth roads have been previously graded and it is necessary to clean out the ditches and true up the crown of the road by the use of the light grader two or three times a season. This work requires four horses.

Haul With Less Cost.

Not only can a greater quantity of products be hauled to market with less horse power on better highways, but there also will be a greater saving of wear and tear on the vehicles which carry the goods.

Encourage Producers.

The national system of transportation and distribution is so essential that every possible facility must be provided to encourage producers of farm communities and merchandise to increase production.

Frocks Express Personality

WOMEN are sure to approve of the new tailored dresses for fall, because there is no chance to grow tired of any one style in them. There is no monotony among them, no tiresome repetition of ideas in construction or trimming, but such a diversity of really good designing that there is a dress for every style, just as there is a becoming hat for every face. They have one very good point in common, however, and that is their simple lines, and designers appear to agree on the neckline, which is rounded in front and low enough sometimes to admit of a chemisette, but higher than usual at the back.

Two very smart tailored frocks for fall may be studied in the picture here and both present new features. The frock at the left has a severely straight bodice with long waist line, and sleeves slashed on the outer arm and curved upward to the three-quarter length. They are finished with a flat band of satin and the neck, in the same way. These bands appear across the top of the skirt at the back, where it is plaited and at the bottom of the front portion which is gathered. The skirt joins the bodice with a flat piping of satin and just above this piping satin bands reveal how cleverly they can be used when a designer sets out to do his best with them. Three rows of slashes in the bodice furnish them a chance to slip in and out and form a checker-board pattern that is charming for a cloth dress.

The simplest of straight-line dresses in the second model ought to inspire gratitude in the hearts of plump women, for it is destined to give them long lines. There is an inverted plait down the front and decorations of narrow ribbon in groups of six each, finished with tiny steel buttons. The new collar is interesting, being a tie of silk attached to the neck and finished with a bow, and ends at the front.

Sweaters Follow Devious Ways

SWEATERS—that word must have a broad interpretation to cover all the varied garments that are called by it—are going by many paths this fall. But all lead in one direction and their goal is to furnish more warmth and less color, apparently, than their forerunners of the past season. There are so many variations of the principal models that every one can be suited. Slip-over and coat designs find about equal favor, both in short and fingertip lengths and in snug-fitting or loose adjustment. Some of the snug slip-over sweaters are only a little longer than a blouse. They are usually knitted with a band about the bottom and long enough to extend about six inches below the waistline where they turn jauntily upward in a narrow cuff.

Another short model appears in the surplice sweater and comes in the brighter colors. This is waist length also, open at the front with attached knitted belt extended so that it can be brought round the waist and tied at the back. Knitted or braided belts and sashes of the same wool as the sweater are the rule. Colors are quiet with the exception of some strong blues and greens and in many coat models no contrasting colors are introduced, but borders and bands are accomplished by varying the stitch in the knitting.

An attractive slip-over sweater is shown in the picture. Its neck and sleeves are unusual, the former having a square opening at the front and the latter deep-knitted flounces. The border at the bottom is of the same color as the sweater and so is the long knitted sash. This model fits snugly about the hips and is a trifle longer than its forerunners.

LITTLE ADVICE FOR GROCER

Would Be Wag Had Picked Out the Wrong Woman on Whom to Exercise His Wit.

There was an expression of melancholy ringed with resentment on Mrs. Brown's face as she entered the grocer's shop.

"I want," she began impressively, "to talk to you about them eggs I had last week. They weren't anything like as fresh as they might have been."

"That's strange," replied the grocer, who fancied himself something of a wag. "We always have an almanac hanging up in the fowl run to keep the hens up to date."

"Oh!" came the retort with crushing emphasis. "Then all I have to say is that somebody with brains about as addled as them eggs has been misleading the hens with last year's calendar. Just you hang up a 1920 card, my good fellow, and maybe them chickens'll start working overtime to catch up to it."

Of Little Use.

CATS DISRUPTED THE ZOO

Released to Clean Up Despised Rats, They Terrorized Lions, Leopards and Tigers Alike.

An army of cats, turned loose in the zoo at Highland park, Pittsburgh, Pa., to clean out the rats, has shown the fallacy of many tales of ferocity told of wild denizens of the jungle.

Rats had become so numerous at the big zoo that it was found necessary to take some means of ridding the building of the pests, and the head keeper decided on cats—just the plain alley breed. An advertisement brought them in droves, and they were turned loose in the cages, cellars, supply rooms and lofts.

No sooner had the cages been invaded than pandemonium broke loose. Lions, tigers, panthers, pumas and leopards failed to recognize a distant relationship, and many of them went clear frantic with fear. Other animals, including the elephants, were not so timorous, but hippo and rhino were only a few seconds in making up their minds that discretion was the better part of valor.

The poetry of motion is portrayed by the picture of a beautiful girl with a bug down her back.

Certainly luck counts. So do brains and pluck

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

OUT TO DRY.

"This is the best joke I've ever heard," said the King of the Clouds, "and I'm the one who has made the joke.

"Yes, I'm a regular little joke maker, or big joke maker, or whatever you want to call me."

"What happened?" asked one of the Cloud Fairies.

"Well you see," said the King of the Clouds, "I saw a lot of bathing suits out to dry. They were all hanging on the line, for all the people had been in bathing in the morning.

"They had had fine swims and had enjoyed themselves immensely. Of course they had grumbled a bit when they had had glimpses of me, for I was talking from time to time with Mr. Sun and he was sitting back with me in my cloud home.

"They were afraid that Mr. Sun would desert them, but after a little while I went back to fix my best suit—I wear my best suit on rainy days which is different from the way people do. You see I like to wear my best suit on the rainy days as that is when most folks see me, if they see me at all! Sometimes they don't come out and look at me but spend their time playing games and cards and never looking at me except for a moment or two when they grumble.

"Well, all the people thought Mr. Sun was out for good. And they hung out their bathing suits when they were all dressed and they said: 'We'll hang out our suits to dry.'

"I just thought I'd play a joke on them so I thought I'd have a very fine kind of a joke.

"I thought it up and this was the joke."

"Tell it to me," said the Cloud Fairy.

"Just what I am going to do," said the King of the Clouds.

"I'm glad of that, for I'm so eager to hear," said the Cloud Fairy.

"I said to myself, 'They'll have their suits out to wet and not to dry.'"

"What did you mean by that?" asked the Cloud Fairy.

"I meant," said the King of the Clouds, "that instead of their bathing suits drying they would only get wetter. Instead of their hanging out to dry, they'd hang out and get wet by the moment and the second, and add to the wetness they had taken in from the water.

Look Out of Their Windows.

"Oh, that was a joke. And I saw the people look out of their windows and say, 'Well, the bathing suits aren't drying. They were hung out there to dry and they're getting far wetter than they got when they were hung out there first after we had wrung them out.'

"And I laughed to myself to think that they had been hung out there to dry and how I had fooled them.

"I think it was the best sort of a joke I thought up, don't you, Cloud Fairy?

"Just think what happened to those bathing suits they had hung out to dry.

"The old King of the Clouds played a great joke on them."

"That was a great joke," said the Cloud Fairy.

"Look," said the King of the Clouds, "they don't know now what to do with their bathing suits. I'm puzzling them, I am.

"If they take them off the line they'll have to take them in and hang them in to dry.

"But they can't hang them out to dry today, for I'm going to stay around for a time longer.

"I promised my children, the Army of Raindrops, they could play about.

"And old Nurse Fog is taking the Mist Grandchildren for a little airing.

"So the people are having a joke played on them, all right, all right.

"And the joke was made up by the old King of the Clouds, a great old joker, ha, ha."

"You are a great old joker," said the Cloud Fairy. "Yes no one can say you're not that."

"And Mr. Sun is laughing back of the clouds too," said the King of the Clouds. "He thinks it's a great joke too, ha, ha, ha," ended the King of the Clouds.

"Ha, ha," chuckled the Cloud Fairy.

THREE YEARS WITHOUT HOPE

A Story of Sickness and Suffering with Final Return to Health It will do you good to read it

No matter how long nor how much you have suffered, do not give up hope. Do not decide there is no help for you. There is. Make up your mind to get well. You can. There is a remedy in which you may place full reliance as did Mrs. Rozalia Kania of 39 Silver Street, New Britain, Conn. This is what she says: "I had cramps for three years and thought I would never be any better. I could not eat without distress. Slept with my mouth open and could hardly breathe. No medicine helped me. I had catarrh of the stomach. Now I have no cramps and am feeling well and healthy. I wish every suffering person would take PE-RU-NA."

Catarrh effects the mucous membranes in any organ or part. PE-RU-NA, by regulating the digestion and aiding elimination, sends a rich, pure supply of blood and nourishment to the sick and inflamed membranes and health returns.

For coughs, colds, catarrh and catarrhal conditions generally, PE-RU-NA is recommended. If you are sick, do not wait and suffer. The sooner you begin using Dr. Hartman's well-known PE-RU-NA, the sooner you may expect to be well and strong and in full possession of your health. A bottle of PE-RU-NA is the finest emergency, ready-to-take remedy to have in the house. It is fourteen ounces of prevention and protection.

Sold everywhere in tablet or liquid form.

The grass doesn't quit because it is stepped on.

"Cold in the Head"

is an acute attack of Nasal Catarrh. Those subject to frequent "colds in the head" will find that the use of HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will build up the System, cleanse the Blood and render them less liable to colds. Repeated attacks of Acute Catarrh may lead to Chronic Catarrh.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

How to Treat A Torpid Liver

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

EATONIC Users —Do This—Get the Greatest Benefits

Chicago, Ill.—Thousands of reports from people all over the U. S. who have tested eatonic, show the greatest benefits are obtained by using it for a few weeks, taking one or two tablets after each meal.

Eatonic users know that it stops Belching, Bloating, Heartburn, and Stomach Miseries quickly, but the really lasting benefits are obtained by using eatonic long enough to take the harmful excess acids and gases entirely out of the system. This requires a little time, for eatonic takes up the excess acidity and poisons and carries them out of the body and of course, when it is all removed, the sufferer gets well, feels fine—full of life and pep.

If you have been taking an eatonic now and then, be sure and take it regularly for a time and obtain all of these wonderful benefits. Please speak to your druggist about this, so that he can tell others that need this help. Adv.

THE LEAGUE A LOSING ISSUE

The League of Nations is a losing issue in American politics. Every state that has had an election this year has repudiated both the league and the candidates who endorsed it. Even Georgia, a state that would have been expected to continue to give its support to whatever the national Democratic party might put out has nominated Tom Watson for United States Senator and Watson has been all the way through one of the bitterest enemies of the League and the Wilson administration.

Likewise, the Maine elections on Monday resulted in a landslide against the League. The Republican candidates for all state offices were overwhelmingly elected.

Everywhere the League of Nations and the Wilson administration are being handled unmercifully by the voters. The final death blow will be administered in November when the country proclaims itself for Mr. Harding by the greatest majority any man has even been elected to the presidency. America stands for America, and therefore, it must be against the League.

WATSON AS SENATOR

Tom Watson will be a kind of Senator at large when he goes to Washington next March. In the past thirty years he has spent more time out of the Democratic party than he has spent in it. He was the leader of the Populists as long as they remained in the field as a separate political entity. Then he returned to the Democratic fold for a spell, only to leave it for the Bull Moose crowd in 1912 and for the Republican ticket in 1916. Now he is a Democrat again, with a Democratic commission as Senator in his pocket, indicating that in Georgia a majority of the people have forgiven him for his transgressions. He is committed, however, neither to the San Francisco platform nor to the Chicago platform. He is committed only to the Ocala platform.

It is a favorite pose of Mr. Watson that his enemies are leagued together in a murderous conspiracy to take him off some time when he isn't looking. Although nobody has ever so much as hit him with a Maypop, we presume that he will enter the city of Washington surrounded by picked body guards. He should demand that every senator in Congress, from Phelan of California, to Penrose of Pennsylvania, be searched for firearms before he agrees to enter the chamber. The people haven't many friends left and a champion such as Brother Watson is should be cautioned by his well-wishers not to be off his guard for one moment.—Montgomery Advertiser.

OLD EX-TEACHERS OF STATE TO BE PUT BACK ON JOB

Mr. Howard L. Foshee, our County Superintendent of Education, is in receipt of the following letter from the State Superintendent at Montgomery:

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 13, 1920.

To County Superintendents:

In a further effort to enable you to secure teachers for your schools next year, you are authorized to make application for a provisional certificate to be issued to any holder of an expired first, second or third grade certificate, which was issued by the State Board of Examiners at any time since the inauguration of the uniform state examination system.

Please note that this ruling supercedes that of August 17th on the issuance of provisional certificates, and that it extends the privilege to receive these certificates to all persons who have taught under certificates of any grades since the uniform examination law went into effect. Applications should be submitted on the regular forms, and when practicable should be accompanied by the expired certificates.

Since the question of an adequate supply of qualified teachers does not appear to be any nearer to a solution than at any time within the last two years, it is my intention to recommend to the State Board of Education at its next meeting that examinations for certificates of all grades be continued for at least another year on the same basis as heretofore. If this recommendation is adopted, it will mean that examinations for third grade certificates will be given in December and thereafter, notwthstanding the printed announcement that such examinations would be discontinued after September 30, 1920.

Yours very truly,
JOHN W. ABERCROMBIE,
Superintendent of Education.

ELECTION WEEK

Sept. 20th to 25th, The Ideal, along with 5,000 other picture theatres, are conducting a nationwide straw vote on the coming national election. Blank ballots can be obtained at the entrance to this theater at any time during this week, and all voters, including the ladies, are requested and urged to secure ballots and vote on the important questions before the country. The ballots when filled out, are to be dropped into a sealed receptacle. At the close of the week's business they will be counted by a selection of representative ladies and gentlemen, and the total results will be flashed on our screen the following week; also transmitted to headquarters, who will compile the entire country's vote and furnish the figures and facts covering the whole country's vote.

This is going to be a very interesting and instructive innovation, and your interest and co-operation will be appreciated and add to the value of the move. (All individual votes will be strictly confidential.)

THE ALABAMA STATE FAIR

THE WEALTH OF THE STATE

The wondrous agricultural projects, the fruits, grains and vegetables produced by Alabama's incomparable soil, the mineral resources, the magic of needle and cook stove as brought forth by the women of the state, the herds of cattle, horses, hogs and sheep, all the marvelous things that make Alabama a state in which it is good to live will be shown in the remarkable exhibits that will make THE 1920 ALABAMA STATE FAIR the premier exposition of The South.

ATTRACTIONS THAT THRILL

Death-defying feats of a dozen varieties, hair-raising aeroplane exhibitions, seemingly impossible automobile performances, races both of horses and of motor cars, and the most wonderful array of attractions ever assembled in the Southland will feature the wonderful exposition offered the people of the state by the management.

"Oooh! Look at this one-real Jacobean!"

Yes! And on the next page, something equally exquisite, equally new, equally old.

And on the next—and the next—and the next.

You turn from Sheraton to Chippendale; from Gothic to William and Mary; from French to Italian. In 17 beautiful designs, Mr. Edison's designers have expressed the best there is in period furniture. You're simply bound to find a cabinet that just exactly fits your home, your tastes, your ambitions, your pocketbook.

"Edison and Music" is the book of

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since . . . I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

Goodyear Tires for Small Cars Are Popular Because Economical

There is nothing but disappointment in buying cheaply made tires that are announced as wonderful bargains at a few dollars each and then fail after brief terms of service.

Get exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost in Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3, 30x3½ and 31x4-inch sizes, built of Goodyear-selected materials and with Goodyear skill and care.

Due to their precise manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes, their quality is most economically produced and therefore most economically employed.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; ride farther and fare better.

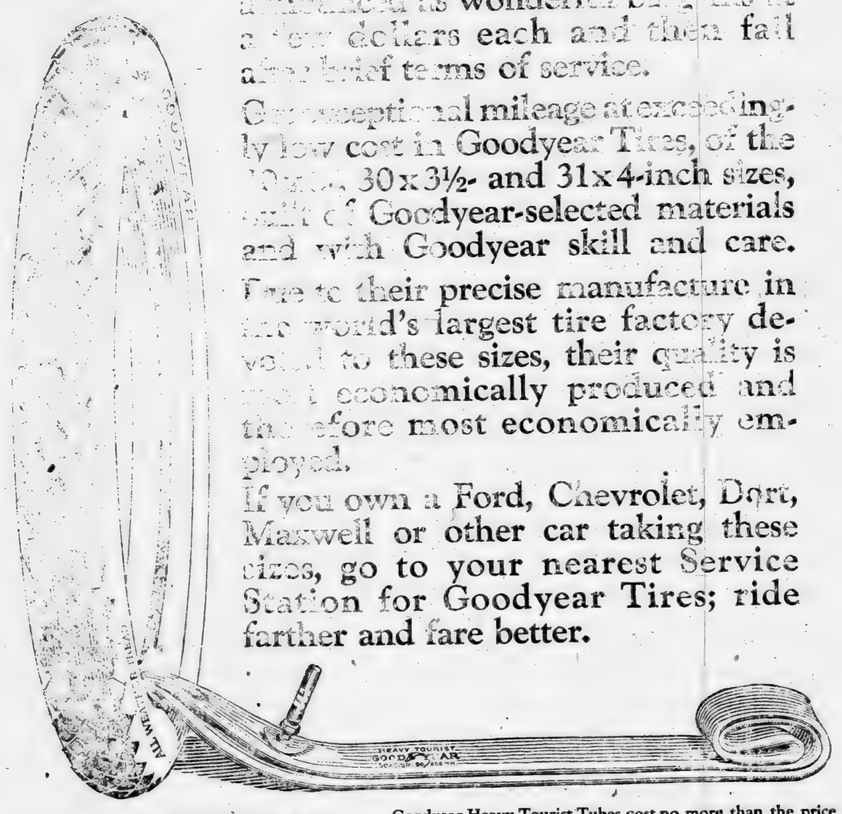
Goodyear Tires for Small Cars Are Popular Because Economical



There is nothing but disappointment in buying cheaply made tires that are announced as wonderful bargains at a few dollars each and then fail after brief terms of service.

Exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost in Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, built of Goodyear-selected materials and with Goodyear skill and care.

Due to their precise manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes, their quality is most economically produced and therefore most economically employed.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; ride farther and fare better.

WHEAT AND OATS THE OUTLOOK

SOME FACTORS OF SUCCESSFUL SMALL GRAIN PRODUCTION IN SOUTHERN STATES.

C. A. Whittle, Southern Soil Improvement Committee.

Wheat is too closely related to human hunger ever to suffer a serious slump in demand. At this time the great wheat producing areas of Europe give no signs of getting immediately back to normal production. Soviet Russia, the greatest of all, offers no signs of growing wheat beyond—if even equal to—the needs of Russia.

Roumania, Austria, Hungary and the Balkans are so depleted in men and means, and so disturbed with war and international politics, as to grow not even enough small grain for their own hungry and starving millions. Other leading European countries are importers and not exporters of grain. The Americas will, therefore, be the hope of Europe's bread. In fact, the demand will continue to be very urgent.

LABOR—The labor requirements per acre of wheat is less, of course, than for cultivated crops. Where labor's scarce wheat and oats are, therefore, to be looked upon with favor.

But the labor problem involved in producing wheat will not be completely solved unless the farmer goes in for large yields per acre. It requires no more preparation, and seed, to grow a big crop of wheat than a small one. Therefore, the intelligent farmer will look well to his soil treatment so that maximum yields may be made at a minimum cost per bushel. Farm labor is too expensive to neglect this precaution.

PREPARATION—Wheat and Oats do best on upland soils. The stiffer, firmer soils are preferred. But it does not pay to sow these crops on eroded, thin soiled slopes. If the crop is to follow cotton, corn or other cultivated crop, the soil may be disked. Deep breaking is not necessary. After drilling in the seed, the soil may be firmed and smoothed with a roller.

FERTILIZATION—Intelligent fertilization will pay on wheat and oats. Fertilizers will create a good root development and thus protect the plant against winter-killing; they will hasten the growth of wheat that has been sown late on account of the Hessian fly; it will increase stooling or tillering, and make plumper grain and fuller heads; and well-fed plants are also more resistant to rust and other diseases.

An application of nitrogen in late winter or early spring will prove very helpful in giving the grain crops a vigorous new start.

GOOD SEED—A variety of wheat may be good, but the germinating power of the seed poor. A farmer should give more attention to his wheat and oat seed. He should find out their yielding record. Different strains of a variety will have different yielding ability. Get only the best—it pays.

Good seed includes clean seed. Make them smut-free by a dip into blue stone. Use only the varieties that have rust resistance power.

Farmers of the cotton belt would do well to go into the growing of cereals on a broader scale. Small grains fit in with a well arranged crop rotation. They provide necessities, and thereby add to the independence of the farmer and to his power to conserve the returns from his money crops.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.

By the Governor:
WM. P. COBB,
Secretary of State.

Look Out for Rheumatism As Winter Approaches

So many cases of Rheumatism come from a tiny disease germ that infests the blood, that physicians are beginning to realize that this source of the disease is becoming quite prevalent. Of course a disease that has its source in the blood cannot be reached by local remedies applied to the surface.

One remedy that has given splendid results in the treatment of Rheumatism is S.S.S., the fine old blood remedy that has been sold by druggists for more than fifty years. S.S.S. acts by driving out of the blood the disease germ that causes Rheumatism, thus affording real relief.

Begin taking S.S.S. today and if you will write a complete history of your case, our medical director will give you expert advice, without charge. Address Chief Medical Adviser, 151 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

KILBY SAYS LET PEOPLE DECIDE ON CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Governor Thomas E. Kilby has sent out a letter in regard to the Constitutional Convention, in which he states that the matter of whether or not the Constitution shall be remade will be left up to the vote of the people.

Following is his letter in full:

During recent years it has been found that much progressive legislation, earnestly desired, has been restrained because of some constitutional limitation or inhibition. This has occasioned the submission to the people for approval at almost every general election one or more amendments to the constitution, with the result that we now have a considerable amount of confusion and a great lack of co-ordination in the fundamental law of the State.

From almost every section of Alabama there has come a demand that the people be allowed to say by their votes whether or not they shall be permitted to amend or alter their constitution so as to bring it up to the requirements of the day, to meet modern ideas of government and to avoid the necessity for so many recurring amendments. It is not within the province of the legislature to call a constitutional convention. You have merely to submit to a vote of the people the question of whether or not and when a convention shall b e held, prescribing in the resolution submitting the question a plan of appointment of delegates to the convention. Objectors to a convention, while with practical unanimity admitting that the present constitution is a bar to further progress and that a new one is sorely needed, contend, that the present is not a propitious time to submit the question because of the state of mind of the people, unrest, and so forth. That is tantamount to saying that the people are beside themselves, out of their mind, so to speak and cannot be trusted to decide a matter that deeply concerns them. I do not hold that view. I have confidence in the wisdom of the voters of Alabama and in their ability to properly and wisely determine the question at this time or at any other time. But for the purpose of giving ample time for reflection and deliberation it would, in my judgment, be wise to submit the question, if you do submit it, at an election to be held in the spring of 1921, the convention if the people vote for it, to be held in the summer or fall of 1922.

Please bear in mind that you are not asked to call a constitutional convention. I merely ask that you decide whether or not you will trust the people to decide the question for themselves. If you are not willing to do so that ends the matter.

If you submit the question I recommend the creation of a commission composed of, for example, thirty-five citizens of the State drawn from the worthy members of such groups of our people as the farmers, the business men, the educators, the doctors, the bankers, the bench and the bar, the press and organized labor, whose duty it would be to study comprehensively and in detail the provisions of the present constitution in the light of modern thought and conditions, in order to secure for the people of the State a constitution best suited to their needs and most conducive to their welfare.

The report of the commission should contain in detail such recommendations as to the continuance, discontinuance or modification of existing provisions or the adoption of new provisions, as the Commission from its investigations and study, shall deem advisable and prpoer. It should further contain drafts of proposed changes. The report should be submitted to the Governor not later than April 1st, 1922, and by him transmitted to the constitutional convention. It should be made a public document. The services and report of such commission would materially lessen and shorten the work of the constitutional convention, if called to convene by the people, and would afford a most valuable basis for the deliberations of that body.

"Ziron Did Us Both Good," Writes Mr. Gentry, of Norene, Tenn.

It is a well-known medical fact, that iron is a necessary constituent of the blood, and that blood lacking iron is the cause of many troubles that only iron will cure.

Ziron, a scientific compound of iron with other valuable ingredients, is the remedy to take when your blood needs more iron, and your system requires a tonic. Ziron is mild and harmless, does not stain the teeth, and is good for children as well as adults.

Mr. P. G. Gentry, of Norene, Tenn., writes: "Ziron Iron Tonic has made good in my family. I have used it to a very great advantage to myself and my 14-year-old boy. It did us both good. I think it is a good medicine for what it is recommended."

If you are pale, weak, tired, feel down and out, take Ziron. It will put iron into your blood, and should help build you up.

Get a bottle from your druggist today, and give ZIRON a fair trial. Sold by him under a money-back guarantee.

Ask him about it. He will tell you.

SHERIFF'S FORCES CAPTURE TWO STILLS LAST WEEK

On Monday of last week Sheriff Gore, with the assistance of his deputies, went to the western part of the County to the settlement known as the Watley Town, located a still in the making of wild cat whiskey captured and destroyed the outfit, and arrested the owner and operator, a yong white woman named Ida Black age 23. The yong woman has been married and is the mother of a little boy. Her case is the first instance that has occurred in Chilton County of a woman caught operating a still.

On Tuesday the officers went into the northern part of the county on Waxahatchie Creek and destroyed a fine copper still with 1,000 gallons of beer. A 32 S.&W. pistol was found at the still. No arrests were made on this raid.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Alabama's Telephone Service Needs

The Company has 3,000 unfilled applications for telephone service in the state of Alabama today.

We can not furnish this service because we do not have the facilities. During 1919 our forecast for 1920 warned us to expect and prepare for this demand. This we did.

During 1919 adequate facilities to meet the 1920 service demand were planned, the necessary money arranged for, their immediate construction authorized and orders for material and equipment placed with the manufacturers.

To complete this 1920 construction program for Alabama, now under way, requires the expenditure of $1,431,000.00.

Until these orders are filled, sufficient facilities to supply this service can not be provided.

The demand for service continues to grow.

Modern conditions and business methods have made telephone service a basic unit of commerce.

As the population and business of the country grow, the need for telephone service grows.

No one doubts that the population and business of Alabama will continue to grow.

Our forecast for the next five years' service requirements show that, at the end of 1925, there will be a net gain of 19,100 telephones in this state.

These forecasts are based upon population, present and prospective, and an analysis of business conditions, present and prospective. The Company's present plant in Alabama was built upon such forecasts, and experience has proven their accuracy.

To meet the almost certain demand for telephone service in Alabama during the next five years (in addition to the 1920 construction program now underway), plant must be installed and expenditures must be made as follows

Five-Year Program of Construction, State of Alabama

	Telephone Installations	Telephone Disconnections	Net Gain	Total No. of Telephones	Construction Cost
1921	8,900	5,400	3,500	59,146	$1,415,825
1922	9,800	6,100	3,700	62,846	1,484,624
1923	10,800	7,000	3,800	66,646	1,564,624
1924	12,000	8,000	4,000	70,646	1,422,424
1925	13,000	8,900	4,100	74,746	1,850,424
Total 1921-'25	54,500	35,400	19,100	74,746	$7,837,921

These amounts are subject to increase in the amount we fall short of completing the 1920 program.

In no other way can this service be furnished. The necessary facilities do not exist; they must be built.

They must be built in advance of their actual need; in no other way can there be a "readiness to serve."

To complete this five-year construction program requires:

Fundamental engineering so that these additions and extensions, when finished, can be co-ordinated with the present plant and the whole operated efficiently and economically. This the Company has done.

New buildings and additions to present buildings planned and working specifications prepared. This the Company has done.

Orders for the necessary telephone material and equipment must be placed with the manufacturers, and contracts for construction of the buildings made. This the Company will do as soon as it can secure the money needed to pay the costs of the construction.

The money needed to complete the 1920 construction has been secured.

The money needed for the 1921 and following years' construction has not been secured. Twelve months' time is required to construct the facilities needed to meet the known 1921 service demand; assuming that the necessary material and equipment are promptly delivered.

The present manufacturing and transportation conditions make it imperative for the orders for this material and equipment to be placed without delay. The service demand for 1921 can not possibly be met except by authorizing theh 1921 construction program and placing orders for the necessary material and equipment at once. This the Company can not do now because it has no money available for this work.

These extensions and additions must be paid for out of the capital account of the Company; they are never paid for out of the earnings of the Company. If for no other reason, because the earnings of the Company are not sufficient.

The entire net earnings of the Company in Alabama for the past four years are less by $558,000.00 than the cost of the additions and extensions needed in Alabama for 1921 alone.

The money for new construction must come from the people who are willing to invest their money in this Company's business; in no other way can it be had.

The figures given were prepared in the ordinary routine conduct of this Company's business, and were taken from the records of the Company.

They give you a true picture of the telephone situation in Alabama.

The situation is as much yours as it is the Company's.

The responsibility is as much yours as it is the Company's.

If you are to have adequate telephone service during 1921, and during the immediate subsequent years you must act with the Company and act now.

The next advertisement will tell you why and what you can do to insure telephone service for the immediate future.

As I pondered over it I decided that my chance meeting with Barbara Bradford in the park had upset the plans of a blackmailing band, and that they were avenging themselves on me for my unwitting part. I was certain that Wick and Lefty Moore's wife were in connivance with them, and that the gang possibly included Claire Bradford's ex-husband. Wick had a passkey that enabled him to enter the Lutan apartment. Undoubtedly he could also enter mine as well. But Wick could have nothing to do with the planting of the revolver in my rooms. I was positive about that. He had not been out of my sight for a single moment from the time that we had discovered the body. The only way that it seemed possible to involve him in that was on the theory of a prearranged plot to make me appear the murderer. Was it possible that Claire Bradford had participated in this? I knew she had been in my rooms after the murder. It must have been she who put the revolver there.

One of the detectives who had arrested me appeared at my cell door.

"Come along," he commanded gruffly.

As I came out I was again shackled and led to the patrol wagon that was waiting. I had supposed that I was being taken to court to be arraigned, but such was not the case. I found myself at police headquarters, where both my photograph and my fingerprints were taken. I refrained from giving any information about myself, beyond giving my name and age, being careful to have my name recorded as John S. Nelson. Out in my home town everybody for years had known me by my middle name "Spaulding," and I was hopeful that they might fail to identify me if they read anything about me.

When everything that might serve to identify me had been recorded, I was taken into a large room where perhaps half a hundred men were assembled, most of them wearing masks. I looked about with curiosity. I had read of this ceremony. I was being "lined up" before the members of the city's detective force to see if any of them could identify me and to give them an opportunity to familiarize themselves with my features in case it should ever be necessary to arrest me again.

"Never saw him before," I heard one of them say. "Guess he must be a western crook."

"He's no amateur," said another. "That job up at the Granddeck was done by a professional."

Many slighting comments were made, too, on my personal appearance. I learned for the first time that I had a "bad ear," and that my eyes were shifty. The only emotion these comments aroused in me was a feeling of pity, not for myself but for all poor unfortunates who fall afoul of the law. Even though a man is presumed to be innocent until he has been convicted I had observed that since the first moment of my arrest everybody had taken it for granted that I must be guilty and had treated me with little respect or consideration.

From headquarters I was taken to the police court and without further delay brought before a magistrate.

"John S. Nelson, arrested for the murder of Daisy Lutan," said the detective.

"Have you counsel?" asked the magistrate.

"No," I replied.

"I will assign Mr. Myers as the prisoner's counsel," he announced.

A young chap, evidently just out of law school, stepped forward, and drew me a little to one side.

"Plead 'Not guilty,'" he directed "and be careful to say nothing more."

"Of course," I replied. "I'm not guilty. I had nothing to do with it."

I could see by his face that he did not believe me and as I turned again to the court I made up my mind that even if the court had assigned him as my counsel I would tell him nothing.

"How do you plead?" asked the court.

"Not guilty," I replied.

"Remanded without bail for further examination until Thursday morning," snapped the court, and I was led back into an anteroom, Mr. Myers and the detective accompanying me. The latter there surrendered me to some official, presumably a prison keeper.

"Looks pretty bad for you," said Myers, as we were left alone for consultation.

"I suppose it does look that way," I laughed.

"No chance to make it self-defense," he went on, plainly amazed at my manner. "No jury'd ever stand for a burglar shooting in self-defense."

"No," I admitted, "I suppose they wouldn't. Fortunately I'm no burglar."

"If we could make out it was a lovers' quarrel," he suggested.

"If I had ever known Miss Lutan," I admitted, "that might not make a bad defense."

"Look here," he replied indignantly, "young fellow, you are up against it harder than you seem to realize. They've got the goods on you, and it'll be the chair for yours if you're not careful. You've got no chance proving an alibi."

"Why not? I never saw Miss Lutan until I saw her body in her rooms. I never was in her rooms until I went in there with Mr. Wick after we had heard the shot. What's more, I never owned a revolver in my life and never saw the one the detectives found until they pulled it out of my dresser drawer."

Incredulously he listened. I could see that he did not believe a word I was saying.

"You don't look like a dope fiend, either," he observed scathingly.

"Look here," I retorted, "it is bad enough to have the police take it for granted that I am a criminal and a murderer, but when the counsel the court assigns me starts out on the same course, we quit right now. I'll get a lawyer of my own when I need one."

"I'll come around this afternoon and see you again," he said coolly. "A few hours in the Tombs will make you see things differently."

A few minutes later I found myself ensconced in a cell again, still confident of my speedy release, but somewhat puzzled as to what would be my best method of procedure. I was unacquainted with any lawyers; in fact, with any one in the whole city with whom I could consult. My immediate hope lay in my friend, Detective Gorman. There was nothing for me to do but to wait until I heard from him.

Fortunately I had had the forethought when the detectives were arresting me to take from its hiding-place in the bookcase my little hoard of money. This enabled me to send out of the prison and have a luncheon brought in. Making myself as comfortable as possible, I sat down to wait for Gorman, occupying my mind meanwhile with thinking of Barbara Bradford.

The thing uppermost in my mind was how to prevent her from being in any way involved. She must never know that only by her testimony would I be able to prove an alibi. Should she ever realize this, I knew that her sense of justice would make her come forward and tell the truth, even though it meant the loss of her own reputation and the scandalizing of all her acquaintances. She must not be permitted to talk.

She must not even try to see me while I was in prison.

The one way—the only way—I saw by which I could escape from the law's toils without implicating her was through the speedy rounding up of the band of criminals who I was positive were responsible for Miss Lutan's murder as well as for all our troubles. I was relying on Gorman to do this.

A keeper's voice interrupted my chain of thought.

"You're wanted down in the counsel room," he said. "There is a visitor for you."

"A visitor," I cried excitedly. "Who is it?" I thought of course it must be Gorman come to my rescue.

"It's your sister," he announced.

My sister! A thrill shot through me at his announcement. I knew of course it could not be my sister. Both of them were mere children far away in the West. It must be Barbara.

I Stood There Astounded. It Was Not Barbara; It Was Her Sister Claire.

Undoubtedly she had resorted to this ruse to make sure of seeing me while at the same time concealing her own identity.

Overjoyed at her coming, delighted to know that I had read her heart aright and that my confidence in her trust in me was justified, I hastened with the keeper to meet her.

Delighted as I was at her coming, I was formulating in my mind how best to make it clear to her that she must leave at once and that no matter what happened she must keep her lips closed about the events of last night. Under no circumstances would I permit her to sacrifice herself to save me.

In the counsel room a veiled figure awaited me. I sprang forward eagerly toward her. The woman standing there put up one hand in a repelling gesture and then flung back her veil. I stood there astounded. It was not Barbara. It was her sister Claire.

CHAPTER X.

For a full minute Claire Bradford and I stood there observing each other. Even before a word was spoken I think we both sensed our mutual distrust. As I studied her, I was trying to conjecture what could have been the motive so impelling that she had dared to come even within prison walls to see me. Had Barbara sent her? I doubted it. I was sure that more than likely her visit was to plead with me to keep silent about her part in the tragedy. I was certain she was going to ask me to pledge my word to tell no one of her second visit to the Gaston apartment.

Yet as I studied her weak, beautiful face, so like Barbara's and yet so different, with its sensuous mouth and roving, brilliant eyes, I still was wondering how it was possible for a girl of her refinement and social position to have become enmeshed with such common criminals as the two employees of the Granddeck, Wick and the telephone girl.

"To what am I indebted for the honor of this visit," I asked at length, adding with some sarcasm, "from my sister?"

Never for a second had I imagined that other than a selfish motive could have brought her thither, and the conversation that followed was all the more surprising to me on that account.

"I had to say I was your sister," she answered quickly. "I wanted to be sure of seeing you and I did not wish anyone to recognize me. You know, I believe, who I am?"

"You are Barbara's sister," I replied.

"That's why I came," she cried, "for Barbara's sake. I have come to plead with you for her."

"To plead—with me—for her," I echoed in astonishment.

"Yes," she cried passionately. "She's young. She's little more than a child. She did not realize what she was doing. You must not let anyone know you even know her. You must never, never tell."

"Never tell what?" I answered noncommittally.

She answered with a convulsive sob. I thought for a little that she was going to break down completely. Her manner and the pallor of her face attracted the attention of the keeper who was in the room with us, and he started forward as if expecting her to fall in a faint. Resolutely she pulled herself together and went on in calmer tones.

"Oh, I know all about it. I know that she is completely fascinated by you. I know that she has been meeting you in the park. I know that she has lunched with you at the Astor." She hesitated and her face crimsoned—"I know that she has even visited you in your rooms late at night. Oh, please, please, I beg of you, if there is a spark of manhood in you, do not take advantage of a silly girl's weakness. Please help me protect my little sister's name; promise—you will, won't you?"

"Why should I?" I replied carelessly, repressing my desire to leap at once to Barbara's defense and explain how pure and honorable her conduct had been and how lofty the motive that had governed her actions. Tempted though I was to defend her, I realized that this might be an opportunity to learn something of Claire Bradford's associates, and I determined to make the most of it. How else could she know of all my meetings with Barbara unless she was in league with the persons who had been having me shadowed? How the knowledge that Barbara had been in my apartment could have come to her was a mystery beyond me. I would have sworn that that was a secret sacred to our two selves.

"Listen to me," she commanded, speaking in low tones, "Barbara is my baby sister, innocent of the ways of the world. I must save her from herself, and her heedlessness. Never, never, if I can help it, shall she suffer the agony and shame and disgrace that I have known. Years ago I, just as she is now, became infatuated with a man far below me in the social scale. He, too, was a criminal."

I sniffed indignantly at the "he, too," but she paid no attention.

"I ran away from school and married him and learned too late that he had a wife and child already. All my life, ever since, that terrible thing has followed me. It's like a specter ever rising to confront me. Even if I have to kill you, I am going to save my little sister from following in my steps."

"Where is Gaston Maurice now?" I asked. "Have you seen him recently?"

She gasped and shuddered, looking at me incredulously.

"You," she breathed excitedly, "who are you? How do you know his name?"

"Never mind how I know it," I replied. "What I want to know is where is he now? When did you see him last?"

"Not for years—not since long before my father's death—not since the marriage was annulled."

"Nor heard from him," I persisted.

"No, nor heard from him," she hesitated, "unless—"

"Unless what?" I insisted, as she stopped abruptly.

"I can't tell you," she said firmly. "I don't know. They must have come from him, from someone that knew—the letters."

"What letters? Tell me about them."

"I can't tell what I don't know. I haven't the least idea where Gaston Maurice is. I had hoped he was dead in the war. Yet he can't be. I have had anonymous letters threatening me. They must have come from him or from someone whom he told of our marriage? How else could they know?"

Her distress was so real and her manner so convincing that I decided that she must be telling the truth.

"Well," said I, "if you cannot tell me where to find Gaston Maurice there is one thing that you can tell me."

"What is that?"

"Why did you visit my apartment late last night? Why did you put that revolver in my dresser?"

"Revolver," she queried in a puzzled tone, "what revolver?"

"The revolver with which Miss Lutan was killed."

She eyed me in shocked surprise.

"Why do you say this to me? I never saw the revolver."

"You cannot deny that you were in my apartment last night.'"

"But the revolver," she protested. "What do you mean by that? I know nothing of any revolver."

"Last night, a few minutes after Miss Lutan was murdered," I said sternly, "some man or woman entered

"You Cannot Deny That You Were in My Apartment Last Night."

my rooms and placed a revolver with one chamber discharged in the dresser in my bedroom. It was evidently placed there for the purpose of throwing suspicion on me, of making me out the murderer. The detectives found it there and arrested me. If you did not enter my apartment to hide the revolver, why then were you there?"

"I knew nothing about the murder," she answered irrelevantly, "until this morning—until I read about it in the papers."

"What about Wick?" I hurled at her. "Didn't Wick tell you?"

"Wick," she repeated in a puzzled way. "Oh, Mr. Wick, the superintendent. No, I have not seen him for several days."

"Did you do nothing yesterday at his direction?"

"How absurd! Of course not."

"Why, then, did you go into my rooms?"

She looked at me with a frightened face, and her manner became more confused.

"I really believe you are trying to implicate me in your crime," she ejaculated. "It's absurd for you to try to question me this way."

"Lady," interrupted the keeper, "you'll have to be going now. Time's up."

"Promise me," she begged hastily in an undertone, as she departed, "whatever you think about me, you'll keep my sister out of it."

"I'll promise nothing, unless you confess everything," I repeated, determined, if I could, to drag her secret from her, even though I, as well as she, was eager to shield Barbara's name.

Claire Bradford's attitude, I must confess, puzzled me greatly. Her denial that she had seen the revolver, or that she had been working in conjunction with Wick seemed to ring true, and I was also inclined to believe her statement that she knew nothing of her former husband's present whereabouts. While I was pondering over her statements, my cell door opened and Gorman was let in.

"Well, young fellow," he said, "this sleuthing business didn't turn out exactly the way we expected it to, did it?"

"You don't think I'm guilty, do you?"

I waited in agony for his answer. If he failed me, there was no one, absolutely no one, to whom I could turn.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Unappreciative Guest.

Ralph, three years old, was spending the day with his aunt. Thinking a custard would appeal to him, she inquired if he liked them, at which he answered: "Oh, my, yes." However upon being served it fell short of his expectations. He ate a little and passing it to his aunt said: "You can have it Aunt Myra. I am so full, and if you want some water to wash it down, here's my glass."

TRAGEDY TURNS INTO ROMANCE

Chief Figures in Sensational Episode in Chicago Are Quietly Married.

COMES AS SURPRISE

Man and Woman Were Prominently Mentioned in One of the Most Remarkable Tragedies of the Year—Both Exonerated.

Chicago.—Ruth Wood, twenty-five-year-old bookkeeper, who was found leaning over the dead body of Samuel T. A. Loftis, wealthy diamond broker, in his palatial North side apartment, was married two weeks later in Waukegan to Roy M. Shayne, advertising salesman, whose name was linked with hers in the widely heralded tragedy.

The marriage comes a surprise to both relatives and friends of the couple. They made no announcement of their intentions, but slipped quietly from the city.

The first announcement came in a telegram to Miss Wood's mother:

"We are married. Both very happy. On our way to a quiet resting place," the message read. It was signed "Roy and Ruth."

Romance Old—Yet Young.

The romance of the pair is scarcely two months old—and yet has lasted over a decade of years. Then Roy Shayne was manager of his father's business, the John T. Shayne company, dealers in furs. Ruth was a typist, barely out of school. She worked for the firm and Shayne became attracted to her.

Later she left his employ and for ten years did not see him. Then, some weeks ago, the fates which had decreed their participation in one of the most sensational "stories" of the year brought them together again. They met at the Edgewater Beach hotel, where Ruth was employed.

Shayne became devoted to her, and met her daily at her home. He introduced her to Samuel T. A. Loftis, Leaning Over the Dead Body.

wealthy diamond dealer. That night they announced their engagement at a dinner given by Loftis.

Girl Met Loftis by Appointment.

Six days later Loftis called Miss Wood at the hotel.

"Come to my apartment. I want to talk to you about Roy's future," was his message. Miss Woods went. Loftis met her at the door dressed only in pajamas. Drinks followed. Five hours later Shayne, awaiting her arrival at her mother's home, received a phone call. It was Ruth.

"Come and get me. I am at Loftis' home! And hurry!" was the message. Shayne went.

An hour later officers came rushing to the house. Loftis lay dead on the floor. Shayne was awaiting. Miss Wood had fled.

Shayne refused at first to tell her name—but finally consented. Both were arrested. Both were grilled. Both obtained "scare heads" in the papers and both faced the searching glances of officials and spectators at a coroner's jury. Their story was a 24-hour sensation of Chicago. And both were exonerated.

Babe's Appeal Touches Father.

New Castle, Pa.—Contentment prevails in the home of Betty Jane Reno, and her brothers, Jack and Ralph, at New Castle, Pa.

Mr. Reno, who was in Cleveland, read Betty's letter to the paper, and was touched by the appeal. "I was just going to work," he wrote home to his wife, "and saw Betty's letter in the paper. I simply couldn't work. I had no idea how the kiddies would suffer."

He forwarded a money order with the letter, and stated that he would return and "play square" with the family he had deserted.

Mayors Discuss Mutual Affairs.

Anniston.—Mayors of three Calhoun cities discussed the problems in their several towns before the Rotary club here. Mayor J. L. Wikle, of Anniston, Mayor D. C. Cooper, of Oxford, and Mayor C. W. Saunders, of Jacksonville, were the three Rotarian speakers, each telling what he has to contend with in the conduct of affairs in his town. Mayor Stewart, of Piedmont, was to have spoken also but was prevented from being present.

Choctaw Is Prosperous.

Tuscaloosa.—A. J. Gilder has returned from a trip to Choctaw County, where he went to visit his father. He says the corn crop of that section is fine, but the boll weevils have gotten most of the cotton. However, he says the county is in a more prosperous condition than it ever was before, on account of its vast timber interests.

• • • •

Calhoun Farmers Meet.

Anniston.—Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Allgood and M. J. Cliett, of Childersburg were the principal speakers at the mass meeting of Calhoun County farmers held here. WILSON REFUSES MINERS' REQUEST

PRESIDENT WILL NOT REOPEN ANTHRACITE WAGE FOR MINERS

RECALLS PREVIOUS WARNING

Declines To Reconvene The Joint Scales Committee Of Miners And Operators

Washington.—President Wilson refused to reopen the anthracite wage award as requested by anthracite miners, many of whom are on an unauthorized strike.

The refusal was made in a letter to the joint scale committee of miners and operators.

The president reminded the miners that this government had fought Germany and had refused to recognize Russia because those governments could not keep their words. He indicated the same procedure would be followed toward the miners who, he said, failed to live up to their contracts.

The president also recalled that he had warned the miners not to strike and that he had replied to threats to do so with a statement that their challenge would be accepted. He said that they had gone on a "vacation" notwithstanding this warning and told them the "vacation" amounted to a strike.

The president's letter, after acknowledging the miners' telegram, thanks the miners representatives on the scale committee for acting promptly in wrting a new wage scale based on the award of the anthracite coal commission. The letter continues: "You ask me to convene the joint scale committee of anthracite operators and miners for the purpose of adjusting certain inequalities which you assert exist ni the award of the anthracite coal commission. In that connection your attention is called to a telegram which I sent to Enoch Williams and others in reply to a telegram I received from them stating that the anthraciet miners would refrain from working unless I set aside the award of the anthracite coal commission on or before September 1. In that telegram I said: 'If your communication declaring your intention to refrain from working unless I set aside the award of the anthracite coal commission on or before September 1, 1920, is intended as a threat, you can rest assured that your challenge will be accepted and that the people of the United States will find some substitute fuel to tide over until the real sentiment of the anthracite mine workers can find expression and they are ready to abide by the obligations they have entered into.'

"Notwithstanding the plain warning contained in that telegram, which was given wde publicity, the majority of the anthracite coal miners, following the leadership of these men, have refrained from working, under the guise of taking a vacation. In doing so they have not deceived anyone, not even themselves. When a body of men collectively refrain from working by mutual understanding, however arrived at, it is a strike, no matter what name may be given to it. Our people have fought a great war and made untold sacrifices to insure among other things that a solemn agreement shall not be considered a mere scrap of paper. We have declined to entr einto no more friendly relations with governments which boast of readiness to violate treaties whenever it suits their own convenience, and under these circumstances we could not look the world in the face or justify our action to our own people or to our own conscience if we yielded one iota to the men in the anthracite coal fields who are violating hte contract so recently entered into between themsilves, the coal operators and the government of the United States.

"I appreciate the earnestness of your efforts to get the men to return to work and comment your stand in support of the obligation of your contract, which all men must honor, but for reasons statde above I regret that I cannot grant your request to reconvene the joint scale committee of miners and operators."

Crime By Suicide Equals Conviction

Austin, Texas.—Confession to a crime, followed by suicide of the confessed criminal, istantamount toa conviction, the attorney general's department held in effect in an opinion which declared that Sheriff Goodall of Kent county should receive the reward offered by the state for "the arrest and conviction of a man" accused of murder, who was alleged to have confessed to the crime and killed himself after being apprehended by the sheriff.

45c A Pound Is The Cost Of Cotton

Austin, Texas.—The average cost of producing cotton in Texas during 1920 has been fixed at 46 cents a pound by a committee of the Texas Farmers' institute, in session here, in a report to be submitted to the institute. The production price is said to be based upon cost figures submitted by farmers. The committee report recommends a holding price of 18 cents a pound

LABOR MAY SAVE M'SWINEY

Talk Of World-Wide Boycott On British Goods In Retaliation For Treament Of MacSwiney

London.—British labor, six and one-half million strong, has taken its stand against the government in the MacSwiney test, as Irish Republicans exhort the whole world to help them in their fight by striking at Great Britain's pocket book through a financial, economic and industrial boycott.

The great Portsmouth conference of 950 delegates, representing six million five hundred thousand workers, passed a resolution reminding the government that organized labor would hold it responsible for MacSwiney's death, should he die.

MacSwiney's wife has addressed an appeal to sympathizers with the Irish cause, the world over, to take part in an economic boycott against Great Britain.

MacSwiney Rejects Food

Each day as the fast of Lord Mayor MacSwiney in Brixton prison progresses there is staged by the bedside of the dying man a tragic little act, which has been disclosed to the press by Father Dominick, chaplain to the mayor.

Every morning food in some form or another is brought in by the prison authorities and offered to the starving prisoner in the hope that his almost uncontrollable craving will master him and that he will bc tempted to eat. Every morning there is the same end to the act—MacSwiney, who is too weak to utter a spoken refusal, crushes his desire and turns his head away. So it has gone on until the twenty-fifth day of his hunger strike.

There have been many rumors that MacSwiney was being given sustenance in drinking water or otherwise. This is indignantly denied by relatives and friends. Father Dominic says:

FARMERS ARE MENACED BY THE LOFTY PRICES OF FARMING IMPLEMENTS

There Has Been An Advance Of Seventy-Five Per Cent In Cost Of Farming Machinery

Washington.—Declaring prices of farm implements to have been increased without warrant through "concerted action" of manufacturers and dealers, the federal trade commission in a report made public recommends reopening of anti-trust proceedings against the International Harvester company and institution of judicial proceedings against implement manufacturers and dealers.

The commission declares its investigation, which was ordered by the senate, disclosed that in the period between 1914 and 1918 the prices paid by farmers for implements advanced 73 per cent with greater portion of the increase coming in 1917 and 1918. The increase, the commission asserts, was larger than warranted by the advances in the costs and expenses of the manufacturers and dealers, and resulted in unusually large profits.

Notwithstanding the increase, the farmers of the country, according to the commission's report, "were not prevented from making as much profit as before, because the prices of farm products increased to an even greater extent."

THREE TOURISTS KILLED IN CAVE OF THE WINDS UNDER NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls.—Two women and a man were crushed to death and two men were injured when a slide of shade forced out a bridge leading to one of the stairways in the cave of the winds under Niagara Falls. A hundred or more tourists who were in the cave at the time, had narrow escapes, many being bruised and cut by the falling rock.

Toledo To Vote Car Bond Issue

Toledo, Ohio.—Another chapter in Toledo's long street car fight will be written November 2 when voters will pass upon an isue of $7,000,000 in city bonds for a municipal transportation system of street cars and motor busses and also on a propositoin to grant the present company a twenty-five-year franchisce on the cost-plus plan, similar to that adopted by Cleveland.

Trolley Cars Collide In Niagara Gorge

Niagara Falls.—Seven persons were injured in a collision of two trains of trolley cars in the Niagara gorge; none seriously A break in the trolley line caused the train to stall, and passengers jumped when they saw another train bearing down upon them.

Train Crews Quit Because Of "Cut"

Little Rock, Ark.—All train crews of the Memphis, Dallas and Gulf railway, from Hot Springs to Texarkana, have quit work as the result of a 10% reduction in wages.

Covington Man Killed In Wrangle

Covington, Ga.—Boyce Wander, a very prominent young man of this city, was shot and killed following what is said to have been a domestic wrangle. T. E. Webb, an employee of a local oil mil, is in jail charged with the killing. Considerable excitement followed the shooting, but within a very short time everything quieted down. Wander is survived by his wife, three children, father and mother and one sister. It is not known what the domestic wrangle was about.

SITUATION IN EAST GROWING SERIOUS

POLES AND LITHUANIANS FIGHTING SPASMODICALLY ACROSS THE FRONTIER

POLES CAPTURE 200 MEN

Peace League To Take Up Arbitration Application — Officials Of League "Up In The Air"

Warsaw.—Conditions along the Lithuanian front are becoming more serious daily, and, according to latest reports, the Poles and Lithuanians are fighting spasmodically across the improvised frontier. In one action two Lithuanian officers and 200 men were captured by the Poles.

German and Russian Bolsheviki are aiding the Lithuanians, it is contended by the Polish authorities. Reports reaching army headquarters state that Leon Trotzky, Russian Bolsheviki minister of war and marine, has ordered Soviet troops to help the Lithuanians to drive the Poles out of that country. The latter, however, contend that they have not crossed the demarcation line fixed by the allies.

It is contended by the Poles that the Germans and Bolsheviki planned to use Lithuania as a corridor connecting Russia and East Prussia. Reports have been received which seem to indicate that German military and commercial interests have combined with the Bolsheviki to encourage Lithuanians to wage war against Poland.

London.—Poland's application for arbitration of her territorial dispute with Lithuania will be taken up by the league of nations at the meeting of the council in Paris on September 16, it is learned.

So far as can be learned officials of the league are not inclined to sympathize with Poland, pointing out that country has not conformed to its league obligations, and has taken the initiative in the Russo-Polish hostilities. The political department of the league already has started an investigation.

USE OF NATURAL ROCKS TO INCREASE CROP YIELDS IS URGED ON THE FARMERS

Employment of Natural Rocks In Pulverized Form A Great Fertilizing Agency Open To Farmers

Chicago.—The natural rocks, such as lime, gypsum, phosphate and potash shales can be made to afford a permanent soil fertility system, according to Dr. William Crocker, professor of plant physiology of the University of Chicago, who recently addressed delegates from all sections of the country, meeting to form the Associated Natural Soil Fertility Resources.

"By employing these natural rocks in a pulverized form, the farmer can readily increase his crops' yields," said Doctor Crocker.

Among other speakers were Virgil G. Lanier, Jacksonville, Fla.; Davis Gray, Columbia, Tenn., and C. A. Weller, Knoxville, Tenn.

Reunion To Be Held At Columbia, S. C.

Columbia, S. C.—Plans for entertaining the several thousand veterans of the Wildcat (81st) division, who will hold their first reunion here September 20-21, are rounding into shape in a very gratifying manner to the several committees who have charge of the entertainment of the city's honored guests. Never have the women of Columbia been more thoroughly organized for a task, not even in war times, when things were systematized down to the most minute detail, than they are for the part they are to take in entertaining the wildcats. Already former members of the division from twenty-five states have notified the secretary of the association of their intention to be present. The citizens of Columbia are determined that there shall be absolutely no cost to the visitors at any time, or at any place. Besides entertaining these guests in their homes, the citizens of Columbia are expending the sum of $25,000 for various kinds of entertainment.

Admiral H. S. Knapp Recalled To Duty

Washington.—Orders recalling to active duty Rear Admiral Harry S. Knapp, retired, formerly commander-in-chief of the American naval forces in European waters, to serve as "senior United States navy representative in Haiti," have been announced by the navy department. While naval officials decline to indicate the exact duties assigned to Admiral Knapp, it is understood they will be of special and temporary nature. Admiral Knapp retired last June, after relinquishing the European command.

Burned To Death By Cigarette Stub

San Antonio, Texas.—Mannie Guggenheim of Greenville, Miss., was burned to death here when his bed clothing was ignited from a lighted cigarette stub, which, it is presumed, he was smoking when he fell asleep. Guggenheim, alone in the room of a local hotel, fought the flames desperately until overcome, thus preventing their spread to adjoining rooms. His heroic work, after his carelessness, undoubtedly saved the lives of many of the guests of the hotel and prevented property loss.

MANY KILLED IN EARTHQUAKE

Great Property Damage Done In Upheaval Of Earth—Tower Of Pisa Perceptibly Oscillates

Rome, Italy.—Over two thousand persons are dead and many more injured as the result of earthquakes in Tuscany, according to scattering reports reaching here.

The towns of Villacolle and Mandina, in the province of Massae Carrara, was entirely destroyed and the population of two thousand completely wiped out. Twenty were known to have been killed there and many others injured.

At Gallinara, in the province of Pisa, fifty-seven bodies had been recovered at last reports from the ruins.

The earthquake in northern Italy was of a violent nature, says later dispatches. Villa Collemandina is reported to have been destroyed. Castiflione, Pieve Fosciano, Vaglia Camporgiano, San Domingo, Piazza Alserchio, Poggio, Castegnola, Foscjendora and Canigiano have been badly damaged. The dead and injured are numerous, though the number is not yet estimated. Assitance is being sent to the scenes of the disaster.

Villa Collemandina is a small town of about two thousand inhabitants in the province of Massae Carara.

A dispatch from Pisa says the earthquake shock there was preceded by deep rumblings and followed by vertical and horizontal earth tremors, lasting for thirteen seconds.

The popultaoin ,terror-stricken, fled from their homes, the women and children shouting and weeping. A mabut a majority of the people fled to the fields.

The hands of the clock in the tower stopped at 7:35 o'clock in the morning. Bells in the various steeples were set ringing by the disturbance. Persons who happened to be in Cathedral square in Pisa say they saw the famous leaning tower perceptibly oscillate.

Electric wires were short circuited in various buildings. St. Michael's church and St. Matthew's church were considerably damaged. Other church buildings suffered less seriously.

A dispatch from Milan says the earthquake there did not cause any panic among the population, but the prisoners in the jail mutinied, insisting that their cells be opened so they might not die in the ruins of the building if it should fall. Soldiers were hurriedly caled out and finally established order.

News by way of London, England, says the town of Fivizzano, 34 miles northwest of Luccia, has been completely demolished by an earthquake, and adds that Solero and Monte were badly wrecked.

UNITED STATES HAS BEGUN PROBE OF THE NATIONS' DISARMAMENT

Washington.—Informal investigation has ben started by the United States government of the progress being made by the nations of the world in the movement for universal disarmament.

Inasmuch as control of armaments was made one of the objects of the league of nations, the inquiry into the movement for universal disarmament has developed, officials say, into an investigation of the present status of the armament control clauses of the league of nations covenant.

Without having taken up the main problem of a radical and general disarmament of nations, the league of nations, according to reports received here in official circles, has begun the organization of machinery for solving the problem. Preliminary investigation and study of the league have commenced and some subbsidiary phases of the main problem such as the control to the manufacture of munitions and of the use of gas in warfare already have been discussed with a view of reaching a universal agreement.

Warren Delano Killed By Locomotive

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Warren Delano of New York and Barrytown, uncle of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic vice presidential nominee, was instantly killed at the Barrytown station of the New York Central rialroad, twenty-one miles from here, to the north,

No Request To Expel Constantine Made

Geneva.—Official request for the expulsion of former King Constantine from Switzerland has not as yet been received from Athens by the Swiss government, according to information received from Berne. Reports that such a request had been forwarded to Berne have been received here recently. Constantine, who is staying at Lucerne, denounced the attempt by the present Greek government to have him expelled from Switzerland in a telegram to the press.

Exhibition Of Paper Clothing Made

Washington.—Paper clothing and other articles made from paper in Austrian factories have been placed on exhibition by the department of commerce. Later the exhibit will be offered to clothing and other interested manufacturers for examination. The exhibits includes workmen's suits, a table cover, collars and cuffs, a laundry bag and a wall decoration. One paper suit is quoted at 32 crowns or about 15 cents in United States currency, while another costs 120 crowns, or about 55 cents.

We want to call your attention to the straw vote to be taken next week by Mr. Smith, Manager of the Ideal Theatre, Clanton, in connection with 5,000 other theatres in the United States, see announcement and details elsewhere, and be sure every voter, including the ladies, cast a vote in this straw ballot.

The counting will be accurately done, compiled and results published in the columns as well as flashed on the screen of above theatre. The figures will be sent to headquarters, who in turn will furnish us total figures from the ballot of the entire nation, which we will also publish.

Be sure to cast a ballot which will be handled confidentially as for as each individual is concerned.

THE UNION-BANNER

VOL. IX. CLANTON, ALA., SEPT. 23, 1920. NUMBER 26.

Move Started to Drain Swamps Near Clanton

Application Will Be Made by Property Owners to Have Survey of Drainage District Made and Cost of Drain Ditch Estimated.

Last Monday a small group of property owners who have holdings in the swamps on the outskirts of Clanton met at the court house and initiated a movement that will finally result in the biggest advance step that has ever been undertaken in this county in the way of farm improvement.

As is well known to everyone who has any knowledge of the country surrounding Clanton, there is a vast acreage of the very richest kind of land that lies in the creek swamps and has been for all time too wet for cultivation. It is to all practical purposes worthless, and the only place where it ever takes any recognition is on the tax assessments. There are hundreds of acres of this land in radius of two miles of Clanton, and it is the richest land in Chilton County.

The natural situation of Clanton makes it practically surrounded by these swamps. The creek that flows eastward along the north side of town and that one which flow eastward on the south side of us, join their lazy meandering waters just on the east side of the town. All along their pathway is stretched many many acres of rich flat lands that hold the waters of the streams and prevent all except a very small bit of drainage.

A short while ago a few of our interested property holders began to look into the matter of getting these lands reclaimed from their former useless state and put into a state of cultivation. As a result of the first efforts in this matter an engineer from the U. S. Drainange investigation department was secured to come here and look over the proposition and give a discussion of the case in the light of what might be possible to do in the premises. This engineer, Mr. Hart, was here all day Monday, going over the territory of what may constitute the drainage district. At the meeting on Monday afternoon Mr. Hart took up the entire proposition in a general way and outlined the manner and the method by which work of this kind may be done under the provisions of the state law now existing in Alabama.

After the discussion was over and those present had asked Mr. Hart various questions about whatever phases of the work they desired, it was voted unanimously that the body then and there set out in the process of getting the drainige work under way. J. D. Collins, W. W. Fox and P. D. Wilson were elected as a committee to have the proper papers fixed up in order to comply with the law governing the process. Every property owner that was present was enthusiastic and there are others who will be vitally interested though they may not have been present at the meeting.

It is estimated that it will cost from $15 to $20 an acre to dig a drainage ditch through all this land and carry away all the surplus water, making the lands ready for cultivation as soon as they can be cleared of the timber. The soil in these swamps is from one to five or six feet deep and when properly drained will produce 50 or 75 bushels of corn per acre without a bit of fertilizer. And sugar cane, oh my! Mr. Fox says it will make more lasses than you could ever get made up on our present style of cane mills.

If these swamps are drained (and they surely will be) Clanton would be benefitted a hundred per cent from the action. Instead of being a town bounded down on all sides by quagmires and frog ponds we would be a thriving city surrounded by acres of the very finest land in Alabama that would sell at $100 to $150 per acre just as fast as you could change your money.

We call on the business men of Clanton here and now to encourage this movement. Talk it over among yourselves and discuss it with the men who own the lands. It is now started and let us keep it alive till the job is done.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE OCTOBER 7 AND 8

County Superintendent of Education, Howard L. Foshee, has been informed by the State Department of Education that October 7 and 8 have been set for the date of the Chilton County Teachers Institute for this year. The place of holding the Institute will be the Chilton County High School Building.

It is suggested by the State Department that all the District School Trustees of the county be present at the Institute on the closing day at the eleven o'clock hour. The purpose of having the trustees present is in order to have an opportunity to discuss with them some of the problems that are now confronting the cause of education. This discussion with the trustees will be made by a representative of the State Department of Education and the county superintendent. It will be a valuable and very helpful thing for the trustees.

All white teachers of the county are expected to attend all the sessions of the institute on these two days, October 7 and 8.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The regular services of this church will be held on Sunday morning at 11 and evening at 7:45. Preaching by the pastor.

The Sunbeam Band will meet at 2:30 P. M. Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4:00 P. M. and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 7.

At the close of the morning service the church conference will be held. This is an important meeting as the officers are selected for the ensuing year, and many other important matters are to be attended to. We trust that every member as far as possible, will make an effort to be present. As members of the church in sound health and strength, unless unavoidably hindered, it is our duty, and it should be the passionate desire to be present at all the regular services of the church. Our absence helps to hinder the work and prosperity of the church. Good congregations help to make a successful church. We are each responsible for this. Everybody is welcome to these services.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

FROM BEAT NO. 11

Editor Union-Banner

I will say to the ladies of this county that I want you all to register and come to the polls and vote for the freedom of our country. Let's be a free people, as the time has come when your help is needed. It looks hard that our country is in such a fix. If the law will allow it me and Rube Jones will go to all the ladies in Beat 11 and register all the ladies of this Beat free of charge. We have made that agreement if the law will let us do that, and see that every lady in Beat 11 register that will. Let me hear from someone as soon as you can and let's be ready when the time comes.

I hope that the people of this county will look good and vote for the betterment of our country. I am ready to do all I can for the good of our country and the rising generation to come after the older ones are gone and lying silent in their graves.

I will say to the people, if they stand still and let the League of Nations come on us, we are all in bondage to other nations for all years to come. Voters, look good before you cast your ballot, no matter what you are.

JOHN S. DENNIS.

LAND FOR SALE—Farm of 76 acres, 20 acres in cultivation, 10 acres in pasture, 12 acres good rich bottom land will make 35 bu. of corn to acre; 40 acres of timber, plenty good free stone water; good dwelling house and barn and other buildings. REV. GRAHAM AND HIS WORK.

Rev. J. M. Graham, who has recently accepted the Presidency of Thorsby Institute, was in Clanton Tuesday attending to some business matters relative to his work at Thorsby. Rev. Graham, in addition to his direction of the work at the Institute, will be engaged in general educational and community welfare work throughout the County in and organization known as the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute, of which he is the Superintendent. Associated with him in this work are Rev. Lewis H. Kellar, Rev. E. W. Butler, Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, Rev. Chas. T. Rogers, and Rev. Chas. L. Fisk who compose the Board of Directors. The objects of the organization briefly stated are the development of churches, homes, schools and other phases of community life and activities. It is a definitely religious but non-sectarian movement. Rev. Graham proposes to further acquaint people of the county with his aims by an occasional article in The Union-Banner.

JIM ABBOTT—NOT JIM GRANT

In the publication of the names of the Co. Republican Executive Committee in the Union-Banner of Sept. 9th the names of W. J. Moates and Jim Grant appeared as the members from Beat 15. Mr. Moates calls our attention to this error and points out that it should have been Jim Abbott instead of Jim Grant.

The name of Mr. Grant got into this place purely by mistake. Our type-setter has become so accustomed to using the name of Mr. Grant in connection with prize watermelons, wild cat still raids and one thing and another, that it is almost second nature to think of Jim Grant as soon as the name of "Jim" is seen.

ONE VOTE AGAINST 3 MILL TAX

A citizen of school district No. 44, known as the Union Point District, was in Clanton Tuesday, and told the Editor of The Union-Banner that only one vote was cast in the district on last Monday against the three mill tax for their school. That vote, our informant stated, was cast by a man who does not own a foot of land and has two children to send to school. It seems strange to us that there are man of that kind who will vote in a way so contrary to their interests.

Mr. Tommie Taylor asks us to advertise that he has a FORD 1 TON TRUCK FOR SALE—Practically new, in first class condition. Reason for selling, going to buy a bigger truck. See him at the Clanton Produce Co.

A. F. Mims of Thorsby was in Clanton Monday for a short while.

DISTRICT SCHOOL TAX CARRIED BY GOOD VOTE

The result of the election on the three mill school tax in the Clanton School District on Monday was a vote of 211 for the proposed tax and 79 against it.

Two years ago when the district tax was first voted it was carried by only 29 majority. The greatly increased majority for it shows that its workings has won many friends for the system. Every lover of our public schools will be glad of the outcome of the election as the favorable consideration of the people for our city public school speaks very commendable for our citizenship.

REYNOLDS AND THOMPSON TO HAVE JOINT DISCUSSION OCT. 9

Judge Reynolds will go to Centerville on October 9th to engage Fritz Thompson in another joint debate on political issues of the present campaign. On the night of the 9th they will debate at Blocton. This is going to be an interesting piece of political hairpulling. We hope that an agreement will be made between the speakers in advance that Fritz must stay in the house and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. He should not be allowed to run away like he did over at Columbiana.

LEWIS EASTERLING NOW GAME WARDEN OF CHILTON COUNTY.

Lewis Easterling of Beat 16 informs us that he now holds the official designation of game warden of Chilton County. He further says that if any of the boys take a notion to go out and try their new guns on the squirrel crop before they get ripe they had better not pass his house. This not only applies to the squirrels but to all game that is protected by Alabama laws.

NEW LAW FIRM IN CLANTON

This week there appears a new card in our professional column announcing the law firm of Saxon & Pitts in Clanton. The partnership is composed of L. L. Saxon of Columbiana and Mr. Percy Pitts of Clanton. In fact, there is to be a continuation of the law partnership of Saxon & Pitts in Columbiana, where they have been practicing for the past five years. The Clanton office is merely an addition to the scope of the firm.

Both Mr. Saxon and Mr. Pitts are well known in legal circles in this part of Alabama. They will be welcomed at the Clanton bar.

WE HAVE ICE RIGHT ON.

Clanton is enjoying its usual portion of ice this week in spite of the fact that our ice plant was completely destroyed by fire early last Sunday morning. On Monday morning Mr. Wade had a car load of ice here ready for his delivery truck to make the usual rounds of the city on time. We deplore Mr. Wade's loss by the fire, and he has the thanks of the town for his promptness in taking care of his patrons by securing plenty of ice from elsewhere.

It is our information that Mr. Wade will rebuild his ice plant in Clanton, but we have not been able to confirm the report by a statement from Mr. Wade himself.

The law partnership of Atkinson & Collier, which was formed just a few weeks ago has been dissolved, and Mr. Atkinson is moving back to his same offices in the Wilson Building. He will be glad to have his friends call on him in the same offices which he occupied before forming his partnership with Mr. Collier.

DR. GRAGG WINS MAYOR'S RACE BY A SMALL MARGIN

The municipal election in the Town of Clanton on Monday was a hotly contested battle with Dr. V. J. Gragg and Attorney F. B. Collier, candidates for Mayor, leading the opposing forces. The result was in doubt down to the very last minute, when Dr. Gragg passed under the wire by a margin of only four votes.

There were eight candidates for councilmen, who received votes as follows:

Tom Kemp 234; J. Watts Moore 197; M. L. White 184; J. B. Atkinson 141; Dr. N. S. Johnson 131; T. C. McSwain 121, V J. Elmore 119; Dr. T J. Marcus 110.

The five highest will be the members of the council.

There were quite a number of ladies who took part in the election, casting their ballots for the first time in the history of Clanton.

BIG FIRE DAMAGE IN CLANTON EARLY LAST SUNDAY MORNING

The plant of the Wade Ice Company in Clanton was completely destroyed by fire at an early hour last Sunday morning. The entire plant was a total loss, together with the machinery that constituted the light plant before the coming of the Alabama Power Company to Clanton.

The fire was a very dangerous one, inasmuch as the Wade building was closely adjacent to everal store houses. The buildings occupied by Tom Kemp, McKee's Market, Western Union Telegraph Co., Ideal Theatre, Candy Store, The Boston Shoe Shop and the planing mill of the Downs Lumber Co., were threatened, and but for the splendid fire-hose of our city waterworks department, would surely have been all destroyed.

Mr. Wade carried no insurance on his plant, and his loss is estimated at about $25,000.

We have heard no theory as to how the fire might have caught.

CLANTON HAS FIRE PROTECTION

We heard a property owner in Clanton say last Sunday that when he insured his property this year the insurance company told him that they did not regard that Clanton has any fire protection in its waterworks system. We don't know, but we imagine that if you should ask Tom Kemp, Gilvey McKee or P. C. Smith, their opinion would not exactly correspond with the idea advanced by the insurance company. Clanton has got good fire protection. Anybody with half an eye can see that, and the insurance authorities should recognize the fact in fixing our rates.

CANDY KITCHEN IN CLANTON

Mr. J. P. A. Wall, former proprietor of the Chilton Cafe, and a Mr. Smith, are preparing to open up a Candy Kitchen in Clanton, probably in the Hayes Building opposite the post office.

Mr. Wall says that he is going to make candy—fine candy and lots of it. Further particulars will be announced later.

Mr. Wall is a hustler, and we are glad to have such noble fellows as him with us.

TIME TO PAY OUR TAXES.

The time is close at hand now for the annual visits of our tax officers to the various parts of the county for the purpose of assessing and collecting the state and county taxes. Their dates have already been announced as will be seen by reference to another part of this paper. They start about the first of October.

The buying public has "rebelled against ever-mounting prices and has forced a period of readjustment of values," Vice Governor Platt of the federal reserve board, declared in a speech at Charleston before the annual convention of the West Virginia Bankers' association.

A mysterious explosion, disastrous in its effect, occurred in Wall street, New York, killing more than a score of persons and injuring hundreds. Office workers were just hurrying into the street for their noonday meal when a jet of black smoke and flame rose from the center of the world's great street of finance. Then came the blast. A moment later scores of men, women and children were lying, blood-covered, on the pavements.

L. M. Adler, general manager of the Corona Coal company, was shot from ambush while riding in an automobile between Uatton and Patton Junction, Ala. Deputy Sheriff Earl Edgel and Deputy Sheriff Brown, who were in the car with Adler, were also shot to death. Governor Kilby has sent troops to Corona to help preserve order and to aid in the solution of the difficulty.

Alabama Legislature

What the State's Solons Are Doing and Undoing

Montgomery.

Governor Kilby's message to the extra session of the legislature deals primarily with the necessity for removing the sex barrier to the franchise in Alabama and providing machinery by which women may be qualified to vote. Considerable attention is devoted to the need for a constitutional convention and a request that the legislature submit the question to the people to decide whether they want a constitutional convention called.

The governor reviews the progress made by the state under the laws adopted at the last session of the legislature, and finds much cause for gratification. He deals at length with child welfare, education, law enforcement, tax equalization and the need for further progress along all of these lines. He reviews all of the bills he has suggested to the legislature for enactment at this extra session.

The only suggestion of additional revenue-producing measures is contained in a paragraph devoted to the great need of the state's institutions of higher learning, and in that case he merely asks what finer thing the legislature could do than to find revenues from some source with which to put them abreast of the times and equal in all respects to similar institutions in other states.

Following is a brief summary of Governor Kilby's message to the legislature:

This marked increase in commitments (to jail) indicates an alarming increase in crime. . . . We are in a condition of unrest and perturbation such as, unfortunately, follows all great conflagrations. It is clear, however, that it is the duty of the state to afford its citizens every possible protection against this wave of lawlessness. Present facilities for enforcing the laws are entirely inadequate.

"We should look forward to the return of normal conditions and enable the Alabama Public Service Commission, as time goes on, to be in a position to lighten the burdens of our people and bring back rate levels and practices to a more normal basis.

"In my message at the beginning of your July session I told you that in my judgment no legislature was ever given a greater opportunity for real and lasting service to a state. I now say that no legislature ever made better use of its opportunity.

"The enactment of a general health law and the increased appropriation it carried have been a great blessing to our people.

"The field of child welfare is the most delicate of all fields of social work and calls for trained service. Trained workers are to be had only upon payment of adequate salaries.

"The response of the people of the state to this most worthy appeal to their patriotic sentiment (the Alabama Memorial Commission's work) has not been very creditable.

"Workmen's Compensation — This law is working to the satisfaction of employers and employes.

"From an educational standpoint the past year has been a significant one for Alabama. In many respects progress has been great; in some, it has been phenomenal, epoch-making. It has attracted the attention of the entire country. . . . Approximately 3,000 adult illiterates have been taught to read and write. . . . Approximately $1,000,000 has been expended on rural school houses. . . . Much remains to be done. With all our efforts, with all those things regarded as essential for an efficient system Alabama still ranks alarmingly near the bottom of the list, only three states falling below us.

Still greater effort, even greater progress is necessary if our children are to have advantages equal to those provided by other states for theirs. Nothing less should satisfy us. . . . Patriotic teachers must come to the rescue and serve for inadequate compensation, while patriotic citizens make provisions for the adequate support of the schools.

"What finer thing could you do than find the money from some source and with its use place these institutions (the state institutions of higher learning) abreast of the times and equal in all respects to the best of their several kinds in any state of the Union? Any sacrifice such action entails would be amply repaid, for the money so expended would come back to us a hundred fold in better educated, more highly trained young men and women who are to be the future leaders of our people in all lines of activity.

"We do not owe a dollar of borrowed money, and I have every reason to believe that we can pass through the year without borrowing. There has been a marked improvement in our financial condition. . . . The appropriations for the year begin Oct. 1, 1920, aggregate approximately $1,000,000 more than for the current year. I anticipate no difficulty in paying these appropriations out of the revenues of the state without resort to borrowing.

"It is gratifying to report that much progress has been made . . . toward equalization. . . . The great bulk of the property owners of Alabama have willingly and cheerfully assumed their share of the cost of government, believing it to be fair and equitable and that all cases, big and little, have been weighed on the same scales.

"There are no 'burdens of taxation,' comparatively speaking. The cheapest thing in Alabama today is state government and the things that go with it. It is the only thing I know of that has not doubled and trebled in price during the recent year. . . . With 10,000 school teachers working for wages far below the wages paid common laborers and menial servants, this hue and cry about the 'burdens of taxation' is a thing to be ashamed of."

Kilby's Bills Introduced.

All bills proposed by Governor Kilby in his call were introduced in the two houses during the day except the measure providing for change in the law relating to the public service commission. This bill, which gives the commission broader powers is now being written and will be introduced later in the week.

It levies a fee against each public service corporation in Alabama which will provide a fund of about $50,000 for the expenses of the committee.

Bills legalizing women's suffrage were presented and referred to the committee on privileges and elections of the two houses. The bills were introduced in the house by W. H. Shaw of Colbert, who proposed measures in 1919 which contemplated ratification and would have prevented this extra session. One measure provides for the registration of women at a special registration period, beginning October 1. Another prescribed the qualifications of women voters, the bill providing that their qualification shall be the same as imposed on men by the constitution.

A third requires all women voters to pay a yearly poll tax of $1.50, beginning October 1. This poll tax will be delinquent February 1 and will bar a woman from participating in any primary or general election.

Measures which are advocated by the governor now and which were introduced on the first day follow:

To authorize the governor to employ a special force to serve under his direction in enforcing the state laws, this being known as the state law enforecement bill, appropriating additional funds for the expense of the department.

To validate county warrants issued under an act of the 1919 legislature, relating to construction of roads and tick eradication,

Providing an aditional appropriation for the State Pasteur Institute, which is an amendment to an act of the 1919 legislature.

Authorizing courts of county commissioners, boards of revenue or like governing bodies to issue interest bearing warrants for the construction of roads and eradication of the cattle tick.

• • • •

Opposed to Convention Bill.

Alabama voters will not be called upon by the legislature to say whether or not a constitutional convention shall be held in 1922. At a caucus of those opposed to the enactment of the laws which would put the question up to the voters, sixty-eight members of the house of representatives agreed to oppose such a measure. Already a majority of the senate had agreed to vote against the bill.

The caucus of the house members was held following adjournment for the day and after Speaker S. A. Lynne had informed the house that Governor Kilby, in a personal conversation with him, had asked that it be made known without equivocation that he had never urged the calling of a convention, but had merely suggested that the issue be submitted to the voters at the request of a large number of citizens.

• • • •

Oppose Appropriation.

Additional appropriations for the state law enforcement department, charged with the duty of enforcing state laws, will not be given with the approval of the senate committee on finance and taxation, that committee having made an adverse report on the senate bill when the body convened for the second legislative day. The bill was sponsored by administration leaders, and was suggested in the call for the special session. Provision for an additional appropriation was made totaling $56,000.

Want Arbitration Board.

Among the bills introduced was one by Senator Smith of Coosa county which would create a state board of arbitration and local boards with authority to settle disputes between employes and employers in Alabama. The bill prescribes the duties of members of the boards and provides for the arbitration of differences that may arise at any time. Senator Smith did not say whether the bill has the support of administration forces, but it is known that Governor Kilby had been asked to consider such a measure.

JUST GAVE UP SUFFERED SO

Weakness, Pains and Other Troubles Had Discouraged This Arkansas Lady.—She Took Cardui, Found It Helpful. Got Well!

Harrisburg, Ark.—After serious symptoms had become apparent, Mrs. Belle Wilkerson, of Route 1, this place, says she "got worse and worse."

"I wasn't able to stand on my feet and had to go to bed," she explains. The . . . grew worse, and for about three weeks nothing seemed to do me any good. I grew so weak and nervous and could not sleep. I began to have pain in the lower part of my body, and all across my back. There was a great deal of soreness and pain in my left side . . . I just gave up, for I suffered so. I grew discouraged and thought I was not going to get well.

"My head not only ached, but would feel so light and dizzy . . . I decided then I would take Cardui, as I read of how many women it had benefited, and some whose case was like mine. When I began Cardui, just after a few doses, I noticed a change. I slept better at night . . . and felt like I could eat something. I got up and began to do the work in the house and yard, and after three or four bottles of Cardui I was well."

Speedy Relief From Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

—13—

"It looks like you were guilty from reading the morning papers," he answered with a grin. "But I don't believe all I read. They've made out a strong case against you, though."

"I didn't do it!" I cried passionately.

"If you didn't, who did?"

"It must have been Mr. Wick."

"There you go, jumping at conclusions. Why not Claire Bradford?"

"Why do you mention her? Do you suspect her?"

"If she didn't do it, why did she come down here to see you?"

"How did you know she was here?"

"I was watching you all the time you were talking to her."

"But how did you know who she was?"

"I saw the other one this morning. They look alike."

"But how did you know which sister it was?"

"You didn't seem to get along well enough in your talk for it to be Barbara," he answered with another grin.

It had not been my intention to reveal even to him Claire Bradford's second visit to my apartment, but I saw how foolish it would be of me to attempt to deceive or to withhold any information from such a shrewd observer.

Without reserve and with the utmost detail I proceeded to relate everything that had happened since I had seen him the afternoon before. I told of my discovery of the secret panel in my room and of the blind passageway into which it apparently led, of Barbara's having made the perilous journey over the window ledge to inspect my find, of the screams we had heard, followed by the shot, of how Barbara had fled back by the way she came, and I had run downstairs and with Wick had discovered the body. I told him every detail so far as I could remember it, winding up with my catching Claire Bradford leaving my apartment, just before my arrest and the finding of the revolver.

"You don't think the detectives themselves planted the gun on you?" he asked. "I've heard of them doing things like that."

He spoke with such an air of innocence that I had to smile. I doubt if there were many tricks of detectives that Gorman did not know all about.

"They had no opportunity whatever. Neither of them had been near the dresser before, and I was watching them every moment."

"Well, who did hide the revolver there, if they didn't?"

"I don't know."

"Couldn't Wick have done it?"

"I was with him every moment after we discovered the body."

"Maybe it was Claire Bradford?"

I shook my head.

"I thought at first it might have been she, but I'm convinced since talking with her that it was not. She's either entirely innocent or else the most wonderful actress in the world."

"I think we can leave her out of it," ventured Gorman.

"That leaves only Wick."

Gorman shook his head positively.

"No, Wick didn't do it. He's a bad one all right, and he has done time, but he's only a tool."

"Wick has done time!" I exclaimed. "How did you find that out? What have you learned about him?"

Gorman grinned at my eager questioning.

"I don't know much about him yet, but I'm sure he's an ex-con. While you were in court this morning," he explained, "I went up to the Granddeck to take a look at things for myself. Wick showed me through the Lutan apartment, thinking I was from the coroner's office. I spotted him at once. A crook that has done time is always sure to give himself away."

"How?" I asked.

"Well," said Gorman judicially, "men's businesses leave their marks on them. A clergyman don't have to be wearing a high vest for you to spot him, and nobody ever took a dancing teacher for a pugilist. A man that has looked at as many crooks as I have knows them by instinct, and then there's little ways you can tell. As I was going up to the apartment with Wick he just naturally fell into step with me, showing he had been used to marching with other prisoners. He talks, too, without moving his lips. That's a sure sign. They learn that in prison so they can talk without the guards knowing it."

"That's so," I cried. "It struck me that there was something funny about the way Wick talked, but I couldn't have told just what it was."

"Wick's a crook, all right, "but I think he comes from somewhere upstate or maybe out West, but he hasn't intelligence enough to be anything more than a runner for the gang."

"Well, what's your theory?" I asked. "If Wick didn't murder Miss Lutan, who did?"

"I don't know yet. Wick ain't big enough. Big jobs take big men to plan them. This whole thing is a big affair, carefully planned out. It takes more brains than Wick ever dreamed of having to plant anonymous notes and terrify people nearly out of their senses with mysterious whispers and then to steal the Bradford papers and the Gaston pearls and then when things get hot to have you already framed as the goat to blame things on."

"Then you think my discharge from the office was part of the plot?"

"Sure it was. You butted in on their blackmail plans, and they wanted to get square with you, and a young fellow out of work and discharged in disgrace is always an easy mark for suspicion."

"And was it part of the plot to blame Miss Lutan's murder on me?"

"I don't think so. The Lutan murder was an accident. Even the biggest crooks seldom deliberately plan murder. They're all afraid of the chair. She came in and surprised some one of the gang in the apartment. He had to shoot her to make his getaway. It was quick thinking on somebody's part after the murder to plant that gun in your rooms. That sort of scheming takes brains, and Wick hasn't got them."

"Who was it, then?"

"We've got to find," said Gorman, speaking slowly and with emphasis, "the big crook that is back of all this—the master-mind."

"The master-mind," I echoed.

"Yes," he said, "there's a big crooked brain somewhere that has been directing the whole plot, and planning the actions of Wick and of the telephone girl, and maybe of Claire Bradford, too."

"I wonder if it could be her ex-husband. She told me, though, a few moments ago, that she had not heard of him for years, and she seemed to me to be telling the truth."

"I don't think it was him," said Gorman. "He was only a chauffeur. If he's in it at all, he's only one of the gang. He's not the master-mind."

"I hope we can keep the Bradfords out of it altogether," I said. "You see, Gorman—"

"I understand," he interrupted. "I know how the land lies. You need not worry about that. If Claire Bradford had any part in the plot, you can bet she was forced into it and driven to do what she did. Have you seen her sister?"

"No, and I hope she'll make no effort to see me. She mustn't. You'll see her, won't you?"

"Leave it to me," said the detective. "I'll manage to reach her without even her own family knowing anything about it. I'll make her understand that if she tries to see you or says anything, she'll only be damaging your case. Don't worry about her."

"There's one thing, though," I said, "that I wish you could do."

"What's that?"

"Can you find some way of getting to the Gaston apartment and exploring that secret passage and see where it leads?"

He turned savagely on me.

"Say, young fellow," he said, "if I didn't know that you were innocent, I'd swear that you were a dope fiend with this tale of a secret passage.

"We've Got to Find the Crook That Is Back of All This—the Master Mind."

You've been reading too many thrillers or going to the movies too much. They don't have secret passages in modern apartment houses. You better keep quiet about that. You can't get anybody to believe you, and you'll only hurt your case."

"But I know there's a passageway there—along the hall. I found the opening, a panel in my bedroom. There's a place there big enough for a man to walk in. I saw it."

He looked at me pityingly, and I could see that he did not believe a word I was saying.

"All right, there's a passage there, and we'll leave it there. A young fellow in love is apt to imagine all sorts of things."

I saw there was no use in my insisting further about the passageway. His mind was stubbornly made up that it could not exist. He was the only friend I had in all the great city, and I must leave it to him to work the thing out in his own way.

"What about a lawyer?" I asked.

"Didn't the court assign you one?"

"Yes, but he took it for granted that I was guilty, so I got rid of him."

"Well, there ain't much a lawyer could do yet. I'll dig up one when we need him. Bail is not possible in a murder case, so there is nothing for you to do but to sit tight and take it as easy as you can. By the way, have you heard anything from old Gaston since you were arrested?"

"Not a word," I answered. "I have not the least idea where he is or how to reach him."

"Humph, that's funny," said Gorman abstractedly. "Good-by, I'll see you again tomorrow."

He pounded on the cell door, and a guard released him, leaving me alone to ponder over my plight, and especially over his last question. What had he meant by it?

Where was old Rufus Gaston?

Once more suspicion of my aged relative shot through my brain. Was it possible that his was the master mind behind all this plotting? Gorman had insisted that the arch criminal behind Wick and the others must be some man of intellect. My great-uncle Rufus had brains. Out of a clear sky he had summoned me to live in the Granddeck and then had mysteriously disappeared. Certainly he had had opportunities for knowing Wick and the telephone girl. Barbara had recalled once having heard her father speak of him in disparaging terms. Had it been he who was plotting against the Bradfords and had brought me into the case as a scapegoat?

Was old Rufus Gaston the master mind? Where was he?

CHAPTER XI.

Fortunately for me, there had recently been a wave of public criticism of the courts for the long delays in bringing criminal cases to trial, and the district attorney was moving with all celerity to bring my case to a conclusion. An indictment against me for the murder of Daisy Lutan had been quickly found and the date had been already set for the trial—one week hence—so that the period of my incarceration and doubt as to my ultimate fate seemed likely to be very brief.

Utterly absurd as the situation was, accused of murdering a woman whom I never had seen and hardly had heard of until I saw her lying dead in her apartments, conscious as I was of my entire innocence in the matter, still, as in the solitude of my cell I reviewed the case, I found myself facing the ordeal of a trial for murder with considerable apprehension.

Circumstances certainly looked much against me. There was absolutely no way in which I could refute the testimony of the two detectives that they had found the revolver with one chamber discharged in the drawer of my dresser. I myself had seen them find it. While Gorman still held that there was a possibility that they themselves had put it there, I knew that neither of them had been near the dresser after I had admitted them to my rooms. The only person whom I had the slightest ground for suspecting was Claire Bradford, yet what motive could she have had?

Wick undoubtedly would testify that he had met me at the door of the Lutan apartment directly after he had heard the shot. He might say that I appeared to be greatly excited. This would be the exact truth. There was even the possibility that he might swear that he had found me coming out of Miss Lutan's apartment. Even if he did not make the statement direct, shrewd questioning on the part of the district attorney could easily make it appear that I had just left the Lutan apartment. How could we possibly controvert his testimony?

Then, in addition, there were the damaging statements that would be offered by Nellie Kelly. She would swear that the evening before I had taken her out to dinner and had been questioning her about the other tenants in the house. Even though we knew that she was a tool of Wick and was the wife of Lefty Moore, the burglar, unless Gorman was able to discover that she herself had a criminal record, it seemed utterly hopeless to attempt to confute her statements.

It would also militate against me that at the time of the murder I was out of a job and almost without funds. They were likely, too, to bring out the fact that I had been discreditably discharged from the only position I had held in New York. The only man who knew anything about the matter, Mr. Wood, the head of the firm, had been suddenly called to France in connection with an order for munitions, and was not expected to return for several months. The fact would weigh against me, too, that I would be unable to offer the testimony of any character witnesses. Birge and Boller, my classmates with whom I had roomed ever since I had come to New York, were "somewhere in France" with the American troops and could not possibly aid me.

All of this was pointed out to me by John McGregor, a young attorney whom Gorman had employed for me. While Gorman and I had, I think, succeeded in convincing him of my innocence, the fact that he was continually citing the difficulties in the way of our proving it made me realize that he was very dubious as to the outcome.

The trouble was that we were absolutely without witnesses. Old Rufus Gaston's whereabouts still remained a mystery. If we could discover him in time, we could at least explain satisfactorily my presence in the Granddeck and could establish that I was not the homeless, penniless vagrant they would try to prove me. The longer old Rufus remained in hiding, the stronger became my suspicion that he might be in some way involved in the plot. His action in keeping his address a secret from me seemed to have been with deliberate intent.

After some discussion Gorman and I had agreed not to mention either of the Bradford girls.

"If one word about either of them slips out in court," said Gorman, "they'll be in for it. The papers will jump to it and print their pictures and all that. We'd better leave them out of it."

With this I heartily concurred. I was determined that Barbara Bradford must be in no way involved, come what may. I knew that she herself would be apt to be restrained from attempting to communicate with me by the fact that her sister's marriage was set for the day after tomorrow. Her loyalty to her family was such that she would not risk scandal by trying to aid me, at least not until her sister was married and the future for Claire and her mother assured.

Two small rays of sunshine lightened the gloom of my cell—the fact that the newspaper mention of the tragedy seemed thus far to have escaped my mother's notice and the fact that Barbara still believed in my innocence and trusted me absolutely. A day or two after my arrest Gorman had managed to see her and had told her that it was my wish that she keep entirely quiet her knowledge of the affair and that she should make no attempt whatever to communicate with me while I was in prison. He had brought back with him a hastily penciled note which often in my cell I read and re-read:

"Dear Mr. Nelson:

"I'm so sorry to hear of your trouble and the absurd charges against you. I'll do whatever you wish, of course. I trust you absolutely. If anything I can tell will aid you at any time, I am ready to speak—cost what it may. I know you are innocent and must soon be freed. Hoping to see you,

"With all confidence,
"B. B."

Each time I read anew the penciled lines, my heart rejoiced. Come what may, I felt sure that Barbara's heart was mine. I joyed to know that come out of prison to her though I might, she would be glad to see me. Joyfully would I have gone to the electric chair rather than have her fair name in the least smirched by scandal in trying to defend me. She alone could prove an alibi for me, but no one must ever know it.

What would a scandal-loving world say if the fact became public that she had been alone with me in my apartment near midnight? If only by the sacrifice of her good name could I go free, then let me stay in my cell. Let me even go to the electric chair, I would not have my life at the loss of my beloved's reputation.

One other thing I had kept from my lawyer—my discovery of the passageway between the walls in my great-uncle's apartment. If I could not get Gorman to believe in this secret passage, which I was convinced had some connection with the mysteries and the whisperings at the Granddeck, there was little likelihood that McGregor would believe my tale either. Given one single hour in my quarters at the Granddeck and I would have discovered whither it led and who used it, but once a man is charged with murder, his hands are tied. It was futile for me to mention it again, even to the detective or to my lawyer, until such time as I could show it to them and convince them that I knew what I was talking about.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ON THE FARM.

"I don't mind which crop of hay I eat," said the horse, "as long as I have hay to eat."

"We Tell Stories."

"Neigh, neigh," said another horse belonging to the farmer, walking along the road, "I don't mind, either."

"We are less fussy than that even," said some pink and white pigs who were digging in some mud. "We will eat almost anything and rush for it, too. We were clean not long ago. Yes, we were clean pigs, but now we're all dirty. We became dirty digging for food."

"We're adding to Mother Nature's family," said the elderberry bushes with the big flowery white purple berries.

"We're enjoying the day so much," said some children as they wandered about the farm in their bare feet.

"We add to the beauty all about," said the big hills, and the valleys added:

"We too try to look our best. For they say that this farm is in a lovely valley and that all around are lovely hills. So we try to look our best, and this valley right here takes such pride in being a fine valley."

"And," said the well, "where the children always went to get water, "I tell stories to the children as they look down into me.

"At night the stars shine down upon me and I tell them stories, too."

"And we like it around here," said the birds, "for the people on the farm give us crumbs and they put the crumbs on the piazza of the farmhouse so we will come up and be tame."

"And we three trees," said one of the tall oak trees, "have stood for years on the road leading to this farm. We talk to each other from spring until the fall and our branches talk throughout the winter."

"We don't actually belong to the farm," said the two blue darning needle flies, "but we like it here, so we stay around, too, for it is such a nice farm."

"And though I'm only an old pine tree stump with funny old roots spread out about me, I, too, like to feel a part of the farm. Children use my hollow stump for a dolls' house. And that is fun."

"And we're a little beyond the farm," said a pine tree grove, "but we belong to the farm, and the farmer's children come along and walk over our pine needle pathway."

"Though we're always shaking," said the aspen leaves on the aspen trees, "we are shaking with our merry laughs and smiles. It's not because we're nervous or unhappy, no indeed."

"And I like it here," said the robin.

"Yes, chirp, chirp, I am very happy. The tree is old but it's cozy and homelike just the same and around the trunk of the tree the beautiful sweet peas are climbing up. And down in the grass delicious worms are to be found."

"We, too, try to make the road which leads to the farm nice," said some of the early golden rod flowers.

"I love the farm," said the cow, whose eyes had been shut. "I had to listen to what was being said, though I will admit that I was taking a little day nap—dreaming of the joy of cud chewing!"

A Doll's House.

"I guard the farm-house," said Jack, the Airedale dog, and Buster, the bulldog added:

"So do I. And we each wait until our own name is called before we go for dinner. That is not only a trick but we feel it is only polite to wait until one is asked into dinner.

"We have other friends around the farm and we love farm life, how we love it!

"We bark and act as watch dogs to protect the farmer and his wife and the children. But oh, we're as gentle as sheep with the children!"

And one after the other, every animal on the farm, every flower, and every thing that belonged in some way to the farm smiled and felt deeply happy on the farm summer afternoon that the world was so extremely nice and that farm life was as nice as anything in the whole world.

And the farmer's children thought the same as the animals did about the farm!

CALOMEL LOSING OUT IN SOUTH

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much, but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.—Adv.

Wilson can't get even half a League onward.

The women of Maine don't raise their boys to listen to voices in the air, do they?

All we got to do is to dig the ditches. The water will run down hill by itself.

Fifth Cousin Roosevelt says that "Maine doesn't count." But it did—and it was a bully count.

In one of his recent speeches in the west, Candidate Cox said: "Thank God, the women will vote this year." He had not heard from Maine.

Dr. Marcus says he is thankful to his friends for keeping him from being elected on the Town Council on Monday.

A friend of ours who is cleaning up a small swamp ran into a thunder wood tree and has decided to scratch for a living.

Norman E. Mack says that "the plain people" are for the Democratic ticket this year. There seen to be mighty few plain people in Maine just now.

The Democrats are now saying that money carried Maine. How much? Any old figure will do, of course, but make it big. Your leader, jimcox, is a piker in these accusatory matters.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice President, calls Senator Harding "an old-fashioned politician." That is far better than a half-baked politician, with half baked ideas of government.

It would be interesting to know whether Daniels cost the Democrats more votes in Maine than did Franklin D. Roosevelt. Between the two of them—with Wm. J. McAdoo added—they started an amazing landslide.

BAD NEWS FROM MAINE

The Democrat who can get either contentment or satisfaction out of the returns from the Maine election must indeed be of a cheerful and optimistic nature. In the result of the Maine election there can not possibly be but one element of value to the Democratic party—the lesson which teaches that the party must speed up its organization and back up the aggressive campaign of Governor Cox with a far-flung and systematized campaign.

Democrats are mad enough to say "Oh well, not only is Maine one of the solid Republican States, but it is a decadent State, as well, for the last census showed that it lost in population during the past ten years." But that will be no answer to the 66,000 majority piled up in the State which went Democratic in 1912 and 1914 by narrow majorities, and which has several times given the Republicans less than ten thousand majorities. The country has been looking forward to what the new woman vote would do; we have been assured by the Democratic leaders that the women would vote for the League of Nations. What ever else the women in Maine wanted they did not want the League of Nations or a Democratic administration. The outstanding factor in the Maine election is the unfriendliness manifested there by the women for the Democratic party.

It is all the harder for Democrats to get consolation for the Maine result, because the campaign was pitched on national issues. Democrats might see some ray of light in the election returns, if the campaign had been fought out on old State issues, and had been decided by State factionalism. But the two parties in Maine accepted national issues, particularly the League of Nations, as the battleground. The impartial Associated Press says:

"Considerable significance in the outcome in its bearing on the November election was apparent from the fact that the campaign was fought out almost wholly on national lines, with the League of Nations as the chief issue."

Parkhurst, the Republican who was elected Governor, said "the voters of Maine resented the autocratic and the un-American administration which the Democrats have given us for the past seven years." These are harsh words and they make unpleasant reading for Democrts, but it will be folly not to rid ourselves in September of what illusions we may have before fighting out the campaign before the November election. The practical lesson as we pointed out, was demonstrated in the lack of an efficient Democratic organization. The best Democratic organizations, would probably not have turned Maine from Republicanism, but it would have cut the lopsided majority.

The five million dollar fund which the Republicans admit to say nothing of the fifteen million dollar fund with which Governor Cox charges them undoubtedly had some effect on the Maine campaign. Money even when used recklessly, unfortunately does increase the vote of a candidate, a party or a faction. We learned that last spring in the Alabama primaries. The Democrats need to bestir themselves; it is evident that they are fighting a battle against odds.—The Montgomery Advertiser.

You fellows who own swamp lands around Clanton may look out for somebody trying to buy your marshes for a song. But don't listen to him. Just inform him that you are going to join the drainage association and have that land put into use. You can spend $20 an acre on it and sell it for $150 an acre.

A TRIBUTE TO CONGRESS

Washington, Sept. 14.—Expressing confidence in thhe American form of government, the Republican Publicity Association takes the New York "World" to task for calling Congress a "Soviet of country lawyers." The statement issued by the Association through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., follows:

"Deep in the slough of despondency, the New York 'World' believes what it apparently deems the failure of popular government. 'The Congress of the United States has been called a Soviet of lawyers. It could be more precisely described as a Soviet of country lawyers—lawyers of the prosecuting attorney type who have finally realized their ambition to get to Washington. This applies to the Senate as much as to the House.' Then the 'World' proceeds to quote what it calls an 'illuminating criticism of the government of the United States' by Franklin D. Rooevelt, the Democratic candidate for Vice President.

"That the 'World' and its candidates should be criticizing the government of the United States is no occasion for surprise, since they have demonstrated the sincerity of their dissatisfaction with the American government by their proposal to abandon American nationalism for the domination of a super-state in which Great Britain would have six votes to America's one.

"Fortunately, however, the Republicans, and we believe, most Democrats, do not share the pessimism of the 'World' and its candidates. Republicans sometimes criticize the adminstraton but they do not, as the 'World' says of Mr. Roosevelt, criticize the government. Neither do Republicans speak of Congress as a soviet of country lawyers, using the words as terms of contempt. The Republican party believes that the founders of the American form of government were wise in establishing a legislative branch composed of two houses, vesting in the legislative branch the sole power to levy taxes, declare war and confirm peace. The Republican party believes that the founders of the government acted wisely in providing for popular election of Congressmen and that the people also acted wisely in amending the Constitution by providing for popular election of Senators. The Republican party further believes that the people can be trusted to elect their representatives and that they have done fairly well in the exercise of that power. The Republican party believes that it is not only bad patriotism but bad morals to seek to arouse in the minds of the people contempt and suspicion for that branch of the government which has been and still is the guardian of liberty.

"Whether the present Congress is dominated by country lawyers is a question we shall not take time to determine. It may be said, however, that if the statement is true the country lawyers have reason to point to the fact with pride. This Congress cut two and a half billion dollars out of the demands of the Democratic administration and made possible future reductions of taxes in corresponding degree. This Congress passed a bill for restoration of the railroads to private management, for establishment of an American merchant marine, for development of idle water power, for rehabilitation of disabled soldiers, for encouragement of foreign trade under the Edge law, for punishment of profiteering, for deportation of alien reds, for development of oil lands under a leasing system, and for numerous other purposes tending to promote the public welfare. Moreover, the present Congress courageously resisted the effort of President Wilson and the 'World' to surrender American government to a super-state, and passed a peace resolution which President Wilson vetoed.

"If it be true that this Congress is controlled by country lawyers, we extend our compliments and congratulations to the legal lights from the rural districts."

CENTER HILL

Dear Editor:

Will you please allow me a small space in your most wonderful paper to say a few words

Health of this settlement is fine, and farmers are enjoying this nice weather to gather their crops.

Miss Maude Webb spent Sunday with Miss Larace Cobb.

Mr. Pat Lowery and Earl Sammons gave Misses Eula and Bessie Barnett a call Sunday afternoon.

Miss Beatrice Wells spent Sunday with Miss Nancy Sims.

Ex-Sheriff H. A. Harris has taken advantage of the reinstatement privilege offered by the State Department of Education to former teachers, and gone back into the harness as a member of our teaching force. We learn that he has already accepted the public school at Jemison and begun the session for this year. Several years ago Mr. Harris had the distinction of being one of the foremost teachers in Chilton county, having taught for a number of years in the best schools of the county. He will by no means be a stranger in school work now that he has decided to go back to it.

Senator Harding effectually disposed of the so-called Plumb plan of settling the railroad question by saying: "I do not believe America will consent to seize the righteously-owned property of any citizen to place it in the hands of another."

Senator Harding disposes of a much misunderstood matter, when he said that in the enactment of the Cummings-Esch law, Congress gave a six months' guarantee in wages to employees just as it gave a six months' guarantee of returns to the owners.

Let us drain out the swamps and marshes that surround Clanton, starve out the snakes and frogs, and put in their places great fields of corn and sugar cane. The wheel has started to roll. Put your shoulder to it and push. Don't think you are going to tag on and ride at the other fellow's expense. There is not going to be some riding and others walking in this drainage business. We are all going to keep our feet on the ground, our shoulders to the wheel and push, push, push!

With the creek swamps near Clanton drained out and the water running along in nice straight channels, and not spreading out lazily over all the fine rich level lands, we see a most glorious future for this town and the country close around. There will be hundreds of acres of growing corn and sugar cane in sight of the town where now the land is so wet and soft that it can't be used for pasturing cattle in some places. You can then ride into Clanton on the trains and look down the creek and oversee miles and miles of level land covered with black fields of corn where now your sight is obstructed by dense swamps growing over stale frog ponds. Instead of the lazy winding streams that now make the breeding places of millions and millions of mosquitoes and scarcely less of tadpoles, frogs and snakes, you will see pretty straight canals in which the water rushes with haste along its course to the river, not stopping and lazing along its journey to hinder the work of the farmers. We see a beautiful picture that will be realized in a very few years, we hope.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 93. The State shall not engage in works of internal improvement nor lend money or its credit in aid of such; nor shall the State be interested in any private or corporate enterprises or lend money or its credit to any individual association or corporation, provided that the State may under appropriate laws cause the net proceeds from the convict fund to be applied to the construction, repair and maintenance of public roads in the State, and the legislature may also make additional appropriations for that purpose; and, provided further, that the foregoing prohibitions shall not apply to the promotion, development or operation of harbors or seaports within the State or its jurisdiction, provided, further, that any such work or improvements shall always be and remain under the management and control of the State through its State Harbor Commission or other governing agency and provided further that the adoption of this amendment shall not affect any other amendment to the Constitution which may be adopted pursuant to any resolution of this session of the Legislature."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.

By the Governor:
WM. P. COBB,
Secretary of State.

SINGING AT LIBERTY HILL

The County Singing Convention was held at Liberty Hill Church last Saturday and Sunday. It was a great success; attendance on Saturday was good, on Sunday it was simply enormous.

The young lady director caught the great crowd on Sunday. They were Miss Ida Scott of Verbena and Miss Era Sanders of Lomax.

Among the noted visitors were A. J. Langston of Perry, John W. Hays of Mobile, Attorney Blanton Riggins and J. H. Willoughby of Birmingham.

The hospitality of the people of Liberty Hill was unbounded. Our visit to that community will long be remembered with pelasure.

Nearly all parts of the county was represented.

REAL AUTO RACES TO BE RUN ON FAIR TRACK

Sig Haugdahl, world's dirt track champion, and a number of other famed drivers will enter thrilling speed contests at the Alabama State Fair, October 4 to 9. These speed demons will stage real races, not cut and dried affairs such as are frequently seen. Each man will be racing not only against his fellow racers, but against time, in an effort to lower dirt track records. The result will be highly spectacular, thrilling and altogether worth while for those who enjoy high-class speed events. These racers toy daily with death in its most terrible form—that of dying under the weight of their machines or perishing in the flames of ingited motor cars. The races will be worth while because they will be run by worth while racers.

FUTURE HOUSEWIVES' WORK TO BE AT THE FAIR

One of the most interesting exhibits planned for the Alabama State Fair, which will be under way at the Fair Grounds in West Birmingham October 4 to 9, will be the Jefferson County Girls' Club exhibit. It will be under the direction of Miss Marion Walker and through it the thousands of Alabamians who flock to the annual big state exhibition may learn just what the little women, the housewives of tomorrow, are doing toward learning to cook and sew and to get ready to take care of their own homes in the days to come.

A vast canning exhibit as well as an exhibition of needlework will be seen in the girls' club division. And there will be plenty of prizes for the small workers. The canning exhibit will be divided into four classes, that of the first year girls, that of the second year girls, that of the third year girls and that of the fourth year girls. The sewing and equipment exhibits will be divided into classes.

For the first year girls a $3 first prize, a $2 second prize and a $1.50 third prize will be offered for the best exhibits made up of one quart jar of tomatoes, one quart jar of soup mixture and one bottle of catsup or chili sauce.

In the second year girls' division similar prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits made up of one jar of chow chow or Dixie relish, one tin can of tomatoes, one jar of any kind of fruit and one exhibit of dried fruit or vegetables.

The third year girls will be offered similar prizes for exhibits consisting of one pint of fruit butter, one tin can of beans and one glass of jelly.

A number of prizes are to be distributed among the girls of the fourth year class. A first prize of $5, a second prize $3 and a third prize of $2 will be given for the best general exhibit, including preserves, jellies, canned fruits and vegetables. For the best two tin cans of tomatoes $3 will be given as first prize and $2 as second prize. The best peaches in glass jars will be awarded $3 as first prize and $1.50 as second prize. First and second prizes of $2 and $1 will be awarded for the best glass jar of vegetables, the best two glass jars of preserves, the best glass jar of soup mixture, the best glass jar of tomato pickle, the best glass jar of Dixie relish, the best quart bottle of fruit vinegar, the best exhibit of two varieties of vegetables.

Sweepstakes prizes of $10, $8 and $5 will be given the clubs having the greatest number of members receiving blue ribbons in these exhibits.

In the sewing exhibit the best club apron with emblem will draw first and second prizes of $2 and $1. The best club cap with emblem will receive first and second prizes of $1.50 and 75 cents. The best cup towel and holder will be given first and second prizes of $1 and 50 cents. For the best made over garment will be awarded first and second prizes of $2 and $1. Similar prizes will go for the best club luncheon set.

The equipment exhibit prizes will be awarded this way: For the best pair of cane packing paddles, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best menu using club products, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best club booklet (history of tenth-acre patch) $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the neatest record book, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best home convenience exhibit, $3 first prize and $2 second prize.

Sweepstakes prizes of $8 and $4 will be awarded the club having the greatest number of members receiving blue ribbons in these exhibits.

SHOULTS

We are having some cool weather now, which reminds us that winter time is near at hand.

We regret to say that Miss Pearl Kelley, who has been sick for some time is not any better. The baby of Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun Garner is at this time very sick. There are several cases of "flu" around in adjoining communities.

Mr. Hart Walker and Miss Myrtle McAfee spent Saturday and Sunday at home; they returned to their school work at Centerville Sunday afternoon.

Miss Birdie Hall, who has had a position in Montgomery for some time, has given up the job and is now at Thorsby attending school.

Mr. Clarence Latham from Texas is at home for a few days. He has a position in Texas and is making good.

Mr. Wheeler Walker, who is flagging for the M. & O. Railroad is at home for a few days.

Next Saturday and Sunday is preaching day at Pleasant Grove. Every body come. Every member of this church is especially invited and urged to be present Saturday afternoon to call a pastor.

Our Sunday School is still improving. Mr. Howard Oden, the most efficient superintendent, makes some splendid talks every Sunday.

The sheriff was in this part of the county a week or two ago and captured two stills and a mixed blooded woman, and later we hear he arrested a white man. The people around here are beginning to wake up on this whiskey proposition. The Bible tells us that "The drunkard and glutton shall come to poverty."

BOAT SINKS, ONE DROWNED

News comes from Ida Station, on the Coosa River north of Lock 12, that late last Thursday evening Charley Barnes, a boy of 14 years, was turned over in a boat and drowned. He was crossing the river with four others. All the rest were rescued. The young man's home is in Sylacauga, Ala.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.
SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Solution of the Problem

To furnish the telephone service which will be needed in the state of Alabama during 1921, additional facilities must be constructed.

To build these facilities will cost $1,415,829.

The Company has no money with which to construct these facilities.

All new construction must be paid for out of the capital account of the Company; all of the Company's present capital is invested in the Company's business.

This money can be had in only one way; it must be invested in the Company's business.

This money can be had from only one source; from the investing public, people who have surplus money to invest.

Part of the investing public of this country live in Alabama.

These facilities are needed to serve the people of Alabama.

Will the investing public of Alabama furnish this money?

Every dollar the public of Alabama will invest in the Company will be used to construct plant facilities in the state of Alabama for the use of the people of Alabama.

If the investing public living in Alabama will not invest their surplus money in the Company's business, the Company must get the money needed to serve you from the investing public in other states; from strangers.

Can you expect strangers to invest their money in a business located in Alabama in which the people of Alabama will not invest their money?

The facilities now used by you were paid for by money furnished by strangers. They know what they are earning in Alabama while serving you just as you know.

Can you ask or expect them to furnish more money for your use in Alabama under present conditions?

If the people of Alabama will not supply the money needed to serve themselves they must induce strangers to furnish it.

This can be done by allowing the stranger to earn a fair and just profit upon his money now invested in Alabama, serving you, and upon all additional money required to furnish you service.

This can be done in but one way: by paying fair and just rates.

When the Company is legally authorized to charge a rate which will yield a fair and just profit over and above the cost of furnishing you service in the state of Alabama, it can secure from strangers living in other states the money needed to furnish service to the state of Alabama.

The Company must have this right before it can get the money.

The people of Alabama must act first.

To have telephone service you must either invest your own money in the Company's business, or permit the Company to earn such a profit upon its present and future investment as will induce strangers to invest their money in the state of Alabama to serve you.

The next advertisement will tell what profit the Company asks to earn.

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

Wonderful Running Races to Mark Fair

Speedy Horses Will Compete for Splendid Purses in Series of Events On Alabama Track.

Alabama's most brilliant, most entertaining, most helpful state fair is well on its way toward completion. Arrangements for the biggest exhibition ever attempted in the state are almost complete and little remains to be done to put the finishing touches to the most spectacular program ever to mark a Southern fair.

The dates, October 4 to 9, already are fixed in the minds of Alabamians all over the state and Birmingham is expecting the greatest crowd ever to pour into the Magic City for the annual exhibition.

In addition to a wonderous display of agricultural exhibits the fair management has arranged one of the most attractive programs ever attempted at a similar exhibition. It includes five days of horse racing and a sixth day of marvelous automobile races.

The first day's program includes a three-quarter mile dash for a prize of 250; a five-eighth mile dash for a $100 prize and a one and one-eighth mile dash for a purse of $100. The second day will see a five-eighths mile dash for a $100 prize, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $200, while another $200 purse will be awarded in the one-mile dash. For the third day a one-mile dash for $250 in prize money, a three-fourths mile dash for a $250 purse, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $250, and a one-half mile dash for a $100 prize have been arranged. The fourth day will be marked by a seven-eighths mile dash with a prize of $150, a three-fourths mile dash for a prize of $200, a five-eighths mile dash for prize money amounting to $150, and the Alabama State Fair Derby, a one and one-fourth mile dash for a purse of $500. The fifth and final day of the horse racing will see a one-mile dash for a prize of $100, a three-fourths mile dash for $150 in prizes and the one-mile dash, consolation race, for a purse of $200.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

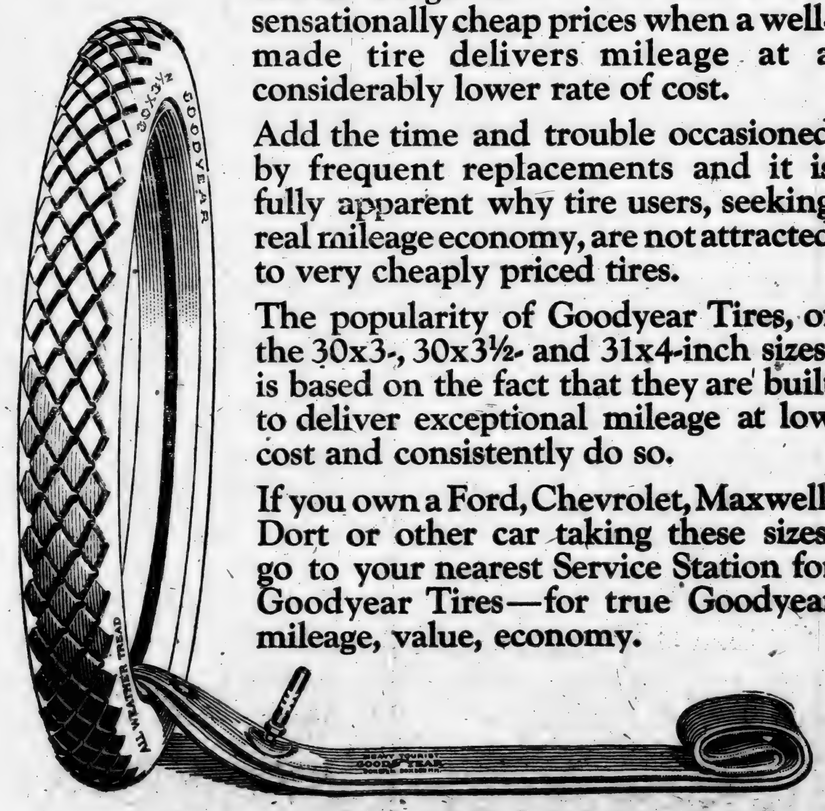
Low-Cost Mileage—in Goodyear Tires for Small Cars



There is no economy in buying so-called bargains in tires offered at sensationally cheap prices when a well-made tire delivers mileage at a considerably lower rate of cost.

Add the time and trouble occasioned by frequent replacements and it is fully apparent why tire users, seeking real mileage economy, are not attracted to very cheaply priced tires.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they are built to deliver exceptional mileage at low cost and consistently do so.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Maxwell, Dort or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for true Goodyear mileage, value, economy.

30 x 3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50
30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available! 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50

BATUM: CENTER OF CRUDE OIL AND CLASSIC STORY

Mingle an all-pervading odor or petroleum with the aroma of 1,000 years of history; picture the physical aspects of a Texas town of the gusher region, including puffing trains lumbering through the principal street amid a swarthy human content of Turk, Armenian, Georgian and Greek, and you get an idea of the incongruity of Batum.

Batum has grown like a mushroom within a generation because a pipe line poured precious oil through its Black sea port. It nestles at the foothills of a stream of history that parallels the pipe line and the 550-mile course of the railway to Baku, which links the Black sea to the Caspian, and passes such peaks of legend as the 18,000-foot Mt. Elburz, where Prometheus was bound to a rock as the vultures consumed his flesh.

From 1907 to 1911, inclusive, nearly one-fifth of the world's oil supply came from the Caucasus region, and in normal times Batum was credited with exporting more petroleum than any other port in the world. Batum won this boon by the natural advantage of a harbor ranked as one of the best in the world, despite the occasional storms that render its shelter treacherous.

The city came to its industrial own when it passed from Turkish dominion to Russian hands in 1878; but political troubles, even before the war bolts of 1914, affected its commerce. Before the World war a movement had been launched to boom Batum as a health resort. In that field it had some assets, despite its get-rich-quick anomalies and unkempt appearance, such as a climate where the foliage was thick in mid-winter, and its boulevards, shaded by palms, acacias and banana trees.

In 1903 Batum had an economic experience that affected it more deeply, perhaps, than political disturbances. It never recovered from the general strike of that year, which spread over the entire South Russia, and, in Batum, brought paralysis to business, suffering to citizens and palsy to progress.

Batum is built in a sort of amphitheater facing a beautiful bay. Wine was produced in the vineyards in its vicinity; and in the spring tons of strawberries were grown in the fields nearby. Both products were exported before the war. In those days automobiles, sewing machines, fireless cookers and writing materials passed its custom house on their way to the Caucasus or Persia.

WHAT'S IN SOME GEOGRAPHIC NAMES

Names of such women as Joan of Arc and Edith Cavell are written indelibly upon the hearts of people for all ages. Generous and well deserved tributes have been paid lastingly to others, but so much have their names become a part of our daily lives that many who frequently pronounce them are unmindful of their significance. Cities, rivers, provinces and islands bear the names of women of distinction.

Lady Franklin island, near Baffin island, in the arctic circle, is named for the wife of Sir John Franklin, the explorer who lost his life in first finding the Northwest passage through the great ice of the polar regions. There is perhaps no more beautiful story of untiring devotion and persistent effort than that of Lady Jane Franklin who, after the failure of many attempts, fitted out a ship which, though it brought back to her the definite proof of the loss of her husband's expedition, established his achievement of his object.

The picturesque stories of the little Indian princess Pocahontas always will hold a loved place in the hearts of American childhood. Counties in Iowa and West Virginia, villages in Bond county, Illinois, and Cape Girardeau county, Missouri, and in the Rocky mountains in Alberta, Canada, are named for her.

Queen Victoria's name is wrapped around the British empire from the capital of British Columbia, over the heart of Africa at Victoria Nyanza and Victoria falls, and beyond into the Queensland and Victoria in far-away Australia.

America, too, in its early days of colonization paid its tribute to the queens of the mother country and to the gracious ladies who braved the dangers of untried shores with their lords. Elizabeth, a cape in Maine, and Elizabeth City in Virginia, as well as the state itself, together with some 25 other places in the United States, bear the name of the clever, witty, versatile coquette, who took the dimension-torn England and whipped it into a place as a world power. Elizabeth Carteret, the charming wife of one of the aristocratic proprietors of New Jersey, shares with Queen Elizabeth some of the honors of the name. Elizabethtown, in North Carolina, and Elizabeth City, in New Jersey, are named for her.

The name of Clara Barton is perpetuated in Barton county, Kansas, and the wife of George Washington, who before her first marriage was Martha Dandridge, is honored in the town of Dandridge, Tenn.

Maryland and Virginia are fairly bespattered with the names of the queens and princesses of England, the state name of the former being taken from that of Queen Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I. Then, too, there are Annapolis, named for the wife of James I of England; and Anne Arundel and Caroline counties, in Maryland, called after the wives of two of the Calverts; Fluvanna county and the North Anna river in Virginia, named for Queen Anne; and Charlotte, Amelia and Caroline counties and Charlottesville, the home of the University of Virginia, all called for the wives and daughters of English kings.

Marietta, O., was named for the haughty, charming Antoinette. The Aleutian islands, off the coast of Alaska, when that territory was Russian, were known as Catherine archipelago, in honor of Catherine the Great. Ekaterinburg was named for the Russian Catherine who ruled Russia through her husband, Peter the Great.

VERA CRUZ: TRAVERSING A CONTINENT IN 75 MILES

"While fully aware of the high percentage of error most sweeping assertions contain, I nevertheless venture to claim that the country lying between the cities of Vera Cruz and Mexico City possesses more varied natural attractions than any other area of similar extent in the world."

This is the statement of Frank M. Chapman, in a communication to the National Geographic society concerning Vera Cruz, which figures so conspicuously in news dispatches from Mexico. Doctor Chapman continues:

"Be one student or tourist, there can be no question that one should enter Mexico from the gulf. A journey from the coast to the capital follows a natural succession of climatic zones as well as the sequence of early historic events.

"The day, indeed, should begin at sunrise, some hours before disembarking at Vera Cruz, with a hope that one may have the rare good fortune to see the first rays of the sun touch the summit of Mt. Orizaba, the first, as it will be among the most lasting, of one's impressions of Mexico. The shore is still some 30 miles distant, the mountain itself about 100 miles, and one is with difficulty convinced that the gleaming pink cloud high above the horizon is part of the still invisible earth beneath it. Doubtless the Aztecs were not familiar with this view of Mt. Orizaba, but from no other place is their name for it—Citlaltapetl (the Star Mountain)—so applicable.

"Time was when Vera Cruz was dreaded as a pest-hole, and trains at once took one from the steamer up the Sierras on the way to Mexico City, usually as far as Orizaba. Now, however, sanitary conditions and hotel accommodations have been so improved that one may stay here without danger or discomfort.

"In our journey from the gulf to the summit of the Sierras we pass through tropical, temperate and boreal zones—the Tierras Caliente, Templada and Fria of the native. Our actual journey, in passing from sea level to snowline, may be a matter of 75 miles, our change of altitude approximately three miles; but if we were to seek the Canadian zone not on mountain top but on the coast, it would be necessary for us to travel to Maine or Nova Scotia. In other words, a journey of some 1,500 miles would be required to reach conditions which are here distant but three altitudinal miles.

"It follows, then, that one can actually stand in a tropical jungle, where parrots, trogons, toucans, and other equatorial birds are calling from the liana-draped trees, and look upward to forests of pines and spruce, where crossbills, juncos, pine siskins, and evening grosbeaks are among the common permanent resident species.

"Later we may ascend the snows on Orizaba to discover at approximately what altitude the palms of the Tierra Caliente give way to the oaks of the Tierra Templada, to be in turn replaced by the spruce of the Tierra Fria."

QUACKS: ANCIENT AND MODERN

Do you regard cold cream as an ultra-modern palliative?

Or pure food and drug laws as a comparatively recent type of legislation?

Or the familiar "cure all" as an up-to-date quack device for the twentieth century credulous?

You are wrong, according to the statements contained in a communication to the National Geographic society from Dr. John A. Foote. A part of the communication states:

"Most people at some time or another use cold cream. It seems quite a modern luxury, indispensable alike to peer and peri, and adapted to many and varied uses. In fact, one traveler tells recently of having some of his cold cream eaten by a fat hungry valet in Germany. So we are inclined to regard it as a fairly modern product. And yet 'unguentum refrigerans' cold cream, has come down to us from Roman days. The first formula is attributed to Galen, who lived and wrote in the second century. What we use today is practically the same, though 'Dr.' Galen's original formula was imitated and 'improved' hundreds of times.

"Emperor Frederick II. of Sicily, in 1240 or 1241, published the first pure food and drugs act. He was about 700 years ahead of Dr. Wiley, for he specified strict regulations of the standard of drug purity, and provided for drug inspectors, and fined all offenders.

"The practice of medicine was also regulated. A physician was required to have a diploma from a university before he could study medicine; then he took a three-year course in the school of medicine and one year practice under a practicing physician. Special post graduate work in anatomy was required if he was to do surgery.

"All this was in the so-called 'dark ages.' Even the fees of physicians and pharmacists were strictly regulated by law and were in purchasing value about the same as the charges of the present day. Physicians were not allowed to own drug stores and drug adulterators were severely dealt with.

"Mithradatium was the name of the great antidote of Roman pharmacy. It had from 40 to 50 vegetable ingredients, few of which had any real medicinal value except opium, and these drugs were blended with honey.

"It remained for Nero's physician, Andromachus, to put the finishing touches to this wonderful compound. Andromachus added viper's flesh to the formula and called his new compound Theriaca. He wrote some verses dedicated to Nero, describing this medicine and claiming virtues for it which in our day would subject him to prosecution. Evidently he believed he had created in this one compound a veritable pharmaceutical monopoly.

"Galen, one of the fathers of medicine, went even further. He recommended it as a cure for all poisons, bites, headaches, vertigo, deafness, epilepsy, apoplexy, dimness of sight, loss of voice, asthma, coughs, spitting of blood, tightness of breath, colic, the iliac passion (appendicitis), jaundice, hardening of the spleen, stone, fevers, dropsy, leprosy, melancholy, all pestilences, etc. Nowadays he would probably have included coupon thumb, golf shoulder and movie eye.

"As Galen's writings dominated medical thought for over 1,500 years, it is not surprising that this advertisement made Mithradatium, or Theriaca, a valued remedy. Every physician of note for centuries afterward claimed some improvement on the original formula."

SAGHALIEN: A LONG TIME POLITICAL PERPLEXITY

The island of Saghalien, recently subject of diplomatic correspondence between the United States and Japan, has been a political perplexity both to Russia and Japan for many years. Soon after the Pilgrim Fathers landed on the east coast of North America, a Japanese feudal baron dispatched an agent to this far northern island of the group that swings south from Siberia, at the mouth of the Amur, to Formosa and Fukien on the China coast. Within twenty years after that the Russians had landed on Saghalien.

The Japanese subsequently made several trips of inspection but a small handful of Russian colonists remained and today the majority of the permanent inhabitants of Saghalien are Russian, while to the Japanese it is little more than a summer fishing resort.

In 1853 Russia sent an ambassador to Nagaski and a band of troops to Saghalien. While the ambassador conducted negotiations the troops built a fortress but, after repeated attempts, the boundary question was still unsettled.

By 1875 the sea-going Japanese gave up all rights in Saghalien to the Russians in return for full rights in the Kurile islands and this condition of affairs continued until the Treaty of Portsmouth which gave southern Saghalien, up to the fiftieth parallel, to Japan.

Japanese Saghalien has little agricultural land but has large forests of both deciduous and evergreen trees, amounting to more than 8,000,000 acres. Japanese paper mills are situated in Otomari and elsewhere and an effort is being made to develop the papermaking industry.

But it is on fishing that the majority of the Japanese inhabitants depend for a living. As soon as the summer season is over the fishermen migrate to the southern islands of Japan for the winter. Mauka, on the west coast of Saghalien, is the center of the crab fisheries and much of the crab flake consumed in the Far East comes from this little town. A post road connects Mauka with Toyohara, which is the capital of Karafuto, the name which the Japanese have given to the southern part of Saghalien.

Saghalien has less than sixty miles of railway and white, red or blue lines are painted across the windows of the cars to prevent the people from trying to stick their heads through the glass.

The average annual temperature of Saghalien is near the freezing point and if the Japanese are ever to colonize the island they will have to change their methods of dressing and building.

Karafuto has much coal and there is considerable gold, but in the past the Russian residents have largely confined their efforts to farming and the Japanese to fishing.

Saghalien has not been developed to any great extent, but what natural development has taken place, has been done more by the Russian exiles whose permanent homes were there than by the Japanese whose fishing camps and trading centers have dotted the shore line.

Highway Improvement

TEST GOOD ROAD MATERIALS

Much Detailed Technical Information Secured in Experiments By Public Roads Bureau.

It is believed that the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, through its testing division has done more than any other single agency in developing the intelligent use of bitumens in road construction. For example, experiments conducted under service conditions by this bureau decided whether a soft stone could be used in bituminous macadam and bituminous concrete; whether rocks having a marked cleavage could be used to advantage in such construction; what quantities of bitumen give the best results when used as surface treatments on water-bound macadam and what kind of covering material and what quantities should be used in any case.

A large amount of detailed technical information valuable to highway engineers generally has been secured by the bureau in the course of its research and experimental work. The ability of the highway engineer to construct roads which would accommodate automobile traffic has, in no small degree, been the underlying reason that the automobile industry has developed to its present enormous proportions.

In 1916 the passage of the federal aid road act marked a new epoch in highway construction in the United States. The war then in progress emphasized the need of further developments in road building. The bureau has sought to keep well to the front in the solution of the new problems presented and is today conducting experiments and investigations of a fundamental character.

CARRYING PRODUCE TO CITY

Possibilities of Motortruck Only Touched as Yet—Improved Roads Will Assist.

About 20 per cent of motortrucks in the United States are owned by farmers, according to a well-informed motortruck official, but about 60 per cent of all the motortruck work is done in the country. It is announced that the expenditure in the United States for hard-surfaced highways during next year will be around $633,000,000 as compared with $125,000,000 during this year. The possibilities of the truck for carrying produce and supplies between farms and cities, is only touched as yet. The additional roads proposed will give added economy to motortruck transportation.

WORK GRADER OVER HIGHWAY

First Round Trip After Each Rain Should Be to Smooth Up Center and Remove Surplus.

The center of an earth road dries more quickly after a rain than do the sides. Therefore the first round trip over the road with a grader after each rain is on the center with the blade set at an angle that will move the surplus dirt ahead and out. This method smooths up the center first, where the traffic should travel and wishes to travel.

MUST USE PNEUMATIC TIRES

Norway Proposes Legislation to Prevent Damage to Improved Roads by Heavy Trucks.

Norway is the first country in the world to propose national legislation that will specify that motortrucks up to two tons capacity, must be equipped with pneumatic tires so as to prevent damage to roads and to cut down the excessive cost of highway repairs due to the use of solid tires.

Good Roads Fix Prices.

Roads in a large measure determine the character of agricultural activity, the markets its products may reach, which in turn fixes the prices of such products.

Plant Deserves Trial.

Biennial sweet clover is a pasture plant that deserves a trial in a small way on every farm.

Silage for Sheep.

Silage is rapidly coming to play an important part in the feeding of sheep.

MADE HIS POSITION PLAIN

Visitor Bound to Notify Big-Game Hunter That He Would Not Accompany Him.

He was a big-game hunter and he had inserted an advertisement in a morning paper asking if any man would accompany him to central Africa to shoot lions, rhinos, hippos, etc., the said companion to bear half the cost of the expedition.

Late that night or, rather at two o'clock the next morning, his household was awakened by a violent ringing of the front-door bell and a man was admitted who, to put it mildly, appeared to have been wining.

"Look here," explained the visitor, "I read your 'vertisement this mornin' and I was bound to come to you."

"Well," queried the hunter, "it's a bit late to talk business, but will you accompany me?"

"'Company you?" retorted the visitor. "No, shir. I called to tell you I'd shee you hanged first."

In Proportion.

"Why, is this your full stock of wedding rings?" the young man asked in surprise. "Only half a dozen—not enough to permit of any choice at all. Odd, when you have a couple of hundred engagement rings there in the case."

"Not odd—experience," the jeweler replied. "It'll take all those diamonds to work off these plain bands."

Little boats must keep the shore, large ships may venture more.

The following night they compared notes.

"My wife told me, as I slipped on the cat's saucer, to break all the china in the house, so I did," said No. 1.

"I happened accidentally to sit on the piano," said No. 2, and my wife suggested that I should utterly ruin it, so that instrument will be heard no more."

Then No. 3 spoke. "I went for the top step that was not there and fell full length," he explained, "and my wife remarked that she would be pleased to see me break my neck."

"And—?" queried his companions, breathlessly.

"Oh, I am paying."

CLEANLINESS IS BIG ASSET

Duty of Every Dairy Farmer to See That Output Is Wholesome—It Lessens Complaints.

Farmers who produce clean milk possess a business asset the value of which many do not fully appreciate. The public is better informed, by far, than it was a few years ago regarding the value of pure milk as a food. It knows more of the dangers of unclean milk. Therefore, as a business proposition as well as from a sense of duty, every farmer owning milk cows should see to it that the output is wholesome.

Clean milk benefits not only the consumer but the milk producer as well. Most producers of market milk have experienced the chagrin of having a shipment of milk refused or returned because it reached the market sour, tainted, or otherwise in poor condition. Although such milk may be used for feeding pigs, it usually is a complete loss to the producer, since the cost of transportation back to the farm usually exceeds its value.

Frequently, also, the producer depends on a certain market as an outlet for his milk and has no means for utilizing small quantities at uncertain intervals, even if he had it at the farm. Another important consideration is that unpleasant effect which the receipt of sour, tainted, or otherwise unsalable milk has upon the purchaser. Delivering milk of that kind usually results in the loss of the confidence of the dealer, or, if it is delivered directly to the consumer, the loss of customers.

Clean milk means fewer complaints, a better class of patrons, and a steady market for the product. Carelessly produced and improperly handled milk may be the means of spreading disease. Every owner of a dairy herd should consider it his duty to himself and to the community to keep only healthy cows, supply them with wholesome feed, and keep them in clean, comfortable quarters. The milkers and all who handle milk should realize that they have in their charge a food which is easily contaminated and should take every reasonable precaution to keep it clean.

Milkers Should Exercise Greatest Care in Keeping Milk Clean.

PREPARATIONS REPEL FLIES

Fish Oil Is Principal Ingredient in Several Mixtures Recommended for Stock.

While there are various preparations on the market designed to keep flies from cows or other live stock, the farmer can make a good fly repellent by using any of the following mixtures: Fish oil, 3 parts; kerosene, 1 part. Fish oil, 100 parts; oil of tar, 50 parts; crude carbolic acid, 1 part. Fish oil, 1½ pints; kerosene, 1½ pints; resin, 1½ pounds; laundry soap, 2 cakes. Mix thoroughly and add enough water to make 3 gallons. Fish oil, linseed oil, or kerosene, 1 pint; coal tar dip, 1 pint; laundry soap, 1¼ bar; hot water, 15 pints. Mix thoroughly so as to form an emulsion. The fish oil is the principal ingredient that repels the flies.

Either a brush or a hand-sprayer can be used to apply any of these mixtures. The sprayer will be more convenient. Applications will have to be made at frequent intervals to be effective.

GIVE BULL GOOD ATTENTION

Best Results Obtained by Firm Handling, but Never by Abuse—Must Have Exercise.

The bull must not be underfed when young nor kept overfat when matured. Better results are obtained by gentle but firm handling but never by abuse. Never allow him to get the upper hand at any time; he must not realize his enormous strength. Give him plenty of exercise it is a mistake to keep him confined. Do not trust a bull at any time. It is the "gentle" bull that does the damage.

Lumber Dealers Lose Thousands.

Tuscaloosa. — Tuscaloosa lumbermen, who have been greatly hampered during the last six months for the lack of cars with which to move their products to market, are now experiencing some relief. Lumbermen in West Alabama have suffered greatly by the fall in the prices of lumber and were still further embarrassed by the fact that they could not get cars to ship what they had cut on their yards. The result is, thousands of dollars have been lost by lumbermen in this section.

First Bale Brings Bonus.

Anniston.—The first bale of cotton of the 1920 season to be held in Anniston was brought in from the Choccolocco Valley by Albert D. Liggett. The cotton was sold at 52 cents a pound and the enterprising farmer was given a bonus of $97.50 by Anniston merchants, making his bale net him 20½ cents over the market price on the sale of his cotton, with the bonus as an additional reward.

Support Pledged To Port.

Montgomery.—Permanent organization of the Alabama Waterways Association, with P. T. Shanks, of Selma, its first president, was perfected here following a convention attended by several hundred prominent men in civic and official life of the State. A vice-president from each congressional district also was chosen. As its first obligation the association is pledged to the development of the port of Mobile, through obtaining ratification of an amendment to the Alabama constitution, authorizing the state to lend its credit for the development of modern terminal and port facilities at that point, which will be voted upon November 2nd.

• • • •

Full Investigation Promised.

Mobile.—Postal officials at Washington have promised a full investigation of complaints made against the recently inaugurated railway mail service between Mobile and points on the eastern bay shore, according to advices received by Postmaster J. Blocker Thornton, of Mobile. The railway mail service was substituted for the boat service a few weeks ago, on account of the fact that the boats asked more money when the contract was to be renewed. Eastern shore residents and business houses in Mobile have complained that the railway service is not as satisfactory, as the mail must go to Bay Minette and then be carried through the country to the coast towns. This takes a much longer time for the mail to reach its destination, it is claimed.

Corona Manager Killed.

Jasper.—L. M. Adler, general manager of the Corona Coal Company, was shot from ambush and killed between Patton and Patton Junction. Two deputy sheriffs named Sullivan and Coker, were struck by bullets at the same time and are believed to have been fatally wounded. According to reports to Sheriff Clark Guthrie, the automobile in which Mr. Adler and the deputies were riding was proceeding along the road when men concealed in some old houses suddenly opened fire upon them. Mr. Adler was shot through the temple and died almost instantly.

Governor Orders Out Troops.

Montgomery.—Six companies of the Alabama National Guard, approximately 550 officers and men, to be commanded by Brigadier General Robert A. Steiner, were ordered into service by Governor Kilby for strike duty in Walker and Jefferson counties, where bituminous coal miners have ben on strike for the past fifteen days. Remaining companies of the guard are ordered held in readiness for moving into the industrial district if the situation becomes such as to warrant it.

Gas Rate Case Heard.

Mobile.—The hearing on the petition of the Mobile Gas Company for an increase in the price of gas furnished Mobile consumers was held here before S. P. Gaillard, member of the Alabama Public Service Commission. Other members of the commission on account of work at Montgomery, were unable to be present at the hearing, but the testimony will be submitted to them and the petition acted upon by the entire commission. The company submitted figures tending to show that only in five months since early in 1917 has it cleared operating expenses and interest on its floating indebtedness. A petition signed by about 500 consumers protesting against the increase and asking that the company be required to improve the heating quality of the gas was filed.

Fee System Desired.

Mobile.—A bill designed to restore the offices of tax collector and assessor of Mobile County to the fee system, has been introduced in the Alabama legislature by D. B. Cobbs, representative from Mobile. According to a bill passed at the last session these officials were put on salaries of $4,000 a year when the county failed to show a population of 100,000 in the recent census. The bill, which is said to have been designed for Montgomery County, it was not thought would affect Mobile, as it was believed that the population would go well over 100,000. The tax officials had a recount made at their own expense in the effort to prove to the census officials that several thousand people had been omitted.

Tax Value Raised.

Anniston.—The first appeal by a property holder in Calhoun county from adjustment made by the county tax adjuster resulted in a higher valuation being placed upon the complainant's property. The adjuster had valued the farm at Weaver at $5,400. Bradley appealed to the county commissioners, claiming the adjuster's figure unfair. The commissioners investigated the case and raised the figure to $7,200 R. H. Hobbs, the county adjuster, stated that the utilities tax in the county has been advanced to $4,000,000(the property valuation being placed at $20,000,000 as against $18,500,000 last year. No appeals from decisions of the adjuster have been made previous to that Monday.

White Man Lynched.

Montgomery. — Alto Windham, white, was lynched about three miles from Hartford, Ala., for remarks alleged to have been made by him to a young white married woman. The husband of the woman is said to have telephoned one Harry Collins to stop Windham. He did so, not knowing what was wanted with the man. On arrival at the home of Collins, a paty of men informed Collins of their intention, but Collins would not permit them to get possession of Windham until they had promised not to kill him, it is said. Relying on their promise, Collins surrendered Windham, who was afterwards lynched by the mob in a river swamp.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

SOMETHING JOB NEVER DID

Possibly an Experience Like Mr. Brown's Would Have Shattered His Reputation for Patience.

Filled with pride, Mr. and Mrs. Brown started out for a drive in their new motorcar. Mrs. Brown was hoping the neighbors were watching, but her husband was too busy steering to hope about anything.

Alack! Before they reached the end of the road the car stopped, and stayed that way with a mule-like persistency. Mr. Brown tried every lever and handle in turn. Then he got down from his seat and began to investigate.

Presently he lay down and crawled underneath the car until only his number nines were left visible. In a few moments the car gave a sudden jolt and then stopped, and a terrible flow of language, more forcible than polite, became audible.

"Oh, John," exclaimed the wife, in horrified tones, "don't swear so! Have patience, like Job did."

"Job," shrieked Mr. Brown, in a stifled voice. "Job would have sworn, too, if he'd been underneath this beastly car with his mustache caught in a cogwheel."

Untipped.

HOLY CITY AS IT IS TODAY

Redeemed but Waiting to Be Clothed in Raiment That Is but Her Just Due.

It is well, as we leave the gentle allurement of flowers in the Garden of Gethsemane and turn toward the city, that our hearts have first been filled with serene joy, writes William D. McCracken in Asia magazine. We regard the fearfully tried city with something of the compassion that the Master felt for it. Seventeen times destroyed—bitterly hated—anxiously sought—how desperate a history since Nebuchadnezzar captured it more than twenty-five centuries ago. And only the other day, it seems, at Christmas time in 1917, Jerusalem was captured again, this time by its friends, the British after an agreement with the Turks that the city itself should not be bombarded. There was some fighting on the Mount of Olives, and reconnoitering airplanes dropped a bomb or two in and about the Garden of Gethsemane. But Jerusalem had been captured for the last time, and the last offensive was devoid of evil.

Redeemed today, but in her nakedness, Jerusalem waits to be clothed. She has as yet no grace, no covering for her ugly wounds. Some day her sides will glisten with the brightness of a heavenly radiance; she will be washed and anointed like a bride waiting for the bridegroom.

SOCIETY

Mrs. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Polly Anna Club Meets.

Mrs. Barney Roberts delightfully entertained the members of the Polly Anna Club Wednesday afternoon at her home. Bright summer flowers were used advantageously throughout the apartments. The evening was spent in doing fancy works of different kinds, after which a delicious salad plate was served to about fifteen guests.

Miss Kathleen Mullins Hostess

One of the most delightful affairs of the summer was a dinner party given Monday evening, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mullins, when Miss Kathleen Mullins celebrated her twentieth birthday.

The home was never more attractive. On entering the dining room a scene of unsurpassed beauty greeted the guests. The table so artistically decorated in nasturtiums and maiden hair ferns was perfct in every detail, the color motif being carried out also in mints in minute yellow baskets tied with yellow ribbon marking the place cards of eight guests. A delicious five-course dinner was served. Those enjoying this hospitality were Misses Leona Pipes, Roberta Curry, Mary Sue Mullins, Maud Mullins, Alice Stanfield, Messrs George Walker and John DeRamus.

Fan Tan was the diversion of the evening, while music was rendered on the Edison throughout the evening. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. R. E. Luckie and Mrs. Watts Moore.

The E. C. Maye S. S. Class will hold their regular monthly social and business meeting with Mrs. Simpson on Friday at 3 o'clock.

Prof. Clarke was a visitor to Birmingham last week.

Womans Missionary Meets

A business session of the Womens Misionary Union of the Methodist Church was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. C. Jones. An interesting feature of the evening was a hose shower for Vashti. The social service pragramme was most enjoyable, being in charge of Mrs. Fox. All circles reported actively and good reports made. An ice course was served to a large attendance.

One of the most enjoyable social events of the past week was a spend the day party given by Mrs. R. E. Luckie on last Wednesday.

The entire apartments were made bright by pretty vases of nasturtiums and pot plants.

At the noon hour a lovely dinner was enjoyed. The central table decorations also were nasturtiums.

In the afternoon bridge was enjoyed when an ice course was served to Mrs. McSwain, Mrs. Macy Jones, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Moore, Miss Kathleen Mullins, Miss Roberta Curry and Miss Leona Pipes.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Pipes have returned home after a two-weeks stay in Kentucky and Virginia.

Miss Kathleen Mullins left Monday for Shorters College in Rome, Ga., where she will resume her school duties.

Miss Sallie Johnson left Sunday for Birmingham and will be a student of the Lula Compton Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chestnut of Birmingham motored down for the week end with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Hugh Jones has returned home from a visit to Atlanta and Montgomery.

Mr. Grady Reynolds made a business trip to Montgomery during the past week.

SERVICES AT FRIENDSHIP

Next Sunday and Sunday night is the time for regular preaching services at Friendship Church, near here. Rev. W. P. Lowery, the pastor, will preach, and all who can are urged to attend.

At 10 o'clock Sunday morning baptising will be held at the church pool on the highway near the church.

Prayer services are held at this place every Sunday night, and there are always good crowds in attendance. At the service last Sunday night it was decided that a Sunday School be organized before preaching begins next Sunday night. So everybody interested in this movement are asked to be present.

Mr. Jim Rasberry spent the week end in Birmingham.

YOU certainly want to save money, and you would like to have better bakings. Then use Calumet. It's the biggest thing you can do to improve the quality of your bakings—and lower baking costs.

Calumet is made in the largest, most sanitary Baking Powder Factories in the World. No Baking Powder is made under better conditions—none can be better in quality.

It contains only such ingredients as have been officially endorsed by the U. S. Pure Food Authorities. An absolute guaranteethat it is pure.

It received highest Awards, World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago — Paris Exposition, Paris, France—positive proof of its superior merit.

It is used by more housewives and domestic scientists than any other brand.

It is sold at a moderate price. All you have to do is to compare costs to determine how much you can save by buying Calumet.

Gluten is the muscle building part of flour which is of great importance. To be sure you get it in your bakings use plain flour and good baking powder, (not self-rising flour).

Calumet Cream Cake Recipe

—2 cups pastry flour, 2 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder, ½ cup butter, 1½ cups granulated sugar, Yolks of 3 eggs, ¾ cup cold water, Whites of 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon orange extract. Then mix in the regular way.

FOR HEADACHE, LIVER TROUBLE

Black-Draught Is The Best Medicine This Lady Ever Used. Says It Is Only Medicine She Gives Her Children.

Cherry Village, Ark.—In telling of her experience with Thedford's Black-Draught, Mrs. Lottie Ellis, R. F. D. No. 1, this place, said: "I used Black-Draught as a laxative, also for headache, torpid liver and indigestion. It is the best liver medicine I have ever used and is the only medicine I give my children.

"I feel like it has saved me a lot in doctors' bills, for when the children complain of feeling bad or have a cold, I just give them a good dose of Black-Draught and they soon get all right. It certainly cleans the liver and clears up the skin and they are soon out, well again. I wouldn't be without it for anything."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member, of every family, needs, at times, the benefit that Black-Draught gives in helping to cleanse the system and to prevent or relieve the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, and a lazy liver.

To keep well, your stomach, liver and bowels must be in good working order. To help keep them that way, take occasional doses of Thedford's Black-Draught. Thousands of homes are never without it.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held on the proclamation of the Governor, and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the /Constitution of Alabama, viz: The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A. D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging, on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals.

Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and empower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 hereof.

Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constituton of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized.

Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads—by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise and passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilites, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties.

Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become a force and effect immediately this amendment is so ratified.

Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.

By the Governor:
WM. P. COBB,
Secretary of State.

THE UNION-BANNER

VOL. IX. CLANTON, ALA., SEPT. 30, 1920. NUMBER 27.

SOME THINGS ABOUT SENATORIAL FIGHT

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 28, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:

Several have asked me to speak in this county before the election, and I am anxious to make as many speeches as I can, but I am a candidate for U. S. Senator against Senator Underwood, and nearly all my time is taken up in other parts of the State. However, I will be in my office some between now and the election and shall be glad to have any voter who will to come in and talk with me. I will also make as many speeches in this county as I can.

I have just returned from north Alabama, where I have been speaking mostly in Democratic counties. I have been having large crowds at speakings and the people seem to be interested everywhere I go. I believe that 90 per cent of the Democrats are opposed to the League of Nations. I find the people everywhre opposd to this country being tied up with Europe, and being obligated to send our boys back to Europe to fight the battles of those whom we are not really interested in. I have heard every Democratic speech that I could since the campaign opened and about all I can get out of what the leading Democrats want is to help Europe. I think it is time for the American people to think about the needs of America.

The speculators boldly took away a cotton crop from us in 1914, and from all appearances now it seems that the same thing is likely to be done this year. It seems to me that when conditions are such that a few cotton seed oil crushers can meet in Montgomery and fix the price of cotton seed, as was done a few days ago, and when the price of sugar can be raised from 12 1-2 cents to 25 cents in one night, as was done some time ago, that it is time for our government officials to give us more than a moment of their time in this country.

I believe the Democratic party has completely forgotten this country. It seems to me that President Wilson has no thought of America for the last twelve months. Since the war was over he has given his entire thought to Europe and if the League of Nations is adopted it means to mortgage every boy in this country, as well as every dollar we have, to foreign power, and the mortgage can be foreclosed at any time the members of the League want it closed.

I think this country has done enough for Europe, but she is not satisfied, so I say, let her strew her own ingratitude, for we have our own difficulties to look after. I am for AMERICA FIRST and stand for America's boys, for I would not give one American boy for the whole of Europe.

We have gotten along splendidly without a League since our independence was won. In fact, we have boasted that our people have more liberties than any other nation in the world and this is because we are free and independent.

It has been the law of our land for 144 years that we could not declare war on any other country without the consent of our Congress and Senate, but now President Wilson has forgotten our people and wants to transfer the power of declaring war to the League of Nations, where there will be 32 votes, and a majority of them negroes. England has six votes and the U. S. has one. (I think it would be well for our people to remember how England treated us when we were a colony of her, and to consider what she would do for us again if she had a chance). Just think of such nations as Liberia, with population of 2,000,000 and all of the dark and mixed race, and 98 per cent of them total illiterates; also South Africa having a population of 5,000,000 and most of them negroes, and each of these countries have the same vote that the U. S. has, and we have a population of 110,000,000 and a large majority of whites.

It seems to me that President Wilson is willing to sacrifice America just to get to be president of the League of Nations, so that he can preside over the destinies of the entire world. But from the way people talk I do not think that he will get to do this, for Senator Harding says that if he is elected he will stay out of the Legaue, and Governor Cox says if he is elected that he will go in, and even the Democratic papers admit that they think Senator Harding will be our next President. So I hope that we will never have a League of Nations but that America will still be free to act in all matters as she has been since her government was established, and I am going to ask that we remember what George Washington said: "Stay out of the Entangling Alliances of Europe."

In conclusion, I want to say that I am making the best fight I can for U. S. Senator. I expect to meet as many people as I can between now and the election. I have sent out over 20,000 pieces of literature and have spoken in fifteen counties. I will go to the southern part of the State the 11th of October and will speak in several counties before I return.

I hope the people of Chilton will roll up the largest majority for the Republican party that they have ever given it. I hope all the ladies will register and vote, for now it is a law, whether they want it or not, and I hope they will exercise the right of suffrage in such a manner as to prove that they are not going to vote just as their husbands do but that they will vote their convictions. And if this is done, they will revolutionize politics in Alabama.

Remember that this county has a chance to help elect a U. S. Congressman. Judge A. P. Longshore is a candidate and it seems that the Seventh District has a good chance to send a Republican Congressman. If we could send two Republican Congressmen to the U. S. Congress in Washington this year it would put Alabama on the map and attract the attention of the powers at Washington, and we would get something from our national government.

Let's lay down our prejudice and vote our convictions. If we do this Harding will carry Alabama and we will send Judge Longshore to Congress from this District.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

World's Funniest Men To Amuse Fair Crowds

The famous Marco Twins, the funniest men on earth, have been billed to amuse the crowds at the Alabama State Fair October 4 to 9. They have an absolutely unrivalled record as the supreme laugh creators of the universe. This act has been the distinct comedy feature on America's greatest fair programs, and oh, how they make you scream!

SHOULTS

A large congregation enjoyed the good sermon at Pleasant Grove last Saturday and Sunday. Rev. J. D. Martin was called to serve the church again next year.

Miss Myrtle McAfee proved a most charming hostess last Saturday evening at a birthday party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McAfee. Many interesting games were played. When all seemed tired delicious cake was served by the hostess to a great number of friends. Miss Myrtle received many nice presents.

Mr. James Beadford and family from Lawley spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hicks. Mrs. Bedford is remembered as Miss Gertrude Head, a cousin of Mrs. Hicks.

Mr. W. G. Atkinson, Misses Eva, Ester and Estell Atkinson, and Miss Grace Gothard, from Jemison motored over here to preaching Sunday and after preaching service, spent the remainder of the day with Mrs. John Lawrence, sister of Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. Alsie Maness, who is attending high school at Centerville, was at home Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Mattie Maness has for her guests this week her cousin and her niece from Georgia.

Mr. Howard Oden has about completed his new dwelling house.

Mr. Grover Merchant and family from Tabernacle attended preaching service at Pleasant Grove last Sunday.

The death angel came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun Garner on last Monday night and carried away the life of their baby girl, a little over a year old. She had been sick only a few days.

Also on Sunday night last, Miss Callie Lawrence died at the home of her grand mother, Mrs. Eugene McGee. She is daughter of Mr. Rase Lawrence, and has been living with her grand mother since her own mother died several years ago. She was a very bright and intelligent girl. She leaves a father, three sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

H. C. WILLIAMS LEAVES FOR BAPTIST SEMINARY

The following item is taken from the Tuscaloosa News, of Monday, the 13th of September, and will be of interest to the many friends of Rev. Williams in Clanton and in Chilton County.

"Rev. H. G. Williams, for the past year one of the Assistant Pastors of the First Baptist Church, left for his mother's home in Clanton this morning. After a week's visit there he will go to Louisville, Ky., where he will enter the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary for a three-years course of study.

"Tuscaloosa yields this consecrated young pastor with genuine regret, and he will be sorely missed from the circles of the First Baptist Church where he has done a noble work. During the brief year of his connection with the church the contributions of the people amounted to an average of $500 per Sunday, and an addition of 182 members for the whole period. His untiring efforts had much to do with this remarkable record, according to the statement of Pastor Dawson, and others who are in position to know the facts."

Rev. Williams, better known as Greeley, is another product of Chilton County to whom we point with much pride. He started out in the ministry here some years ago just a lad, determined to preach the Gospel as called upon to do by the Divine Spirit. We remember well when he was a student at the public school in Clanton, he took particular delight in preaching sermons to his fellow students as they assembled in the yard every morning before "books". Greeley would secure Prof. Monroe's Bible, take his stand on the upper front porch of the old school building, adopt some suitable text, and shout forth and earnest and heartfelt appeal to his companions admonishing them to strive to live and to walk in the straight and narrow path.

Rev. Williams has already finished his course at Howard College and now goes to the Seminary to put on the finishing touch. We with him success, and long to see him through with his schooling so that he can get right down to business with his real preaching. When he does you are going to hear from him as one of the greatest preachers of his time.

We wish to thank our many and loving friends for their kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our precious darling son.

PEOPLE ARE URGED TO MEET THE COUNTY TAX OFFICERS

The annual rounds of the Tax Assessor and Collector for Chilton County will be made next month, in which time they will visit every precinct in the county. It is quite appropriate just now that we urge all the people to take notice of the dates when these officers will be in your precinct, and meet them there and transact your tax matters at that time and be done with it for this year.

Under the present tax laws it is the duty of the head of each family to meet the Tax Assessor on the day of his appointment in their Beat and turn in a complete list of all property owned, WHETHER TAXABLE OR EXEMPT, and save the cost of any fees.

Particular notice should be taken of the above. All property must be given in to the Assessor, whether it is taxable property or not. Do not think just because you have no taxable property that you do not have to give it in to the Assessor.

A good plan would be for every head of a family right now to make a list of all the property owned on the first day of October, and put it down on a memorandum book in good order so that the list may be all fixed up and ready for the Assessor when he comes. Put down everything, no matter what it is. You will only have to pay tax on that which is taxable under the law.

The extra fees for those who do not give in their taxes and have to be taken up as escapes will be a considerable amount, and it could be saved by being on hand the day of the appointment in your Beat and make the assessment. If the Assessor has to go back and get up an assement of a man who ecaped, all his property both taxable and exempt is taxed for five years back.

PROVIDENCE, BEAT 16

Editor Union-Banner:

I will write a few lines again from this place.

We have just closed one of the most successful meetings we ever had at our church. Our pastor, Rev. W. W. Robinson, with the help of Rev. M. J. Parrish, did some of the ablest preaching we have ever heard at this place. They did some real gospel preaching which resulted in the addition of 22 new members in our church. We believe this is the real price they were working so hard for. We believe our church is revived in the true sense. At the close of our meeting we took up a collection and gave our visiting preacher $22.50.

We also have a B. Y. P. U. organized here, which is being well attended. Our Sunday School is progressing nicely.

I believe we ought to look after our political affairs, as far as that is reasonable, but we ought not to forget our Christian duties for any thing else, for the Lord said, "First seek ye the Kingdom of Heaven and all things will be added unto you." Now, understand me, I am not fighting the political leaders at all. I am in favor of the men doing all we can to help our women to get ready to vote. Let's carry them and let them register, and then carry them to the polls with us on election day. We will have to do this in order to defend what we believe to be true and right.

I will close for this time.

R. M. ROBINSON.

—14—

While I was debating the situation in my cell, a keeper opened the door.

"You're wanted downstairs," he announced.

"What is it?" I asked, wonderingly.

"You've got a visitor."

"Who?" I questioned eagerly. Could it, I wondered, be Barbara? Had my sternly repressed longing to see her in some way communicated itself to her through the ether and impelled her to throw caution to the winds and come to the prison to see me?

"I don't know," the keeper answered. "It's a man. I don't know who he is."

A man. Who could it be? In all the monotonous time I had been behind the bars, only two men had come to see me, Gorman and McGregor. It could not be either of them, for both were well known to the prison attendants. As I hastened down the long corridor past the dismal row of barred doors, I was revolving in my mind the possibilities of my caller's identity.

Who could it be? Spurred on by my curiosity, I hastened into the counsel room. There sat my great-uncle Rufus.

He looked in much better physical condition than when I had last seen him, more vigorous and healthier. His skin was browned from exposure to the sun and wind, and his eyes were clearer and brighter. As I studied his face I could trace no vestige there of the terrible fear that had seemed to obsess him on the last occasion of our meeting.

For a moment we eyed each other without speaking. I was wondering—and well I think I might—whether the suspicions I had at times in regard to him had been wholly without foundation. Could it be possible that the crafty, miserly old chap was the master mind at the bottom of all the mystery and plotting? As my previous suspicions came up in my mind I determined to be wary in what I said to him. The fires of anger toward him began to kindle within me as I looked at him. I felt that it was his fault that I was locked up here.

Meanwhile he had been studying me. His keen old eyes had surveyed me from head to foot, returning to rest fixedly on my face, as though he was trying to read my thoughts. I wondered what was passing in his mind. Was he inwardly chortling at the plight in which he found me? Was he distressed to see a blood-relative behind the bars? Did he believe that I was guilty of the murder of Daisy Lutan? How had he learned of my arrest? What was his purpose in coming to see me? But his expression was unfathomable, so far as I was concerned.

He was the first to speak.

"So—you didn't do it, did you?"

"Of course not," I retorted indignantly. "Did you suspect that I was a murderer?"

He shook his head disparagingly, smiling an inscrutable smile.

"The evidence against you certainly looks convincing."

"I don't care," I exclaimed with heat. "I'm as innocent of the killing of Daisy Lutan as"—I hesitated—"as you are."

He nodded his head approvingly.

"There, there, boy, don't get excited. Of course I know you are innocent. You're of the Gaston blood, and there never was a Gaston that was a murderer or a lawbreaker. I never suspected you for a single second. I was off in the Maine woods twenty miles from a railroad. I didn't see a newspaper until day before yesterday evening. My eye just happened to catch a paragraph about the Granddeck. It was about your trial for the murder of Miss Lutan being set for next week. That was the first I had heard about it. I traveled all night to get to you."

My feelings toward him underwent a sudden revulsion. There was every evidence of sincerity in his manner. The knowledge that he believed in me was the most welcome news I had heard since my incarceration.

"We'll soon have you out of here," he went on, "now that I am here to help you. I got you into this, and I'll get you out of it if it takes every cent I possess. There's more than one fight left in old Rufus yet. Now start at the very beginning and tell me everything that has happened since I have been away."

What a relief it was to talk freely! With my mind once and for all cleared of all suspicion toward my old great-uncle, I began my story. Somehow the tie of blood is strong in time of trouble. I found it vastly easier to talk with my aged relative than it had been with either Gorman or my lawyer.

I began with my chance meeting with Barbara Bradford in the park as the blackmailers awaited her there. I told everything that had followed, with the utmost detail, even to such small matters as my first meeting with Wick and the undue curiosity he had exhibited as to my acquaintance with the Bradfords. I recited the story of my unaccountable discharge in disgrace from my position and told of Gorman's unavailing efforts to learn the reason.

"The day I was discharged," I went on, "I had drawn out from the savings bank all my money with the purpose of sending it to my mother to whom I was in debt. I still had it with me when I arrived home at the apartment and I decided to put it in the wall safe, to which, you recall, you had given me the combination. Out of mere curiosity"—I made this confession with a blush of shame—"I had inspected the contents of the safe the day of my arrival and had examined the two caskets. The minute I opened the safe this second time I saw that it had been looted."

"What," exclaimed my great-uncle, starting from his seat, "not the pearls!"

I nodded.

"Everything. The casket with the pearls was gone. The other with the trinkets was undisturbed."

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "My wife's pearls stolen! Why, boy, I paid a hundred and fifty thousand dollars for that string. Tell me everything about it—everything, at once."

I could only repeat what I had told him already. When I had opened the safe on Sunday the pearls were there. When I had opened it again on the following Saturday the pearls were gone.

"Of course you told the police at once."

I explained to him why I had not done so, and my reason seemed to satisfy him.

"Go on with your story," he calmly directed. He seemed to have himself well in hand again. After the first shock at hearing of the loss of the pearls he showed no sign of emotion or displeasure.

He listened intently as I told him of my second meeting with Barbara Bradford when I had learned that the Bradford wall safe had been looted, too, and the papers abstracted concerning the annulment of Claire's first marriage. He nodded his head slightly when I told him of the anonymous notes found on the floor in both apartments.

"Did you hear the whispers, too?" he questioned.

"Yes," I answered, "I heard them several times. Barbara has heard them, and the laundress, too."

A look of unspeakable relief came over his face.

"I'm glad to know that others have heard them besides myself. When a man gets old his nerves sometimes play him strange pranks. The whispers seemed so unreal and incredible that I feared that I was suffering from the hallucinations of old age. Now that I know that the whispers are real, there is nothing to fear."

"And," I observed, "I believe, I am almost positive, I can explain the origin of the whispers."

"Tell me," he cried, his manner now entirely changed. He seemed elated at discovering that his brain was still dependable. It was as if a burden had suddenly been lifted from him.

Here was my opportunity. Gorman had utterly refused to credit my story of a secret passage and had ridiculed it. There had been no way that I could prove it, nor was it possible for Gorman to have investigated the walls of the Granddeck, even if he had placed any credence in my story. With my great-uncle it was different. As the occupant of the apartment he would have every right and opportunity to explore and verify my statements. I told him how, while speculating as to the origin of the whispers, I had observed the discrepancy in the measurements of the apartment and had verified my deduction that there was space enough for a passageway big enough for a man to traverse in the wall between the room I had occupied and the long hall. He listened intently as I described the plan of the rooms in detail and nodded his approval.

"And what is more," I added triumphantly, "Barbara Bradford and I had just discovered an opening into it by pushing the wall panel in my room back and then sliding it along. We were inspecting it when we heard the shot in the apartment below. I closed the panel and ran downstairs and have had no opportunity since to investigate, but I am sure the passage is there. I am convinced that it was the sound of voices there that made the whispers. I suspect it was used by whoever left the anonymous notes in the room, and that the person or persons who looted the safes entered and escaped by that means. I would not be surprised if it was not by means of this passageway that the murderer of Miss Lutan escaped, after he had left his revolver in the drawer of my dresser."

My great-uncle shook his head perplexedly.

"It sounds improbable—too much like a romance. They do not build modern apartment buildings with secret passageways. Space is far too valuable, and besides, all plans have to be filed with the city's bureau of buildings."

"But it's there," I cried desperately. "I saw it. Barbara Bradford saw it, too. We can prove it. Gorman will soon find out about it. I have many matters to attend to today, but tomorrow I shall go up to the apartment, and if there is such a passageway I shall find it and see where it leads."

"Then you are not staying in the apartment?"

"No, I shall remain at a hotel until my wife returns."

At this juncture a prison attendant approached and informed him that the time of his visit was up. Imperiously my great-uncle waved the man away. Somehow the possession of great wealth carries with it a manner of expecting obedience from every one that generally is successful. The man withdrew, muttering to himself and left us undisturbed.

"Now tell me about the murder," Mr. Gaston directed.

Concisely I stated the facts as I knew them. It was a shock to him to hear that at least two of the trusted attendants at the Granddeck, Wick and the telephone girl, were of the criminal class.

"Tut, tut, tut," he exclaimed. "Just think of it! That's the worst of living in a big city. You never know what sort of people there are about you. I'll call up Mr. Kent, the owner of the building, this afternoon and have him get rid of them at once."

"Please don't," I cried. "Gorman and I are both convinced that Wick and the girl know something about the murder. Don't do anything to let them know that they are under suspicion. So long as they are employed at the Granddeck we know where to lay hands on them when we want them."

"That's so," he admitted. "I'll say nothing for the present. As I won't be living there until after this is cleared up, it can make no difference. But, look here, young man, why doesn't this Bradford girl come forward and clear you of this charge? She was with you at the time. She knows you didn't do it."

"You're a Wonderful Liar, You Are," Was His Surly Greeting.

"Because I will not permit her to do so," I replied with heat. "I love Barbara Bradford!"

"That's it, is it?" he commented, giving me a quizzical glance from under his bushy white eyebrows.

"I wouldn't for all the world," I continued, "have her mixed up in this. Her sister is to be married tomorrow, and the scandal might stop the wedding; and besides I'm not going to have it known that she was there alone with me that night in my rooms. I love her too well for that. Some day I am going to ask her to be my wife."

He raised his eyebrows.

"And on what do you expect to marry?" he inquired.

"Of course I have said nothing as yet," I hastened to explain; "I've nothing to offer her."

"No," he agreed, "you've nothing to offer her"—and then with a meaning glance he added a little word that in spite of my predicament made my heart sing with joy and stirred my expectations mightily—"you've nothing to offer her—yet.

"But cheer up," he advised as a parting word of counsel, "I'll get in touch with Gorman and your lawyer as soon as I leave here today, and tomorrow we will find out about that secret passage you think you have discovered."

Compunction that I ever had doubted the integrity of his purpose toward me smote as he departed. I tried to think of something to say to express my gratitude to him, to let him know how much I appreciated his coming at once to my aid, but the only thing I could think of slipped from my lips:

"I am sorry about the pearls."

"So am I," he answered grimly, and went his way.

One thing now I certainly was sure of—his was not the master-mind that had planned all the criminal deeds, but the mystery of the Granddeck was still as much of a mystery as ever.

CHAPTER XII.

It was the second day after this—the day set for Claire Bradford's wedding—that in the morning mail for the Gaston apartment Barbara came to me.

I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confidently expecting that the resulting developments quickly would free me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"What is it?" I cried. "What's the matter now?"

"You're a wonderful liar, you are," was his surly greeting, "with your pipe dreams about secret passageways and stolen pearls."

"What do you mean?" I replied. I had not the least idea what he was getting at.

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "If it wasn't that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand," I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute truth."

"Yes, it has!" he sneered.

Ordinarily I would have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reasserting:

"I tell you it is all true—every word of it."

"The old man's home—old Rufus," he responded irrelevantly.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly, "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and we went over the case together. He suggested that we go up to the Granddeck and look over the apartment, and we did. The minute we got in he went to the wall safe and opened it up and—"

Gorman stopped short and looked at me. It seemed to me that there were doubt and distrust in his expression.

"Go on," I cried, "what did you find?"

"We found," he said, speaking slowly and putting special emphasis on his third word, "two jewel boxes there, the one with the pearls and the other one."

"What," I cried, aghast at this incredible bit of news, "two jewel cases!"

"Sure we did," he announced triumphantly. "And the pearls were there as safe as when the old man went away. Now what have you got to say to that?"

What could I say?

I knew as positively as I knew that I was alive that on that Saturday when I had opened the wall safe to put away my money there had been but one of the jewel boxes there. I had taken it out and had examined its contents again. With the aid of a lighted match I had explored every corner of the steel-lined receptacle. The box containing the pearls and the rest of the valuables in the Gaston collection was gone. Now the pearls were safely back there again. How could that be explained? The mystery was too much for me.

There was not the slightest reason for me to believe that Gorman was lying to me now. I had found him in all our dealings straightforward and candid. If he said he had seen great-uncle Rufus find the pearls there it must be so, but how could they have got there? Could it be possible, I wondered, that subconsciously, burdened with the responsibility of the custody of such costly gems, I might have risen in my sleep and in a somnolent state removed the pearls to some other hiding place. No, I decided, that theory was too preposterous and absurd for even a moment's consideration. If I had done that in my sleep I must also have restored them to the safe again in my sleep. It was far more likely that the thief, becoming alarmed over the publicity brought to the Granddeck by the murder, had been afraid to attempt to dispose of gems so well-known as the Gaston pearls and had restored them in the same mysterious way that he had abstracted them. I suggested this theory to Gorman.

Lead and Steel.

Lead is said to act like steel at ordinary temperatures in liquid air. It will serve as a helical spring, for example. This behavior of soft non-elastic metals is interesting. It shows how very important temperature is. Just as lead is soft and inelastic at a slightly cold state, so [illegible] is cold and soft at ordinary temperatures. But it is quite

After Thorough Trial a Detroit, Mich., Man Endorses Pe-ru-na

The following letter written from Detroit, Michigan is no snap judgment expressed on the merits of Pe-ru-na, the well-known catarrh remedy, but rather a mature, sober opinion formed after a full year's trial.

This is the way Mr. Michael Fako of 906 East Palmer Avenue, in the Michigan Metropolis, writes: "After using PE-RU-NA for about one year will say I have found it a very good medicine for catarrh. It has helped me a great deal and I am very well satisfied. I have gained in weight, eat and sleep well, my bowels are regular and better color in my face.

"PE-RU-NA has done wonders and to me is worth its weight in gold. I shall continue to use PE-RU-NA as long as I live and recommend to my friends who are troubled with catarrh."

Nothing can be more convincing than an endorsement of this nature from an actual user. There are many people in every community whose experience, in using Pe-ru-na, has been identical with Mr. Fako's. It is the standby for coughs, colds, catarrh, stomach and bowel disorders and all catarrhal conditions.

GOOD GROCER GOOD MEDICINE

An East Nashville Grocer Says He Has Used Black-Draught for Years, Whenever Troubled With Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.—"You ask me about Black-Draught. It is without doubt the best liver medicine made and I don't believe I could get along without it," declared Mr. W. B. Parsons, recently.

Mr. Parsons, who is a prominent grocer at 243 North First street, says further: "I take it (Black-Draught) for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver. I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Thedford's Black-Draught, which has been in successful use for more than 70 years, is a medicine especially adapted to the treatment of many liver troubles. It has proved helpful to thousands and thousands of persons suffering from stomach and liver complaints, and should be helpful to you.

Black-Draught is easy to take and has not the bad after-effects, so common with many mineral drugs.

T. E. WILLIAMS ON CITY COUNCIL AT ALBANY

We are in receipt of a copy of the Albany-Decatur Daily of last week which gives the result of the municipal election of Albany on Monday. We are particularly impressed by the fact that Mr. T. E. Williams was elected Councilman of the First Ward of the City of Albany by a good plurality over two opponents. Mr. Williams received 686 votes, his nearest opponent received 558, and the third man received 448.

Mr. Williams is a Clanton man who is now connected with the Morgan County National Bank at Albany. It is useless to state here that he is making good in the north Alabama city, as the vote which he received in the municipal election is sufficient testimony to his standing. Mr. Williams was born and reared on a farm in Chilton County. Upon reaching young manhood he engaged in teaching in the county public schools, and later went into the employ of the Peoples Savings Bank. When the First State Bank was organized in 1917 he went with that institution as Cashier. From that position he went to the army and was commissioned a lieutenant. At the close of the war when discharged from the service he went with the Morgan County National Bank at Albany, where he has attained imminent success. The many friends of Mr. Williams throughout Chilton County will be pleased to learn of his good fortune.

Mr. W. Y. Nix of Maplesville was a visitor to Clanton last Monday. He made a short visit to the Banner office and enjoyed by the editor.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Polly Anna Club Entertained

One of the most delightful social events of the past week was when Mrs. John C. Page entertained the Polly Anna Club, at the lovely home of Mrs. J. Q. Wade last Wednesday afternoon. The entire apartments were made bright, pretty with roses and pot plants. The afternoon was spent in playing "42", after which the hostess assisted by Mesdames Collier and Wade served an ice course to about fifteen guests.

Mrs. Heard Entertains.

Mrs. V. J. Heard was hostess on Saturday evening at an informal Bridge Party, as a special courtesy to Miss Kathleen Collinsworth The guests were received by Miss Mary Heard. Five tables were arranged for the game in the hall and dining room(which were made attractive with pretty vases of garden flowers. At the conclusion of the game a delicious salad plate was served. Mrs. Eric Hart held highest score and was awarded a pretty hand made handkerchief, while Miss Collinsworth was presehted with a similar gift. The guests included Mrs. Watts Moore, Mrs. John VanDerveer, Mrs. Eric Hart, Mrs. Erin Luckie, Mrs. Guy Roberts, Mrs. John M. Bridges, Mrs. Macy Jones, Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mrs. Guy Higgins, Mrs. Harvey Chandler, Mrs. Grady Reynolds, Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Mrs. Thad McSwain.

Misses Kathleen Collinsworth, Bettie Mullins, Lurline Harper, Louise Orr, Lessie Reynolds, Roberta Curry and Leona Pipes.

Mrs. Joe Askins visited friends in Montgomery Sunday.

Mrs. Grady Reynolds Hostess.

One of the most delightful social afafir of the week was given Wednesday by Mrs. Grady Reynolds, when she was hostess to the members of the Wednesday Bridge Club, and a few invited guests. Mrs. Reynolds' home was never lovelier than on this occasion, with its lovely decorations of ferns and marigolds, and the soft light from the chandeliers falling over all made it indeed a scene of loveliness. After several hours spent in playing Bridge a most tempting salad plate with ice tea was served. The score prize, a dainty handkerchief, fell to Mrs. Hugh Simpson, while Mrs. John Bridges won guest prize, a piece of Pyrex.

Sunday School Class Meets.

The E. C. Maye S. S. Class enjoyed a most delightful social gathering at the home of Mrs. Hugh Simpson on Friday evening, when the following programme on Faith was rendered: Song, "Praise Ye," Victrola; Scripture Reading, Hebrew 11, by Mrs. Barney Roberts; Paul's Prayer, Class; Reading 20th Psalm, Mrs. Luckie; Helps from the Sanctuary, Mrs. E. C. Maye. After the program and business session a tempting salad plate was served.

Mr. and Mrs. John Newell and attractive children spent a few days with her parents, enroute to Dadeville, for a visit to Mr. Newell's parents.

Mrs. Marion Foshee spent Friday in Birmingham.

Visitor Honored.

The home of Mrs. H. T. Pipes was very attractive on Thursday evening, with quantities of ferns and yellow garden flowers arranged effectively, when Miss Leone Pipes informally entertained at Bridge. The inspiration of this affair was Miss Kathleen Collinsworth of Atlanta, Ga., who is her house guest. After several games of Bridge a delicious ice course was served to Mrs. Guy Roberts, Mrs. Harvey Chandler, Mrs. Ervin Luckie, Mrs. John M. Bridges, Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mrs. Victor Heard, Mrs. Grady Reynolds, Mrs. Thad McSwain, Misses Roberta Curry, Kathleen Collinsworth Lurline Harper, Willie Belle Sartor, Lessie Reynolds, and Louise Orr.

Tuesday Bridge Club Meets.

Mrs. Harvey Chandler was a delightful hostess on Tuesday evening at her home when she entertained the Tuesday Evening Bridge Club and several invited tables, complimenting Miss Lurline Harper and Miss Kathleen Collinsworth. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion in white and pink. Roses being used in profusion. After several hours spent in playing "42" and Bridge the hostess assisted by Mrs. Will Adams, served an ice course. Each guest of honor was presented a lovely box of powder, while the consolation of dainty crepe de chine hendkerchief was drawn for and fell to Miss Lessie Reynolds.

Mrs. Toll Marcus is the guest of Dr. Marcus' family.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ORGANIZED AT FRIENDSHIP BAP. CHURCH

As announced last week, the members of Friendship Baptist Church met last Sunday night, a little while before time for preaching and organized a Sunday School. A full corps of officers and teachers was elected, and everything arranged for Sunday School to be held next Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

Rev. W. P. Lowery filled his regular appointment here Sunday and Sunday night, before a good crowd at each service. A cordial invitation is extended to all on the regular preaching days, the fourth Sunday and night following. Also an evergreen prayer meeting is held every Sunday night, which is well attended and very interesting to all.

Visitors are always welcome to any and all of these services.

Mr. Haynes Funeral.

Funeral services over the remains of Mr. Haynes were held from the family residence on Sunday p.m. at 230 o'clock. Interment in Clanton Cemetery.

THE JOINT DEBATE

On Wednesday of last week there were quite a number of political fans who went from here to Columbiana to hear the joint debate between Judge Reynolds and Senator Underwood, and Judge Longshore and Judge Brandon. The reports which they brought back indicate that it was a mighty interesting speaking with all the campaign orators on both sides fighting desperately to sway the sentiment in their favor.

Senator Underwood was the first to speak. He, like Fritz Thompson, was in the biggest kind of a hurry, and as soon as he had made his speech had to leave. It is a pity he could not stay and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. We wish Osker and Fritz would not get in such hurry to go after they make their speeches. If they would stay and hear some good Republican doctrine, and a little real American ideas about the League of Nations it would do them good.

When Judge Reynolds and Fritz Thompson have their debate at Centerville on October 9th we are going to try to build a fence around the Bibb County Court House so high that Fritz can't jump out and get away just as quick as he makes his little speel.

Rumors are rife in Washington that the Democrats are about to stage a break between President Wilson and Candidate Cox in an eleventh-hour effort to save the Democratic candidate from the terrific handicap of "Wilsonism," which, like a thorn under the saddle-weights, is goading Cox to desperation. It is freely admitted by Democrats that Wilson is Cox's "old man of the sea," and they believe that the political Sinbad of Ohio must rid himself of the Wilson incubus if anything is to be salvaged from the wreckage of Democratic hopes.

A NIGHTMARE

Some Democrats of the South, and especially the hide-bound "solid" news papers, are seeing snakes, nightmares, niggers and many other imiginary scare crows in the report that is coming out from the Democratic notional committee to the effect that Representative Siegel, of New York, has already drafted a bill to go before the next Congress (provided it is Republican) cutting down the representation of Southern States, or forcing these States to let the negroes and illiterates vote. We don't believe the negroes of the South ought to vote and we don't believe a white man or woman ought to be denied the right of suffrage because he or she may not be able to read and write. But if the Northern States are going to be represented in Congress according to the vote they poll, then we do not see why the South should not be willing to come under the same rule.

Prof. H. C. McDonald of Wetumpka was in Clanton last Friday. He came up to see the foot ball game between Wetumpka and Clanton. His many friends here were glad to shake hands with him again.

Trend Growing Toward Republicans in the Senate Fights in Several States

USUAL CLOSE STATES RALLY AGAINST LEAGUE

WOMEN A BIG FACTOR

Republicans Hoping to Gain Seven Seats, Including Kentucky And Maryland.

ILLINOIS IS IN DANGER

Lenroot Looks Safe in Wisconsin, and Spencer Runs Well In Missouri.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Within the last few days reports have been received by political managers in Washington from states where close Senatorial contests are being waged giving for the first time what is regarded as a fairly accurate indication of the political complexion of the Senathe in the next Congress. These reports are especially encouraging to the Republican managers who a few weeks ago were worried about the Senate, in spite of their confidence in the success of the presidential ticket.

Until recently the Democrats seemed to have some ground for their hope that they might be able to overturn the slim Republican majority of two in the Senate, because of the factional differences over purely local questions in several close states and the uncertainey as to which way the new women voters would go on the paramount issue of the campaign—the Wilson League of Nations.

But it now appears that except in one or two instances these differences have been ironed out, and at the same time the women have shown in the Republican landslide in Maine, as well as in the New Hampshire and other primaries, that they will go to the extent of forgiving Republicans who opposed giving them the vote in order to register their overwhelming disapproval of the Wilson policies.

Not only are the Republicans now less apprehensive of losing any of their forty-nine seats in the Senate, but they believe they have a splendid chance to increase their majority. For instance, they are turning their attention to Maryland and Oklahoma, two states which were not seriously taken into their calculations of the Senate situation several weeks ago, but which now hold out possibilities of Republican Senatorial gains. As a further illustration of the increasing confidence of the Republican managers they are getting under way a vigorous campaign against Senator Overman of North Carolina on the admittedly remote chance of picking up a Republican Senator in that Southern State.

Trend Toward Republicans.

While bending their principal effort to elect Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge on the presidential ticket, the Republican managers are not losing sight for a minute of the fact that it is the Senate that must decide the question of this country's future relations with the war torn world, whether the United States shall remain true to its traditional policy of absolute independence of action, or enter the Wilson League of Nations. While it would be too much to say that the Senate is not in doubt, the trend noticeable within the last two weeks toward the Republicans.

Upon the league issue alone the Wilson Democrats are finding themselves in a worse hole than ever. Senator Hoke Smith, a lukewarm or half way opponent of the Wilson League, was defeated in the Georgia primaries, which are equivalent to an election, by Tom Watson, a bitter end opponent of the league. So that it appears that the league advocates cannot find much comfort even in the Democratic outlook.

Of the thirty-four senatorial elections to be held this autumn, fifteen are in states now represented by Republicans and nineteen in states now represented by Democrats. Only one third of the Senate or thirty-two members are regularly elected every two years, but on this occasion there are two vacancies to be filled for the long term, or six years, caused by the death of Senator Bankhead of Alabama and Senator Martin of Virginia.

The Republicans have good chances to gain Senators in Kentucky, Nevada, South Dakota, Idaho, California, Maryland, and Colorado, as things look now, and they may make a gain of one each in Oregon and Oklahoma if there should be a Republican landslide for the presidential ticket. In Florida, Louisiana, Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Arizona, and Alabama (two senators) the election of Democrats is conceded, with the possible exception of North Carolina as explained above. That is to say the Republicans have hope in nine states.

Democrats Not Disheartened.

To offset this situation the Democrats are encouraged by Republican factional troubles to hope for gains of one each in North Dakota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Utah and Missouri, five states while they are making claims of further Senatorial gains in Indiana, Ohio, Connecticut and New York, four states more.

There is conceded to be no real chance for Democratic gains in Iowa, Kansas, Washington, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New Hampshire. The Democrats thought they had a chance to defeat Senator Moses (N.H.) on account of his bitter end fight on the league and his opposition to woman suffrage, but the wise heads among their managers have lost this hope since the big victory of Senator Moses in reecnt primaries.

Although vigorous Senatorial campaigns are being fought in fully 20 states, both sides admit that the complexion of the Senate after March 4, 1920, will be decided probably in about twelve state. Only two states east of the Mississippi River hold out hopes of Republican gains—Maryland and Kentucky. Senator John Walter Smith, Democrat, is a candidate for reelection in Maryland, but internal Democratic strife promises a close race between him a nd O. E. Weller, Republican, formerly State Attorney General. Kentucky has a Republican Governor for the first time in many years, and the Republicans have a strong hope of electing Richard P. Ernest of Covington, who is running against Senator Beckham, Democrat, George Morrow and "Tobe" Hert, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, have taken their coats off and are doing their level best to win their home state for the Republican ticket. Both sides admit that it is a close race.

In Souh Dakota Gov. Norbeck, Republican, is opposing U.S.G. Cherry, Democrat, and is a very strong candidate. Were it not for the fact that there are two independent candidates in the field, one on the Non-Partisan League, which defeated Senbeck's election to the Senate would seem to be a certainty. In North Dakota the complication of the Non-Partisal League, which defeated Senator Gronna for the Republican nomination, putting E. F. Ladd, a college professor and farmer, on the combined ticket, gives the Democrats a very good chance for a gain, for it is expected that a good many old line Republicans will support the Democratic nominee, H. H. Perry, rather than Ladd.

Lenroot's Chances Improve.

Senator Lenroot has won the Republican nomination in Wisconsin over the bitter opposition of Senator La Follette, and the Democrats think they have a chance to profit by the Lenroot-La Follette squabble and to elect Paul S. Reinsch, former Ambassador to China, but the latest information is that Senator Lenroot is getting the best of it.

The acrimonious battle between Gov. Lowden of Illinois and Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago for control of the State has put Illinois in the doubtful column. The contest between Representative Frank B. Smith, who is the Thompson candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination, and Representative William B. McKinley, supported by Lowden, probably will not be decided until certain sealed ballot boxes are opened this week. The Republicans will have to get busy "making up" in order to prevent the loss of a Senate seat here to the Democrats.

The Democrats have a good fighting ground in Missouri, where former Assistant of State Breckenridge M. Long is running on the Democratic ticket against Senator Spencer, Republican. The state is always close. Scandal in the Republican camp in connection with the pre-convention campaign of Gov. Lowden of Illinois for the Republican presidential nomination has disturbed the situation, but on the other hand the Democrats are in a turmoil because of the bitter opposition of Senator Reed, Democrat, colleague of Senator Spencer, to the Wilson administration, and particularly the League of Nations.

Idaho, home of Senator Borah, leader of the anti-league forces in the Senate, is torn wide open with a contest between Senator Nugent, Democrat, and former Gov. Frank Gooding, Republican, who is running on an anti-league ticket. The issue is clear cut and the Republicans are bending every effort to make a gain there, as they also are in Nevada, where the present incumbent, Senator Henderson, is being opposed by former Gov. Tasker Oddie, Republican. The National Womens party is supporting Anne Martin.

Anti-Wilson Revolt in Colorado.

There is a wide-spread revolt against the administration in Colorado. Senator Thomas, the present incumbent, is a strong opponent of the league and refused to stand for renomination on the Democratic ticket. The Republicans hope to elect Karl C. Schuyler of Denver. Representative John W. Harreld is the Republican candidate for the Senate in Oklahoma. He has a better chance to win than any Republican has had in recent years in that State because of the intense feeling engendered in the Democratic ranks when Senator Gore was defeated for reomination on the Democratic ticket by Representative Scott Ferris.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah is having the fight of his political life to keep his seat on the Republican side of the Senate. The radical element in the State is after his scalp and the Democrats think they have a good opportunity to elect their man, Representative Frank Welling. The personal popularity of Senator Chamberlain of Oregon makes it hard for the Republicans to gain a seat there, but they are making a hard fight in behalf of their candidate, Robert L. Stansfield.

The Republicans are practically certain to gain a Senator in California. Every county in the state has many more registered Republican voters than Democrats. Senator Phelan, Democrat, who is running for re election, only won in 1914 in a three-cornered fight and received but a little more than one-third on the total vote. The Republican candidate is Samuel Shortridge, who is regarded as a reactionary and may lose some liberal Republican votes on that account.

Big Battle in Three States.

New York, Ohio and Indiana are, as usual, the scenes of big Senatorial battles this year. It is practically conceded, however, that whichever party elects its presidential ticket this year also will win the Senatorial contests in these States. Former Gov. Frank Willis, a pronounced "dry" is the Republican candidate in Ohio against William Alexander Julian, Democrat, a "wet", and at the present writing the trend is toward Willis. Former Senator Tom Taggart is running on the Democratic ticket in Indiana against Senator Watson, Republican. It is expected that Taggart will make a fine showing, running ahead of the national Democratic ticket, but the latest reports indicate the election of Senator Watson.

In New York the Senatorial race is between Senator Wadsworth, Republican, and Lieut.Gov. Harry W... Democrat. The former's opposition to woman suffrage may hurt him, although there has been no indication to date that the women are letting this interfere with their judgment of the candidates, now that they have won the ballot. It is doubtful whether Tammany can make a good enough showing this year to overcome the normal up-state majority for Wadsworth. An interesting phase of this contest is the candidacy of Dr. E. A. Boole on the Prohibition ticket.

Senator Brandegee, Republican, has a fight on his hands for re-election in Connecticut, but the situation is beginning to look brighter there for the Republicans.

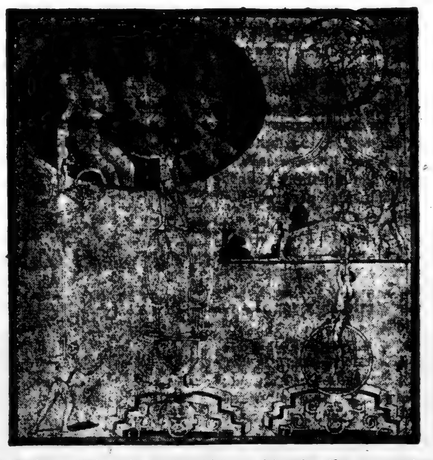
RUDI BELLONG TRIO
NOVELTY OF QUALITY



The Budi Bellong Trio will present a most wonderful display of inventive ingenuity in magnificent new feats at the Alabama State Fair, October 4 to 9. The woman looping the loop on a bicycle, the apparatus balanced on the shoulders of her partners is a real thriller. To describe the act as the world's most sensational attraction is in no sense exaggeration.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE OCTOBER 7 AND 8

County Superintendent of Education, Howard L. Foshee, has been informed by the State Department of Education that October 7 and 8 have been set for the date of the Chilton County Teachers Institute for this year. The place of holding the Institute will be the Chilton County High School Building.

It is suggested by the State Department that all the District School Trustees of the county be present at the Institute on the closing day at the eleven o'clock hour. The purpose of having the trustees present is in order to have an opportunity to discuss with them some of the problems that are now confronting the cause of education. This discussion with the trustees will be made by a representative of the State Department of Education and the county superintendent. It will be a valuable and very helpful thing for the trustees.

All white teachers of the county are expected to attend all the sessions of the institute on these two days, October 7 and 8.

REYNOLDS AND THOMPSON TO HAVE JOINT DISCUSSION OCT. 9

Judge Reynolds will go to Centerville on October 9th to engage Fritz Thompson in another joint debate on political issues of the present campaign. On the night of the 9th they will debate at Blocton. This is going to be an interesting piece of political hairpulling. We hope that an agreement will be made between the speakers in advance that Fritz must stay in the house and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. He should not be allowed to run away like he did over at Columbiana.

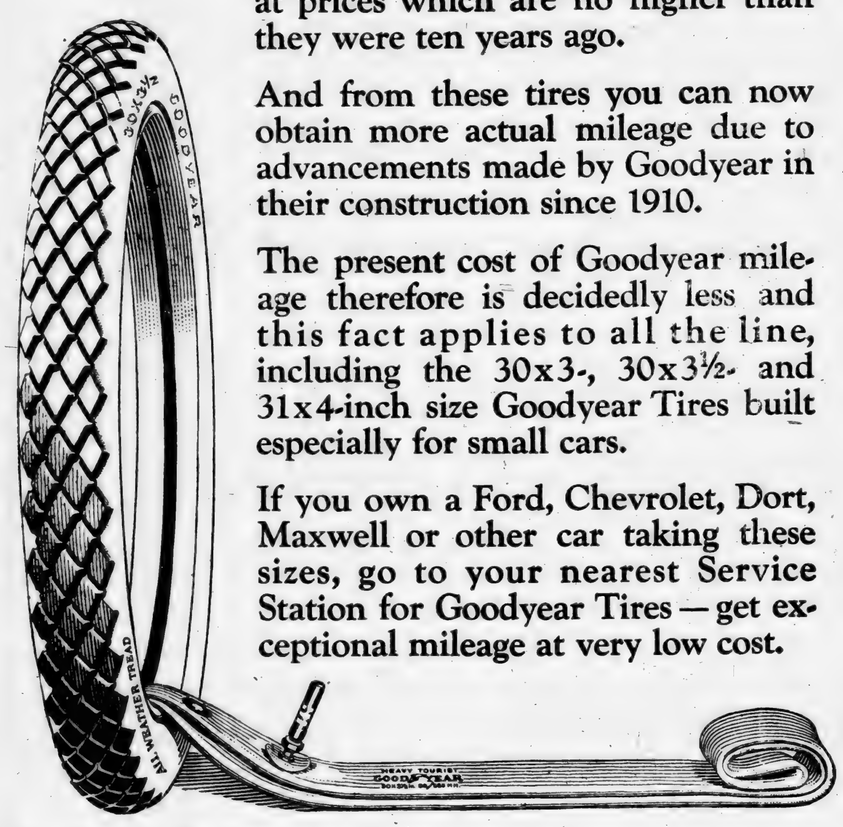
Tire Mileage Increased and Cost Reduced—for Small Cars



You can buy Goodyear Tires today at prices which are no higher than they were ten years ago.

And from these tires you can now obtain more actual mileage due to advancements made by Goodyear in their construction since 1910.

The present cost of Goodyear mileage therefore is decidedly less and this fact applies to all the line, including the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch size Goodyear Tires built especially for small cars.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—get exceptional mileage at very low cost.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.
By the Governor:
WM. P. COBB,
Secretary of State.

Wonderful Running Races to Mark Fair

Speedy Horses Will Compete for Splendid Purses in Series of Events On Alabama Track.

Alabama's most brilliant, most entertaining, most helpful state fair is well on its way toward completion. Arrangements for the biggest exhibition ever attempted in the state are almost complete and little remains to be done to put the finishing touches to the most spectacular program ever to mark a Southern fair.

The dates, October 4 to 9, already are fixed in the minds of Alabamians all over the state and Birmingham is expecting the greatest crowd ever to pour into the Magic City for the annual exhibition.

In addition to a wonderous display of agricultural exhibits the fair management has arranged one of the most attractive programs ever attempted at a similar exhibition. It includes five days of horse racing and a sixth day of marvelous automobile races.

The first day's program includes a three-quarter mile dash for a prize of 250; a five-eighth mile dash for a $100 prize and a one and one-eighth mile dash for a purse of $100. The second day will see a five-eighths mile dash for a $100 prize, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $200, while another $200 purse will be awarded in the one-mile dash. For the third day a one-mile dash for $250 in prize money, a three-fourths mile dash for a $250 purse, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $250, and a one-half mile dash for a $100 prize have been arranged. The fourth day will be marked by a seven-eighths mile dash with a prize of $150, a three-fourths mile dash for a prize of $200, a five-eighths mile dash for prize money amounting to $150, and the Alabama State Fair Derby, a one and one-fourth mile dash for a purse of $500. The fifth and final day of the horse racing will see a one-mile dash for a prize of $100, a three-fourths mile dash for $150 in prizes and the one-mile dash, consolation race, for a purse of $200.

Keep Your Blood Pure Nature Will Do the Rest

Did you know that ninety per cent of all human ailments depend upon the condition of your blood?

Nature gives her warnings in various unmistakable ways, so that when the appetite fails, and you become weak and listless and a general run-down condition seems to take possession of the whole body, it is an unfailing sign that impurities will steadily accumulate until your general health will be seriously affected. You should recognize the importance, therefore, of very promptly cleansing out the system, and keeping the blood supply pure and robust.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at your drugstore to day, and note how promptly it builds up the appetite and gives new strength and vitality. Write for free literature and medical advice to Chief Medical Adviser, 153 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta. Ga.

Tells How Ziron Iron Tonic Helped His Daughter After Operation for Appendicitis.

AFTER any serious illness, the first thing you notice when you begin to get around is your lack of strength and energy—a tired, weak feeling.

The sooner you get your strength back the better. The thing to do is to eat plenty of good, nourishing food, get all the fresh air you can, exercise conservatively, and take Ziron Iron Tonic three times a day.

Your doctor will tell you this is sound advice, and urge you to follow it.

Read this letter from Mr. J. B. Kelly, vice-president of the First National Bank, Graceville, Fla.: "My daughter had been in bad health since last April. She was operated on for appendicitis. She has been taking Ziron for two weeks. Her appetite is better than it has been. Her nerves are better, and she says she feels better . . . I know that Ziron is good for weak and feeble people."

Ziron is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, prepared from valuable strength-building ingredients, for weak people with thin blood. Druggists sell Ziron on a money-back guarantee. Try it.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 93. The State shall not engage in works of internal improvement nor lend money or its credit in aid of such, nor shall the State be interested in any private or corporate enterprises or lend money or its credit to any individual association or corporation, provided that the State may under appropriate laws cause the net proceeds from the convict fund to be applied to the construction, repair and maintenance of public roads in the State, and the legislature may also make additional appropriations for that purpose; and, provided further, that the foregoing prohibitions shall not apply to the promotion, development or operation of harbors or seaports within the State or its jurisdiction, provided, further, that any such work or improvements shall always be and remain under the management and control of the State through its State Harbor Commission or other governing agency and provided further that the adoption of this amendment shall not affect any other amendment to the Constitution which may be adopted pursuant to any resolution of this session of the Legislature."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,

Thrills Will Follow Fair Auto Polo Games

WORSE THAN BUCKING BRONCHOS.

There is a thrill that is irresistable, a tense, gripping attraction about auto polo that never has been equalled for lovers of skillful sports. The swift turning of the miniature motor cars, the desperate chances taken by the players, the constant danger, all combine to make up a pastime that can not be surpassed.

Some of the finest auto polo players in the world have been engaged for the games at the Alabama State Fair which takes place at the Fair Grounds in Birmingham October 4 to 9. These men will engage in a series of games that have made the modern version of the old pony, mallet and ball pastime the king of all sports.

One of the features that makes auto polo so fascinating is the almost superhuman control of motor cars required. Where in the old type of auto polo the player may largely depend upon the intelligence of his mount, the new game requires minute and constant attention to the machine. The well trained polo pony often of his own volition will turn upon his heels and scamper off down the field in pursuit of the elusive white sphere. But the auto polo player must throw over his wheel, turn his car upon the smallest possible space and steer his conveyance after the ball without anything except his own skill as a driver to depend upon.

Automobile polo has become a popular pastime in the South and has been specially well received by visitors to the Alabama State Fair. The fair management this year has arranged a series of games that is far above the ordinary for skill, daring and fascination. No one who dotes on blood-pulsing situations, daring flirtations with death, unsurpassed motor driving can afford to miss these games.

This one attraction, aside from the multitude of other drawing cards at the State Fair, is calculated to bring to the Fair Grounds thousands of thrill seekers, and none of these visitors will be disappointed when the auto polo games actually get under way.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY

What The Company Asks

The Company asks to earn only such profits as are necessary to protect the rights of the public.

The public needs and demands adequate and efficient service, now and in the future.

To furnish this service, additional facilities, costing many million dollars must be constructed.

This money must be gotten from the investing public.

Investors will not put their money into an established business unless they are sure of a fair and adequate return upon their investment.

They cannot receive a fair and adequate return upon their investment unless the business earns a fair and just profit.

The investor is guided by the profits earned in the past, and the prospects of profits to be earned in the future.

When the Company's profits are such as will enable it to obtain from the investing public the money needed to furnish adequate facilities to supply the demand for service, its earnings will be fair and reasonable.

A fair and reasonable profit is as necessary for the protection of the rights of the public as it is for the protection of the property rights of the Company.

What return is a fair and just profit depends upon general economic conditions.

What was a fair and just profit in 1914 is not a fair and just profit in 1920.

The investor is entitled to, and demands, the same return upon his money invested in the telephone business as he receives on money invested in other businesses.

The profits earned in other businesses determine what profits the telephone business must earn.

The available supply of money for investments is limited. The opportunity and demand for new capital is unprecedented.

The telephone business must compete with all other businesses, public and private, for this money.

The investor will put his money in the enterprise which assures him the best return.

To protect the rights of the public to receive adequate service, the profits of the Telephone Company must be sufficient to attract the investing public.

To do this the Company must earn as much as ten per cent upon its investment.

The Company's investment is all physical property: poles, wires and equipment exclusively used in furnishing telephone service. No franchise, going value or any intangibles are included, nor is there any bonds, stocks or other forms of capitalization involved.

The amount of the Company's investment is what it originally cost to construct its physical property; the "bare bones" of its telephone plant. Practically all of the plant was constructed at low pre-war prices.

Its present value today is much greater than its original cost.

To reproduce the Company's plant at today's prices, after making full allowance for its present condition, would cost 80 per cent more than the investment.

Ten per cent return upon the investment is less than 6 per cent upon the value of the Company's property.

No one questions the right of the Company to earn a fair and reasonable return upon the value of its property.

Measured by the profits earned today in other business in Alabama, the return the Company is asking to earn is a fair and just profit.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held on the proclamation of the Governor, and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law. upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz: The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A. D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging, on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals.

Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and empower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 hereof.

Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constituton of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized.

Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads—by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise and passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilites, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties.

Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become a force and effect immediately this amendment is so ratified.

Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By Ewell Robinson, Editor.)

The entire student body has been very busy for the past week standing monthly examinations.

The attendance of the school is almost perfect. Out of a total of nearly one hundred and sixty pupils only a very few are absent or tardy each day.

Seniors.

The Seniors recently met and organized their class. Officers were elected as follows:

President, Jewel Davis; Vice President, Carole Pipes; Secretary, Joe Higgins; Treasurer, Vera Gillespie; Class Prophet, Jewel Popwell; Poet, Estelle Webb; Musician, Ruth Aldridge; News Reporter, Jewel Popwell; Orator, Leon Evans; Goat, Jewel Gore.

Records show that the Senior Class is the largest in the history of the school.

Juniors.

The Junior Class has been organized and officers elected, as follows:

President, Jennye Robinson; Vice President, Cleo Broadnead. Secretary Hoyt Reynolds; Musician, Eufala Mahan; Poet, Mary Kennedy; Historian, Clara Crumpton; Class Reporter, Bertha Dennis; Goat, Norman Roberts; Colors, Black and Gold; Flowers, Black eyed Susans.

Sophomores.

The Sophomores have elected the following officers for the term:

President, Elly Daniel; Vice President, John Burnett; Secretary and Treasurer, Gertye Mae Davis; Musician, Edythe Robinson; Poet, Clara Vines; Class Reporter, Maud Wagoner; Goat, Eloise Kemp; Class Colors, Pink and Green; Class Flowers, Dorthy Perkins Roses; Motto, "B2."

Athletics.

On last Friday the Wetumpka Aggies encountered the strong line of the Chilton County Foot Ball Team. The game was very close and well played throughout.

In the first quarter the Aggies succeed a forward pass for only touchdown, then the Chilton lines of defense tightened and did not allow the Aggies to cross the goal line again.

During last half the ball remained in the center of the field, changing hands often but without much progress by either team.

Wetumpka Boys Entertained.

The boys of the Wetumpka team were delightfully entertained by a social given by Miss Jewel Gore. A number of guests punch was served by Miss Jewel Minor.

Many games were enjoyed throughout the evening.

Girls Team Organized.

The girls have organized an Athletic Association and are planning to play several games soon. All the girls seem to be interested and we expect to have a winning team this year.

Literary Society.

Both the Julia Tutwiler and the Lanerian Societies held their first meeting on Friday p.m. Splendid programs were rendered by both.

Rivalry between the two societies causes much interest to be taken and good work to be accomplished.

Judge Reynolds went up to Clio Grove above Jemison Monday night and made a speech. He states that the crowd was good, a great number of ladies present, and much interest manifest. The women of Chilton County are deeply interested in politics and they will be quick to register and take advantage of their suffrage privileges.

FEDERAL ROAD BUILDING AID

Highway Construction Hampered by Transportation Difficulties and Lack of Material.

In addition to $19,000,000 for forest road construction, congress has made available to July 1, 1920, the sum of $275,000,000 for federal aid roads. Of this sum $175,000,000 was available up to and including June 30, 1920. Of this amount the states had made application covering $152,198,040 as of April 30. This federal aid is to apply on 27,796 miles of road estimated to cost $355,754,799. As of May 1st 13,540 miles of federal aid road were under construction, involving over $86,000,000 in federal aid. The total mileage of completed road built under the federal aid law since it became operative in 1916 is 4,301.15 miles, as of May 1, 1920, an average rate of construction of over 1,000 miles a year.

The difficulties of transportation, the lack of materials, the insufficient number of contracting organizations, the scarcity of adequate equipment and the general shortage of engineering personnel in connection with highway construction during the past two years have reduced road building activities to about 3-7 of the full program. The bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture is ready, the states are ready, the funds are available to push highway construction on a 100 per cent program as soon as the national economic conditions will warrant.

MAINTENANCE OF DIRT ROAD

Essential That No Water Be Permitted to Remain on Surface—Repair Ruts Quickly.

To maintain an earth road so that it will adequately take care of heavy traffic it is essential first that no water be allowed to stand on the road surface or in the ditches, and secondly that defects occurring in the surface be repaired immediately and in a manner that will form a crust sufficient to maintain the loads and resist the wear caused by traffic.

The first can be accomplished only by grading and draining the road in a manner that will permit water to drain quickly from the surface after every rain, and the second by adding clay and sand in the proper proportions as required, shaping up the surface with a light grader, and keeping the traveled surface smooth and even with the road planer, after which the earth surface eventually becomes smooth and impervious to water. The result is an extremely satisfactory road at a very low cost to the public.

SAVE KANSAS MANY DOLLARS

Engineering Experiment Station Tests All Materials to Be Used in Road Building.

The road materials laboratory of the Kansas engineering experiment station is in charge of the testing of all materials for use on federal aid roads in the state of Kansas. More than 75 car loads of defective cement and bricks submitted for test in the past year have been rejected, thus saving the state many thousands of dollars.

FINANCING SYSTEM OF ROADS

Proper Procedure of County or District Is Matter Open for Much Discussion.

Just how a county or district should proceed to finance a system of roads is a matter open for discussion. It depends upon how rapidly they need them and upon how well they are able to pay, in other words on their valuation and the cost of the work contemplated.

Crown for Earth Roads.

Well maintained earth roads need very little crown. The wider and flatter the earth road, the better, if it has good drainage and is kept constantly smooth.

CALOMEL DANGER TOLD BY DODSON

Says You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone, which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

IT'S WRONG FOR WOMEN TO SUFFER

And women NEED not suffer from the ills peculiar to the sex. STELLA VITAE is an eminent doctor's prescription that for three generations has been RELIEVING suffering women and keeping young girls from BECOMING suffering women.

Sold by your druggist; upon the distinct agreement that if the FIRST BOTTLE gives no benefit, he will refund the money. STELLA VITAE can do no HARM, even if it does no good. Why not TRY it—instead of suffering?

Mrs. Susie Sutton, of Dunmore, Ky. says: "I couldn't stand on my feet an hour without lying down. I used one bottle of STELLA VITAE and now I can be on my feet all day."

COX GAINING VOTES ON HIS STUMPING TOUR

The West Likes His Col. Roosevelt'an Ways, But Not Enough to Turn From Harding.

The following information about the Western tour of Gov. Cox, was sent to the New York Herald by one of their staff correspondents who is assigned to go with the Governor on his speech-making journey:

If the Democrats are to win this election it will have to be done in the East. The West, which put over Mr. Wilson in 1916, is overwhelmingly Republican and determined that there must be a change in the administration. The League of Nations is unpopular. This is the plain situation as it confronted Governor Cox as he traveled along the Pacific Coast. After two days in Southern California the Presidential candidate turned eastward hoping to find better results on the other side of the Rockies.

This Western trip which began on Sept. 2, so far has extended into eleven states—Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and California. This group polls eighty-five votes in the electoral college.

Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California seem surely Republican. These states poll seventy-four electoral votes.

Montana, Utah and Nevada may go Democratic, with eleven electoral votes. Montana seems surely Democratic. In Utah the race will be close, with the odds favoring the Democrats owing to Mormon sentiment for the League of Nations. So far as Nevada is 'concerned, the population is too widely scattered to permit anything like a reliable estimate, but the Democrats claim this state on past results.

The Democrats feel that they may have a chance in the state of Washington, but frankness requires the statement that the hope seems false. Everywhere the sentiment is primarily against the Wilson administration, this including the League of Nations looked upon as a piece of Wilson idealism likely to embroil the United States in every foreign quarrel. The people want a change. It is in the air that this is a Republican year.

Gov. Cox personally is popular. The trip has made him friends. The West likes his scrappy punchy way and his platform actions remind the people of Theodore Roosevelt. In November he will get a bigger vote than if he had not come out this way, but unless there is a complete reversal of sentiment in the remaining weeks of the campaign, the West will go for Harding.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday will be an interesting day at this church. During the Sunday School hour in the morning instead of the regular lesson a special programme will be given by the children in the interests of State Missions and Rally Day. Following the Sunday School hour there will be a Roll Call service of the church, when the names of the membership will be called, and a sermon appropriate to the occasion will be preached. It is hoped and expected that there will be a large representation of the membership present. The morning service will then be followed by the Ordinance of the Lords Supper. This should make a very profitable and enjoyable programme and an impressive morning worship. The interest of the membership of the church will be manifested by their presence at this service.

The Sunbeam Band will meet at 2:30 p.m., Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 6:45 p.m. Preaching service at night beginning at 7:30 p.m. Some special music will be rendered at the night service The nature of this music will be a surprise to those who attend. We cordially invite the general public to all of our services.

The Unity Association meets at Verbena next Tuesday and Wednesday and it is hoped that a large delegation will be present from the Clanton Baptist Church.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

ARMON WAGONER RAISES SAND HERE SUNDAY

Last Sunday about noon Mr. Armon Wagoner, after drinking up all the white lightning he could find, proceeded to get rough with everything in the community and tried to tear up the town in general. The first act of violence which he pulled off was to hit Joe Gray over the head with an automobile crank, breaking Joe's arm and cutting a gash on his scalp. Further activities of Mr. Wagoner brought him into contact with the officers of the law, and when they started to jail with him the racket began in grand style. Those who witnessed the spectacle assert that they never heard anybody so completely cuss out the country in general and the sheriff in particular as did Mr. Wagoner.

After the prisoner had been placed in jail he tore up everything that was not nailed down, but he must have finally decided that he could not get out of "86" so he cooled down to spend the night. Monday morning he was released on bond to await his turn before the bar of justice to give his account of the deeds done during his rampage.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Reduction in Price of Ford Products

The war is over and war prices must go. Effective at once, Ford Cars, Trucks and Tractors will be sold F. O. B. Detroit at the following prices:

Touring	$440.00
Touring with starter	$510.00
Runabout	$395.00
Runabout with starter	$465.00
Chassis	$360.00
Coupe with starter demountable	$745.00
Sedan with starter and demountables	$795.00
Trucks with pneumatics	$545.00
Tractor	$790.00

The Ford Motor Co. makes this reduction in the face of the fact that they have on hand immediate orders for 146,065 cars and tractors, the company will suffer a temporary loss while using up the material bought at high prices. They are willing to make the sacrifice in order to bring business back to a going condition as quickly as possible and maintain the momentum of the buying power of the country. Henry Ford says: "The war is over and it is time war prices were over. There is no sense or wisdom in trying to maintain an artificial standard of values. For the best interest of all it is time a real practical effort was made to bring the business of the country down to regular pre-war standards."

We are at your command with regular Ford efficiency and eagerness to fill your orders.

GRAND JURY SAYS LAW MUST BE ENFORCED IMPARTIALLY

Reports Poor House in Bad Condition; Roads in Bad Shape; County Offices Neatly Kept.

The report of the grand jury of Chilton County last week was short but very pointed in some of its recommendations. The document did not employ great profusion of words, but the things which are said in the report are clear and concise, and easily understood.

Following is the report in full:

To the Honorable B. K. McMorris, Judge of the 19th Judicial Circuit of the State of Alabama.

We, the Grand Jury duly empanelled and sworn for the July term, 1920 of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, beg leave to submit to your Honor this our final report. We have investigated -8 alleged violations of the law and return herewith to your Honor 10 true bills.

We have examined the books of the various county officers and find them correctly and neatly kept so far as they were able to ascertain. The report of the County Treasurer is hereto attached and marked Exhibit "A".

We find that there is sore need for teachers in our public schools. We believe that this is largely due to the inadequate salary paid them.

We have examined the county jail. We find the sanitary condition good and the prisoners are well fed and cared for. One of the cells is in bad need of repairs due to the actions of a drunken prisoner who was recently incarcerated there.

We have the information from reports that have come to this Grand Jury that some of the roads of the county are in bad shape. We believe that this is in a large measure due to the overseers not doing their duty in the enforcement of the road law. There are many who are subject to road duty who have not been required to work at all this year. We wish a more strict enforcement of the road law.

The Grand Jury has received letters and witnesses have appeared before us and reported general violations of the law. We ask that in future those who write letters to this body sign their names and that witnesses who voluntarily come before this body will have something specific to present.

Information has been received that the Sunday law has been enforced with partiality. We warn the law enforcing officers that in the future all laws must be enforced impartially.

We have investigated the conditions at the County Poor House We find the conditions there very deplorable The inmates are poorly clothed and have practically no place to sleep The buildings are in sore need of repair There are 19 inmates, 6 men 12 white women and one colored woman. We ask that the proper authorities take this matter in hand at once. There is immediate need of fuel.

Feeling that we have accomplished all that could be required of us at this term of the Court, we respectfully ask that we be discharged with our thanks to the court solicitor and the county officials for their valuable assistance in our work, subject to the further orders of this court.

LETTER FROM MR. COLLIER

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 6, 1920.

Editor of the Union-Banner:

I shall thank you to allow me a little space in your paper to say to those who voted for me in my recent race for Mayor that I feel under very deep obligation to them for their support, and especially do I thank the good ladies for their support and participation in the election. I feel that I made an excellent race, having been beaten by the small majority of four out of a total of 248.

It has been my intention to contest the election, but I have today definitely decided not to do so. The contest would engender much turmoil and strife and the litigation incident there to would be long-drawn out. Should I win the contest, I would win only a thankless job.

In passing, however, I want to state that I am not quite satisfied with the manner in which the election was pulled off. I am against permitting Ruben L. Reynolds and Dr. Will S. Wilson to vote, when absent from the county, unless they first comply with the absent voting law. Neither of them did this, yet they were permitted to vote. I am also against permitting any one to vote who has not registered in Chilton County. W. A. Wingard and Frank Lockhart voted and so far as I am able to ascertain neither of them has ever registered in Chilton County. It is my understanding Mr. Wingard had not even resided in Chilton County for a year at the time of the election. Frank Lockhart was moved into Clanton on Friday before the election.

However, regardles of what I may think as to the illegality of some of the votes cast against me, I want to felicitate the city's new officials, and here's honing they will have easy sailing.

Yours very truly,
F. B. COLLIER.

PLEASANT GROVE—JEMISON

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to report our singing society and other items of our community.

Our society met Sunday p.m. and sang well, considering the practice we have had. The songs were led by Prof. James Franklin, Messrs Archie Cleckler, J. S. Wright, and George Spivey. The organists were Misses Nora Franklin and Bevie Childress and Mrs. Eddie Childress.

There was a number of visitors from Pates Chapel, among them Mr. and Mrs. Cleckler, the Misses Pate and Maddox, and several young men.

We very cordially invite them to come again. There is nothing that helps like co-operation, so we as a singing society thank these people for their help to try to praise our Creator through our song service. This is one of the greatest parts of the work of the Master for whom the stars and angels once sang together.

Rev. J. D. Deason filled his place as pastor of this church on the fourth Sunday and Saturday before. He has done a good work as pastor, and has been called to serve here for another year. We hope for another successful year of service through his guidance and the co-operation of the church.

All the singing class and all interested are urged to come to Sunday School next Sunday to practice a while before and after Sunday School. Our singing is going dead if we do not meet together and practice more. Every one be sure to be there.

WEST CHILTON

Editor Union-Banner:

Woman Suffrage has been a prominent subject quite a while. And we doubt if the ladies of Chilton County have given it very much consideration. However, the privilege of exercising the right of franchise is now legally theirs.

Woman has worked for this privilege for probably one hundred years; finally she has achieved the victory through her own efforts. Now the ladies have the opportunity of manifesting their appreciation of those efforts of a century by going to the polls and voting their convictions.

Some of the most important questions that have ever confronted America are to be settled this year. How needful that they be settled right. Then regardless of political persuasion, let the ladies take those paramount questions to heart, and vote as they see proper, thus aiding the men in giving America a government truly of the people.

Dr. Dwight of the long ago said "the reign of America is the last and noblest of time." Then in voting for home and American interests let the ladies of Chilton freely exercise their privilege.

FORD TURNED OVER

Frank Patterson related to us Tuesday the story of how a Ford in which he was riding turned over on the road south of Clanton Monday evening. The car was driven by George Guy and Mr. Patterson and Luther Yeargan, postmaster at Verbena, were passengers with him. They were meeting another car on a hill when their machine got too far out on the edge and turned up on one side spilling the men out in the ditch. No one was badly hurt. The car was considerably damaged. Mr. Patterson and [illegible]

J. N. SCOTT IS STILL ALIVE

Irondale, Ala., Oct. 1, 1920.

Dear Editor:

It has been some time since I wrote anything for publication, but here I come for a space in your valued paper.

I want to say that I was glad to know that the Republican party had nominated Judge L. H. Reynolds for U. S. Senator from Alabama, as I know there is not a better man in Alabama for the place, and I am assured of the fact that if he is elected that when he gets to Washington all classes of people in Alabama will get a square deal. Because I know that in the past he has stood for justice toward all men alike; and if we had a Republican Senator from Alabama he would do something for the State. Brother voters, we have plowed with that old Democratic plow over forty years, and I have known for several years that it was almost worn out. Why? Because it is not giving results. Tell me one good deed that Senator Underwood ever did for the people of Alabama, and I will give you two bad ones.

I want to say that the people up in this part of the State are finding out that we need a change, and the most of them that I have talked with say that they are going to vote the Republican ticket this time. As for parties, I want to say that there is not so much in parties, but it is in the man's principles and what he stands for, and a man who will do just what he tells the people he will do. Just as long as we don't have two strong parties we are going to be slaves to our officers. They are bosses instead of servants. We want to vote for men who will serve the people best regardless of party, just like they do in the northern states. When we are willing to do that we will have better times here in the South. Yes, if we would send a majority of Republican Representatives to Montgomery next time we would have things managed better than we have for many years, for they stand for economy and would cut down the expense of the state, until I am sure our dogs would not have to be taxed, and our chickens would be freed from the tax books.

Now, Brother voters, with a prayerful heart, believing that it is the best I ask that we all elect Judge L. H. Reynolds and try a new horse in the City of Washington next time. I will say that I have been rightly informed, as well as know myself, that most of the women voters of Birmnigham are for L. H. Reynolds, because he is for prohibition and for the common people.

Well will close, and if I see this in print I may write again.

Success to all the readers and the Editor, I remain,

J. N. SCOTT.

MARS HILL ITEMS

Dear Editor:

Please spare me one small space to say a few words about this place.

Everybody is doing fine enjoying these beautiful days.

Picking cotton and gathering the rest of the crop is all the go here.

Miss Ida Lovett spent Sunday with Miss Amie Leach.

Mr. Moore and wife are visiting parents at this place.

I have not seen anything about the meeting which was held at Mars Hill the second Sunday in last month. We had a very good meeting with three members being added to the church.

Mr. Dewey Robinson and wife attended the meeting here recently.

There will be a few days meeting at this place the second Sunday.

Mr. Edward Littlejohn is our pastor here now.

Mr. Edgar Durens and family are fixing to move near Tuscaloosa. We have not got any teacher here yet.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL

The Public School at Mt. Pleasant will begin next Monday, October 11, 1920. Miss Annie Gragg and Miss Leona Pipes will be the teachers. The patrons will take notice and be governed accordingly.

—15—

"N thing doing," he sneered. "Any crook daring enough to steal those pearls, once he had got his hands on them, never would return them. Pearls are too easily disposed of. You've got to dig up a better explanation than that."

"What did Mr. Gaston think? What did he say when he found them here?"

"He had nothing to say. He was so tickled at finding them again that he hustled with them right away to the safe deposit vaults and did not rest until he had them safely locked up. He took both jewel cases with him and made me go along with him to protect them."

"Didn't you look at all for the secret passageway I told you about?"

"Still dreaming about that, are you?" scoffed Gorman. "No, we didn't. On the way up to the Granddeck the old man spoke about it and I told him that in my opinion there was nothing to it. After he recovered the pearls he was too excited to think about anything else. It seemed to break him all up, and I took him back to his hotel and left him there. He said he had some writing to do, and that he would meet me at my office at noon today."

"How do you account for the return of the pearls?" I cried desperately. "What's your theory about them?"

"I haven't any," he replied. "It's up to you to explain it. Maybe by the time I come to see you tomorrow you'll have thought up a new yarn to spin."

"Please, please," I called after him as he turned away, "do look tomorrow and see if that secret passage is not where I said it was."

He walked away without answering. Back once more in my cell, I stretched myself despondently on my little iron cot, and closing my eyes, tried to concentrate my thoughts on an attempt to solve this new mystery, which I could plainly see had all but destroyed Gorman's faith in my honesty. I must solve it if I was to retain him in aiding me to get free, yet the whole thing seemed inexplicable. I could hardly blame him for doubting me. The great value of the pearls had been motive enough for their theft, but what possible motive could there have been for the thief returning them?

With a shock it came to me, too, that the restoration of the pearls practically upset the whole theory of my defense. If I could have established the fact of this theft, a jury might be persuaded to believe my tale of anonymous notes, mysterious whispers, and a secret passageway by which the thief had gained access to the apartment, but without the motive of theft, my story, unsupported by witnesses and uncorroborated by other evidence, surely would be incredible of belief.

I had just one hope left. Old Rufus must find that secret passageway and see whither it led. That, with our knowledge of the identity of the telephone girl and the possibility of proving Gorman's belief that Wick was an ex-convict, seemed likely to be my only salvation. Old Rufus must find that passageway. He must! He must!

For hours I lay there racking my brains over the unsolvable problems. My luncheon was brought in, but I waved it away untouched. Wearily I wondered whether the recovery of the pearls had destroyed my aged relative's faith in me, as it seemed to have destroyed Gorman's. I could hardly blame him if he doubted me after finding that my story of the disappearance of the pearls was apparently untrue. In my brief experience as a prisoner I had learned all too well the bitter fact that once a man is discredited, henceforth no one trusts him. If Rufus Gaston failed me at this juncture I did not see how I could possibly extricate myself unscathed from the web that unseen hands had so skillfully and maliciously woven around me. The only ray of comfort that I could find anywhere in the whole situation was in my firm belief that though old Rufus and Gorman and the whole world doubted me, Barbara Bradford—my Barbara, I ventured to call her in my innermost heart—would continue to believe in me. She would be sure, no matter how much appearances went against me, that I was telling the truth. Barbara and I knew. Even if she had not known that I could not possibly have fired the shot that killed Miss Lutan, I was certain that she still would have trusted me.

Thinking about Barbara I recalled that it was the day of her sister's wedding. I had one of the prison attendants get me the evening papers to see what they had to say about it, for I was fearful lest some breath of scandal at the last moment involving the Bradfords might bring about a postponement. Eagerly I was hoping that nothing had happened to prevent the marriage taking place. With the fortunes of her sister assured and her mother's future safe, I realized that the course of my relations with Barbara would be made so much smoother sailing, provided of course that I was acquitted. In the few chats I had had with her, I had realized that wealth and luxury and social position meant nothing to Barbara's happiness. She was the sort of girl who for a man she loved gladly would brave poverty, hardship, everything—a sincere, true-hearted woman with a clear vision of the real values of existence.

My messenger returned with the newspapers, and as I picked them up, everything went black. "Millionaire Gaston Found Murdered," was the startling headline that flashed before me, right there in the column next to the account of the Bradford wedding.

The sinister effect of this terrible news dawned on me instantly. With my great-uncle Rufus dead, without the possibility of his corroborating any part of my story, my case was hopeless, desperate. Unquestionably it would mean that I would be found guilty of murder and sentenced to death in the electric chair. As soon as I could sufficiently compose myself I read every word there was in the newspapers about this new tragedy, smiling grimly at the thought that at least they could not blame this murder on me.

Mr. Gaston, it appeared, had come to the Granddeck about ten o'clock in the morning and had gone at once to his apartment. On his arrival he had been greeted by the telephone girl and had informed her that he was only in the city for a few days and was staying at a hotel. He had added that he would not be occupying the apartment for several weeks until his wife's return to the city. About half-past twelve there had come a telephone call for him. The girl had been unable to get any response from the apartment. Knowing that he had not gone out, and fearing that he might have had a sudden attack of illness, she had become alarmed and notified Mr. Wick, the superintendent.

The superintendent, the account continued, had summoned Mr. Henry Kent, the owner of the Granddeck apartments. Together they had gone to Mr. Gaston's rooms. Being unable to get any reply to repeated rings and knocks they had finally let themselves in with a pass key in possession of the owner of the building.

In his study in the rear of the apartment they were horrified to find old Rufus Gaston, fully clad, lying on the floor, face down, stone dead. A great wound on the back of his head showed that he had been killed, probably instantly, by a terrific blow from some sort of a blunt instrument. A search of the rooms failed to show any sort of a weapon.

The police theory was that the crime was undoubtedly the work of a burglar who had been trapped by the return of Mr. Gaston so unexpectedly to his apartment. How the murderer escaped after attacking Mr. Gaston was a puzzle to the detectives at work on the case. The superintendent of the building expressed the opinion that the murderer had gained access in the guise of a meter inspector. Attendants in the hall recalled that there had been such a man in the building that morning. As he wore the usual uniform and presented the customary credentials, he had been permitted to enter and leave the building unmolested.

There followed a long review of Rufus Gaston's business career and an estimate of some of his extensive holdings in stocks, bonds and real estate, from which it appeared that his fortune was likely to run to over ten million dollars. It was with some surprise that I learned that a score or more of years ago, the old man apparently had been a powerful figure in the life of the metropolis, active both in its business and social life.

"Millionaire Gaston Found Murdered," Was the Startling Headline That Flashed Before Me.

What interested me most was the attention paid to the remarkable coincidence that only a few weeks before a murder had taken place in the apartment just below, under practically the same circumstances. The police, the account stated, were inclined to believe that the murderer was one of the gang to which young Nelson, now in prison charged with the murder of Miss Lutan, undoubtedly belonged. Their theory was that a burglar gang succeeded in planting Nelson in the apartment as a caretaker, and that this enabled them to get their bearings in the building and provide themselves with false keys for ransacking the rooms at their leisure. The guilt of young Nelson, the police say, is established beyond question, and they are hopeful of being able to round up his associates.

There was also a brief interview with Wick, in which he was quoted as saying:

"I was suspicious of Nelson from the start and tried to keep an eye on him. He was very secretive about his comings and goings and was always prying about trying to learn something about the other tenants. How Mr. Gaston came to employ him as caretaker I never learned, but it would be no hard matter for a slick young crook like him to impose on so old a man as Mr. Gaston with a cock and bull story."

I sniffed indignantly as I read this. I knew that Wick was deliberately trying to still further discredit me. I recalled that he himself had told me that Mr. Gaston had mentioned our relationship. It was obvious that he was deliberately withholding this information with a sinister purpose.

That Wick knew well who had killed Rufus Gaston, just as he knew who had shot Daisy Lutan, I was morally certain. I was inclined to agree with Gorman that Wick himself was not the murderer. The fact that he was of a cowardly and cringing nature seemed to argue against associating him actively with crimes of violence. Yet the virulent way in which he was adding to the evidence against me showed plainly that he was industriously engaged in masking the real murderer.

Who could the murderer be? I was confident that the same person who had killed Miss Lutan had killed my great-uncle. I could only conjecture as to the motive. The police theory that it was burglary seemed as logical as any. The more I pondered over the matter the more firmly I became convinced that there was a numerous criminal band at the back of it all. No one man or two men could carry out all the deviltry, even with the help of the telephone girl.

I recalled, too, how I had been skillfully shadowed, work that evidently required organization and employees. I was convinced that Wick and the telephone girl were only two—more than likely two minor members—of a powerful body of criminals. That it was this same sinister force that had caused my discharge from the office I was equally sure. This sort of thing took brains—far bigger brains than Wick gave any evidence of possessing.

A peculiar apathy came over me as I finished reading the account. Never before had I so fully understood how thoroughly an innocent man could be damned by circumstantial evidence. I knew—Barbara knew—that I was absolutely innocent. I doubted much if we could get anyone else to believe it.

The cunning web had been woven with such malicious thoroughness that escape seemed impossible. What was the use of my fighting further?

CHAPTER XIII.

Coming as it did as a dire climax to all my other troubles, the shock of old Rufus Gaston's murder sent me into an apathetic state from which it seemed impossible for me to arouse myself. Without hope and even without interest I dully awaited the approach of my trial for murder.

While there never had been an opportunity for any bond of affection to become established between my aged relative and myself—in fact, I had seen him only three or four times in my whole life, and then only for brief periods—still his unexpected and dreadful end had bereft me of practically every hope of being acquitted of the absurd charge against me. Wick, it was plain, intended to disclaim all knowledge of my relationship to Mr. Gaston, and now there was no one else to explain how I happened to be living in the building at the time of Miss Lutan's murder. Unfortunately I had destroyed both Mr. Gaston's letter to me and the note from my mother which had first told me of the old man's intention. My great-aunt, I learned from the newspapers, had been completely prostrated by the tragedy and had been unable to come to the funeral. The shock of the news of her husband's violent end had left her in a very critical condition. It seemed to have wholly deranged her aged brain, and the physicians summoned to the Maine camp where she was, refused to permit her to be removed from there or to let anyone talk with her, declaring that the least excitement of any sort would be apt to have fatal results.

To be sure there was my mother, who could prove my relationship, but I felt there was little use of dragging her into it. On reading of the tragedy she had hastened to make the journey West to attend his funeral and had been puzzled and alarmed by not finding me there. All the time I had been in prison I had been writing her my usual weekly letter, affecting a cheerfulness I was far from feeling and telling her nothing of what had happened. Her letters to me, addressed to the Granddeck, had been forwarded by the post office, so that until after she arrived in the city she knew nothing of my plight. It had been my hope that I would be able to conceal everything from her until after I had been triumphantly acquitted. If I were not she would know the worst soon enough.

When she first learned, or from what source, of my predicament I was unaware. I did not even know of her presence in the city until the day after my great-uncle's funeral, when—just twenty-four hours before my trial was to begin—a keeper brought me word that she was waiting downstairs to see me.

I steeled myself for the interview with her. Naturally I expected that she would be terribly horror stricken and shocked at my plight, but what her attitude toward me would be I could not conjecture. I fully expected nothing but reproaches from her. She had been so opposed to my coming to

"Oh, My Boy, My Boy!" She Had Cried as She Saw Me, "I Know You Didn't Do It."

New York that I felt certain that she would insist that my conduct must be responsible for my being where I now was. For years, it seemed to me, the relations between my mother and myself had been nothing but continuous misunderstandings. To my great amazement and bewilderment not an unkind word nor the suggestion of a reproachful thought came from her lips.

"Oh, my boy, my boy," she had cried as she saw me, "I know you didn't do it. I know my boy is innocent! What can I do to help you?"

In that glorious, wonderful moment of reaction all resentment I had felt toward her forever vanished. I had one sacred, unforgettable glimpse of the eternal greatness of the Mother heart, ever-ready to forgive, ever quick to comprehend, ever prompt to aid. For one sweet hour we talked together, more understandingly than ever before in our lives. Freely and fully I told her everything, even to my wonderful but hopeless love for Barbara Bradford. She was willing, anxious, eager to aid me—but what was there that she could do?—what was there that anyone could do?

It was hopeless for a lone woman of limited means, unacquainted with the big city and unused to its ways, to attempt to battle against such powerful and desperate criminals as were concerned in the far-reaching plot to make me the scapegoat of their heinous misdeeds. I could only advise her that she see McGregor and Gorman and be guided by what they suggested.

When the morning of my trial actually arrived I entered the courtroom in a state of dull apathy. The night before I had not slept at all. I had spent all the black hours reviewing my life especially the last year, thinking with what high hopes and great expectations I had come to the metropolis and how miserably everything had turned out for me. Step by step I had reviewed the events that had brought me, discredited, all but friendless, all but penniless, into this dismal courtroom accused of a horrible, cowardly deed, seeking to see wherein I might have altered my recent actions or changed the course of my life to avoid having arrived at this shameful goal. Yet, strange to say, I found myself after mature reflection convinced that had I this last year to live over again not in one iota would I have done differently—no, not even if I could have foretold what the future had in store for me.

When she came to school the next day with the half-finished work, the teacher asked her why she had not finished it; if she had run out of yarn. "Oh, no," answered Margaret; "I just run'd out of time."

ROCKING CHAIR IS INDORSED

French Authorities Declare Great American "Institution" to Be Physiologically Correct.

Nobody who has studied the rocking chair will be surprised to hear that the French Academy of Science has declared it the most hygienic of all seats instead of a mere American fad. It is, as the academy says, physiologically correct. The trouble with it is that it is not always psychologically correct. Its baneful effects are not on the rocker, but on the beholder. It is an all-around joy only when it is not rocked. New England ladies used to test a new neighbor by getting her to sit in a rocking chair. If she could resist rocking she was of the elect. This simple test of the nerves has made or marred a great many newcomers' popularity.

The advantage of the rocking chair is that it puts the body in perfect balance. The skull is kept in the proper position. But oscillation does not add to the benefit. It is good to find an invention which has been maligned because of misuse indorsed by the scientists. Let these gentlemen next find something good to say about silk hats.

Rents Hurt Ghost Industry.

In England desperate people in search of houses to rent or buy are advertising that ghosts are no drawback. Any one who happens to own a hitherto unrented house because tradition says it is haunted is assured that the seekers for a domicile will accept it at the rental asked for regardless of the haunter or hauntess. It is suspected that in England, as in several other countries, ghosts of landlords would be less objectionable than those of other folk. Whatever his losses in the past, the landlord as a rule is regarded in these days with deep suspicion as a profiteer. In many cases this attitude is probably unfair; there are some considerate landlords.—Toronto Globe.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

"Section 93. The State shall not engage in works of internal improvement nor lend money or its credit in aid of such, nor shall the State be interested in any private or corporate enterprises or lend money or its credit to any individual association or corporation, provided that the State may under appropriate laws cause the net proceeds from the convict fund to be applied to the construction, repair and maintenance of public roads in the State, and the legislature may also make additional appropriations for that purpose; and, provided further, that the foregoing prohibitions shall not apply to the promotion, development or operation of harbors or seaports within the State or its jurisdiction, provided, further, that any such work or improvements shall always be and remain under the management and control of the State through its State Harbor Commission or other governing agency and provided further that the adoption of this amendment shall not affect any other amendment to the Constitution which may be adopted pursuant to any resolution of this session of the Legislature."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.— The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr Parsons describes—valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E 92

NON-RESIDENT NOTICE

SHERIFF CAPTURES STILL ON LAST MONDAY NIGHT

Last Monday night Sheriff Gore went over to the western part of the county between Billingsley and Pletcher and located a big moonshine still. He destroyed the outfit with about 200 gallons of beer. Owing to the pressing duties of the Sheriff at court this week he was unable to stay with the still and wait for the operators to start up the works. He had to tear it up and come back to Clanton in order to be here at court Tuesday morning.

MISTRIAL IN GUIN CASE

THORSBY ITEMS

An item of interest to all the citizens of Thorsby is the announcement of a new organization called "Thorsby Entertainment & Lyceum Bureau" composed of the following officers: Rev. J. M. Graham, president; Prof. C. M. Williams, secretary; and C. R. Foss, Treasurer.

The purpose of this organization is to further, and bring in to the community entertainments of high class and great educational value.

No time and labor shall be spared by the members of this bureau in their endeavor to make this work successful, to the end that Thorsby may rank high in offering its citizens a splendid and uplifting entertainment.

It is hoped that the citizens of the town will back up this bureau with their moral and financial support.

The bureau also announces that the Lyceum for the 1920 and '21 season has already been arranged for and is composed of six excellent numbers. All the numbers will be headliners, and well worth your attendance no matter how busy you may be.

The various numbers will be announced in the near future through these columns, as soon as definite dates have been received.

The week of October 11 to 16 is set aside as Lyceum week, when season tickets are to be placed on sale. Let us all get busy and for the good of the town be a Lyceum Booster.

Judge Reynolds left on Tuesday morning for Birmingham. He will spend the rest of the week in the interest of his campaign for Senator in Jefferson County.

THE TON AND THE DOLLAR

$1.00 ONE TON OF FREIGHT

HOW FAR WILL THIS DOLLAR SHIP THIS TON OF FREIGHT?

BY HORSE AND WAGON — 4 MILES

BY MOTOR TRUCK — 20 MILES

BY RAIL ROAD — 150 MILES

BY RIVER — 300 MILES

A shipper does not have to live on the river or near a river town to get advantage of reduced freight rates by reason of water transportation.

Public terminals are being built at many river towns to transfer freight from the barges or boats, and vica versa.

A joint rail and water rate, providing for through bills of lading, has been published in the tariffs.

Joint Water and Rail Rates Are Twenty Per Cent Lower Than All Rail Rates

The shippers of Alabama will save millions of dollars through the use of the waterways, when adequate port terminals are provided by the state.

THINGS MUST BE EQUALIZED

Everyone who gives any thought to the conditions that now exist in the commercial world must have long ago reached the conclusion that something must be done to equalize conditions or else there is going to be a congestion of business by an over-due amount of unrest and dissatisfaction.

Farmers of this section of the country have made this present crop of cotton at great expense, and of course they very rightfully feel that they should have a price for the staple that will return to them the money spent in making the crop with a fair profit for living expenses.

On the side of the merchant we find them stocked up with houses full of goods that cost them far above normal prices, and of course very few of these men are able to let their goods sell at a loss and continue to live.

The situation demands steady nerves. We must not get frightened. Some erratic movement migth develop into a whirlwind of desperate temperament and organized violence. The farmer should understand that the local merchants are in a tight place as well as himself. The merchant must be as lenient and sympathetic with the farmers as possible, for any merchant must surely know that the farmers of the south must have all the rope possible right now in order to get by the rocks.

If our farmers will go just as far as they can to help the local merchants, and in turn if the local merchants, bankers and business me will go the limit of their ability to help our farmers and mutual confdence and sympathy is maintained among these men, the problem will be far more easily solved. But if the farmers and local merchants and business men attempt to cut each others throats, the situation will become more puzzling and the result will be that the big sharks of the commercial world will swallow us all together.

If we keep peace among ourselves we will be better able to weather the storm.

DOG REGISTERING SLOW

Circuit Clerk, M. D. Fohee, calls our attention to the slow progress of dog registration in Chilton County this year. There are so far only a small number registered as compared with the number registered last year.

We urge the owners of dogs to take notice of the requirements of the dog registration law, and comply with the same in order to avoid any trouble. Of course we don't care whether the dogs are registered or not, but we want to see the people saved from as much trouble as possible. The law is law, and the easiest way out is not through neglect but through prompt compliance.

Those dogs not registered by Oct. 15th will be taxed double the regular amount, and the sheriff will be required to see that all dogs are tagged or killed.

The enforcement of the dog law this year is going to be more rigid than it was last year, and these who do not register dogs in the required time are courting trouble.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

At the service last Sunday morning some very interesting facts were made known as presented in the letter to be read at the Unity Association that convenes this week, as showing the progress of the church for the year just closed. Thirty-eight members have been added to the roll, sixteen of them by baptism and eighteen of them by letter. The Senior B. Y. P. U. has been re-organized with some 25 members. The Junior B. Y. P. U. has also been organized with some fifteen members. A new church site has been purchased for the sum of $3,500. For the new building enterprise $25,500 has been subscribed. The amount actually cashed in by the church for all purposes, including the campaign and local expenses amounts to the grand total of $9,960.57, or an increase over last year of $6999.17. Ninety-four visits have been made by the pastor during his present period of nine months. This is a very creditable report and is an evidence that the church is accomplishing much that is really worth while for the kingdom.

Last service a very interesting programme was rendered by many of the members of the school during the morning session of the Sunday School. Songs, readings and dramatised pieces were much appreciated.

The roll call service of the church was an interesting occasion when a goodly number of the membership answered to their names when called. An appropriate sermon was preached by the pastor and followed by the observance of the Lords Supper which made it a fitting and impressive climax to the morning worship.

The service will be held next Sunday as usual. Morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:30, p.m. Sunbeams will meet at 3 p.m. and the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. The Senior B. Y. P. U. at 6:45 The public is earnestly and cordially invited to these services.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL ELECTION

STATE OF ALABAMA,
CHILTON COUNTY.

To the Qualified Voters of said County:

Whereas, the undersigned, Sheriff of Chilton County, Alabama, received a writ of election or notice of a special election from Honorable Thos. E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, that a special election would be held on the 2nd day of November, 1920, at the various voting places in Chilton County, Alabama, to elect a Senator of and from the State of Alabama, to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy for the unexpired term, created by the death of Honorable John H. Bankhead on March 1, 1920.

You will, therefore, take notice that said election will be held at the time, places and for the purpose hereinabove set forth and will be conducted in all respects as required by the laws of the State of Alabama.

In witness whereof, I John L. Gore, as Sheriff of Chilton County, Alabama, have hereunto set my hand, in the City of Clanton, Alabama, on this the 13th day of September, 1920.

JNO. L. GORE,
Sheriff of Chilton County.

REYNOLDS AND THOMPSON TO HAVE JOINT DISCUSSION OCT. 9

Judge Reynolds will go to Centerville on October 9th to engage Fritz Thompson in another joint debate on political issues of the present campaign. On the night of the 9th they will debate at Blocton. This is going to be an interesting piece of political hairpulling. We hope that an agreement will be made between the speakers in advance that Fritz must stay in the house and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. He should not be allowed to run away like he did over at Columbiana.

BLOOD IS FUEL TO THE BODY

Pumped Through the System by the Heart, it Sustains the Muscles and the Tissues.

PEPTO-MANGAN HELPS BLOOD

Keep the Quality of your Blood at its Best—It means Vigorous Health and Ability to Accomplish.

Blood acts like a fuel. Pumped through the body by the heart, it sustains the muscles and tissues.. It renews them. It feeds the brain—the tissues of the eye and face. That is why people look so pale and lifeless when blood is impoverished. The body tissues are being supplied with weak fuel. The blood has not enough red corpuscles. You would not eat poor food with no nourishment in it; no more should you let the fuel that supplies sustenance to your entire body be inferior. Have good blood. Improve the quality and keep it at its best.

If you look pale and feel weak, if you have lost your enthusiasm and energy, if your blood is clogged with poisons, your system is being fed with a poor rade of lood. That is no way to go around. If yu are not at your est, get at the source of the trouble right away. Put an end to half-living.

Take that ideal tonic, Pepto-Mangan to tone up your blood and purify it. Get the full enjoyment out of living. Breathe fresh air, take exercise.

eB sure to ask for "Gude's Pepto-Mangan." It comes in convenient tablet form and in liquid. One has the some medicinal value as the other. There is only one genuine Pepto-Mangan and the name "Gude's" is on the package.—adv.

JUDGE REYNOLDS OF CHILTON RUNNING AGAINST UNDERWOOD IS VISITOR TO DALLAS COUNTY

Judge L. H. Reynolds of Chilton, who is a candidate on the Republican ticket for the United States Senate against Senator Oscar W. Underwood, was a visitor to the city today and is accompanied on his rounds by W. C. Roper, W. F. DeShazo, and A. B. Manning, all leading Republicans of Chilton County.

Judge Reynolds said he wanted Selma and Dallas County to see what "a live, kicking Alabama Republican" looked like, and that his delegation had been moving around freely without invoking the protection of the game laws. Judge Reynolds volunteered the information that he would defeat Senator Underwood in the November election. He said he would address the people at Plantersville tonight.—Selma Times.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held on the proclamation of the Governor, and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz: The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A. D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging, on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals.

Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and empower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 hereof.

Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constituton of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized.

Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads—by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise and passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties.

Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become a force and effect immediately this amendment is so ratified.

Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.

ELECTION NOTICE

The State of Alabama,
Chilton County.

I, J. L. Gore, Sheriff of Chilton County, Ala., in conformity with Section 357, page 329, of the Political Code of Alabama, (1907), hereby give notice that a General Election of the qualified voters of Chilton County, Alabama, will be held in the several precincts of said county, on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, 1920, for the election of:—

Twelve Electors for President and Vice-President of the United States; Representative in Congress from the Fourth District of Alabama; one United States Senator from Alabama; two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of Alabama; one Justice of the Court of Appeals of Alabama; President of the Alabama Public Service Commission; State Commissioner of Conservation; one Judge of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit of Alabama; A Tax Collector of Chilton County, Alabama; a Tax Assessor of Chilton County, Alabama; Commissioner from the Third Dustrict of Chilton County, Alabama; Commissioner from Fourth District of Chilton County, Alabama; two members of the School Board of Chilton County, Alabama; a Justice of the Peace of each precinct in Chilton County, Alabama; a Constable for each precinct in Chilton County, Alabama;

Also whether the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama shall be adopted, viz:

"Section 93. The State shall not engage in works of internal improvement nor lend money or its credit in aid of such, nor shall the State be interested in any private or corporate enterprises or lend money or its credit to any individual association or corporation, provided that the State may under appropriate laws cause the net proceeds from the convict fund to be applied to the construction, repair and maintenance of public roads in the State, and the legislature may also make additional appropriations for that purpose; and, provided further, that the foregoing prohibitions shall not apply to the promotion, development or operation of harbrs or seaports within the State or its jurisdictions, provided further, that any such work or improvements shall always be and remain under the management and control of the State through its State Harbor Commission or other government agency and provided further that the adoption of this amendment shall not affect any other amendment to the Constitution which may be adopted pursuant to any resolution of this session of the Legislature."

Also whether the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama shall be adopted, viz:

"Section 1. The several counties in the State shall nave power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election. "Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct. "Section 2½. Twenty-five per cent. of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it be expended for upkeep of its streets. "Section 3. That the court of county commissioners boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorzed by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either by the same time of the general election or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

Also whether the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama shall be adopted, viz:

"The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A.D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control, and operate highways railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals. "Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and ampower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 thereof. "Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constitution of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized. "Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads—by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties. "Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become in force and effect immediately after this amendment is so ratified. "Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property."

Jim Grant and W. H. Gillespie were in Clanton Monday as witnesses at Circuit Court. They came down from Shelby County. They have been doing police duty for Sheriff Jackson at Roebuck Mines for the past three weeks. Mr. Grant stated that everything was quiet up there so far as the strike is concerned. The miners are staying out of the mines, drawing their rations from the Union Commissary and whiling away their time waiting for the mine operators to come across.

185 times - no difference!

Miss Betsy Lane Shepherd, famous concert soprano, has made this test 185 times. 185 public audiences, in 185 cities, have heard her compare her voice with its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. No one, out of a total of more than 100,000 listeners, has been able to tell when Miss Shepherd was singing, and when the New Edison—except by watching her lips.

4,000 similar tests of direct comparison, made by over fifty other celebrated vocalists and instrumentalists, have given this same result.

The New Edison is perfect realism achieved!

What kind of music "gets" you?

Tell us—and we'll show you how all its emotional power is RE-CREATED by the New Edison

Is it the soulful violin?—a mellow contralto?—the scintillating flute?—a sweet, soothing tenor?—that draws the quickest emotional response from you.

Let us play your favorite voice or instrument in a new kind of Realism Test. See whether you are touched by the RE-CREATED music in the same way that you are touched by the living music.

We want to show you that the New Edison RE-CREATES all the vital power in all music.

Remember what to ask for—"personal favorites" Realism Test!

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Perfect realism is your one vehicle to the inner joys of music which you crave.

Mr. Edison spent three million dollars in the research work which gave the New Edison perfect realism. He did this in order that the phonograph might transcend its former limitations and (here we quote Mr. Edison's own words), "bring into every American home, music so realistic and so perfect in its rendition as to be an unending source of benefit and pleasure."

The instruments which proved this perfect realism in Miss Shepherd's 185 tests were all exact duplicates of the original Official Laboratory Model on which Mr. Edison spent his three million dollars. You can also have an exact duplicate of this three million dollar original. We have it in our store, and guarantee it to be capable of sustaining the same test of direct comparison.

Important Practical Detail

Our Budget Plan brings your New Edison for immediate enjoyment, without asking for immediate payment. Ask about it when you come in to hear the "Personal Favorites" Realism Test.

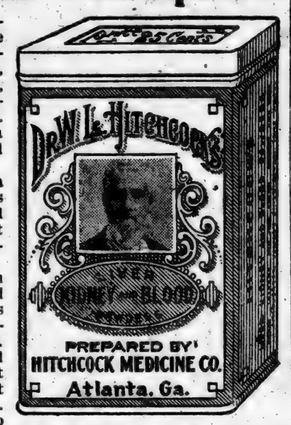
Relief for Torpid Livers and Habitual Constipation



The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you trent only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25 cents, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. Keep it in the home for ready use whenever any member of the family begins to feel "out of sorts." It will prove a household friend and a valuable remedy.

Some people seem to have no use for anything common—not even common sense.

CASCARETS

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

A Marvelous Remedy for Indigestion.

Those who suffer from nervous dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, torpid liver, dizziness, headaches, coming up of food, wind on stomach, palpitation and other indications of disorder in the digestive tract will find Green's August Flower a most effective and efficient assistant in the restoration of nature's functions and a return to health and happiness. There could be no better testimony of the value of this remedy for these troubles than the fact that its use for the last fifty-four years has extended into many thousands of households all over the civilized world and no indication of any failure has been obtained in all that time. Very desirable as a gentle laxative. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

It's Mercury! Attacks the Bones, Salivates and Makes You Sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

"We used medicines without results.

"I was so sore across the bottom of my stomach, and so weak.

"For three months I lay in this condition.

"I told my husband Cardui had helped me once, maybe it would again. He went and got it.

"I began to take Cardui and very shortly I began to improve and get my strength.

"The . . . stopped; the soreness left me.

"My present health is good."—Adv.

"DANDERINE"

Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Abundant!

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage, your hair takes on new life, lustre and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful because each hair seems to fluff and thicken. Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, plain or scraggly. You, too, want lots of long, strong, beautiful hair.

A 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This stimulating "beauty-tonic" gives to thin, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness.—All druggists!—Adv.

Thousands of Women

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 363 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Mrs. Macy Jones Entertains.

The Womans Missionary Society held a most instructive meeting at the home of Mrs. Macy Jones on Monday evening. The subject for the evening was Missionary Work in Africa, and after several instructive papers were read the society enjoyed a reading by Mrs. Neighbors on Stewardship. Plans were made to have a Thanksgiving Bazaar.

The Bible Study, John IV, was conducted by Mrs. Barney Roberts. After a social hour the guests were served a delicious salad plate by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. McSwain.

Mrs. Guy Roberts Hostess.

The Wednesday Evening Card Club enjoyed one of the loveliest of the early fall meetings on last Wednesday evening, when Mrs. Guy Roberts delightfully entertained the members also a couple of tables of invited guests. For this occasion the reception room and dining room were made attractive with beautiful red roses and ferns.

After an exciting game the guests were served a most tempting salad plate. Besides the club members present were Mrs. John M. Bridges, Mrs. John VanDerveer, Mrs. Macy Jones, Misses Naddly, Roberta Curry, Leona Pipes, Kathleen Collinsworth, Lessie Reynolds, Alice Stanfield, Willie Bell Sartor and Lurline Harper. The club prize, a pretty handkerchief, was won by Mrs. Grady Reynolds, and the guests prize was presented Miss Collinsworth.

Visitor Entertained.

One of the prettiest of the week's parties was a Bridge Party given on Friday morning by Miss Roberta Curry as a special courtesy to Miss Kathleen Collinsworth. The apartments in a color scheme of green and yellow were artistic in every detail, golden rod and roses being used in profusion. On each table were placed hand made yellow baskets filled with salted peanuts. After an enjoyable game a most refreshing salad plate was served, adorned with Marshall Niel rose buds as favors of this enjoyable affair.

The highest score was held by Miss Lurline Harper and was presented a lovely bottle of toilet water, with the guest prize, linen handkerchiefs, were given to Miss Collinsworth.

Those enjoying the game were Mesdames Guy Roberts, John Page, Guy Higgins, Watts Moore, Ervin Luckie, Victor Heard, John Bridges, Hugh Simpson, Thad McSwain, Harvey Chandler, Napoleon Johnson, Grady Reynolds, Macy Jones Eric Hart, Misses Collinsworth, Louise Orr, Lejna Pipes and Lurline Harper.

Mrs. Clinton Jones of Ashville, N. C., arrived Sunday for a few weeks visit to her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Polk motored to Montgomery Monday.

Miss Keith Entertains her S. S. Class

Miss Cuba Keith delightfully entertained the members of her S. S. Class last Friday night at the home of Mrs. George Killgore. A picnic lunch was served and later games and a pretty bon fire was enjoyed on the spacious lawn. About 15 little folks enjoyed this happy occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White were visitors to Montgomery Wednesday.

Tuesday Bridge Club Entertained

A most delightful meeting of the Tuesday Bridge Club was given on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Eric Hart, when the club members entertained their husbands.

The apartments were unugually attractive with cut flowers and blooming geranium. After an exciting game the hostess assisted by Miss Maud Mullins, served delicious orange nectar and sandwiches to Mr and Mrs. Hosea Downs, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Page, Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Heard, Mr. Joe Calloway, Mrs. Watts Moore, Mrs. Ervin Luckie, Mrs. N. S. Johnson, Mrs. Carrie Mullins, Mrs. Harv Chandler, Mrs. Guy Higgins and Miss Louise Orr.

Miss Teel Celebrates Sixteenth Birthday.

Miss Birdie Teel was hostess last Friday evening at a birthday party. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion in golden rod and ferns. Punch was served upon the arrival of the guests from an attractive table.

Contests and music were enjoyed by all, after which delightful refreshments were served to about thirty guests.

Dr. and Mrs. Earl Gowan have returned home from Montgomery. We are glad to learn of the continued improvement in their baby's condition.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS
(By Jewel Popwell)

A large number of people were present at the concert Wednesday evening given by Lucile and Charlotte Nadler, assisted by Raymond H. Cox. The numbers rendered were highly interesting and were enjoyed by all present.

There will be no school Thursday and Friday, as the Teachers Institute will be held at the high school.

The Seniors are hard at work, realizing that much work must be done before the end of this term.

The Freshmen have organized their class and have selected the following officers for the year:—President, Luther Little: Vice-president, Herbert Gardner; secretary and treasurer, Lena Vinson; Historian, Chas. Moore; Poet, Era Zelle Foshee; Reporter, Zora Belle Foshee; Goat, Arch Lodge.

Societies.

Programs of Julia Tutwiler and Lanerian Societies were given as usual on Friday afternoon.

The Tutwilers gave a very interesting debate on the League of Nations, "Resolved that the League of Nations should be Ratified." Both affirmative and negative gave some interesting points. The Judges decided in favor of the negative.

The Lanierians occupied the auditorium and the numbers of their program were principally music.

Sam Parrish has moved into the Mrs. Belle George house in front of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. T. L. Thompson and little son, Tom, Jr., of Wilton, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gore this week.

Experienced Mothers know the wisdom of assisting nature before Baby's coming

IT is natural to think of the expectant mother's influence upon the unborn babe. Her food, her habits, her hygiene, and even the condition of her mind, all have a part in determining the well-being or ill-being of her infant before birth.

No woman awaiting the joys of coming motherhood should allow the days to pass without giving nature a helping hand—because the conditions of pending motherhood, existing as they do, over a protracted period of months, create almost a new state of being for a woman.

Just as she prepares herself for it, so will most favorable conditions prevail when her child is born.

TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

Henry Ford is Hand in Hand With the Farmer

Mr. Ford has always shown an unusual interest in the welfare of the farmers, and at this critical time in the history of the world he has shown his deep concern in the prosperity of the farmers by declaring that "War prices are no longer necessary." He has reduced price of Fordson Tractors and all Ford productc back to the pre-war figures, and still offers "SERVICE" to the Fordson owners.

When Mr. Ford set about building the Fordson tractor he had a thorough understanding of just what it should be and what it shohuld do. His early life on the farm gave him a deep insight into the daily life of the farmer; his mechanical genius saw the type of tractor needed. He began work on a farm tractor thirty-five years ago, and for more than twelve years he experimented over more than 7,000 acres of land in different kinds of soil, with different crops.

So he built the Fordson. It is so simple that a schoolboy can operate it. It is low in first cost. It is lowest in operating cost and Fordson parts and Fordson service are always to be had promptly from the dealer.

The Fordson is a profitable investment. It can be used every working day in the year. It is an inexpensive power plant that will lighten your farm work. It has proven its worth on more than one hundred thousand farms not onlyl in operating implements in the fields, but also in belt and pulley work. And it doesn't eat when idle.

Don't delay ordering your Fordson tractor. The demand is greater than the supply.

REGISTRATION OF WOMEN IS NOW GOING ON IN COUNTY

All arrangements for the registration of women voters in Chilton County have been perfected, and the newly appointed Board of Registrars are now engaged in registering and qualifying all who are entitled to register under the suffrae laws of the State of Alabama.

The registration work began at Thorsby in Beat 9 on Monday morning. During the day a total of 190 women were registered in that Beat. On Tuesday the Registrars went to Providence Beat 13 and Jemison in Beat 2. On Wednesday they were at Union Grove, Beat 12 and Cane Creek in Beat 11.

The following is the list of engagements for the balance of the time of registration up to the 26th of this month:

Fletcher, Beat 15, Thursday (forenoon) October 14, and Stanton, Beat 3, Thursday (afternoon) Oct. 14.

Maplesville, Beat 7, Friday (forenoon) October 15, and Benson, Beat 4, Friday (afternoon) Oct. 15.

Mt. Creek, Beat 5, Saturday (forenoon) October 16, and Verbena, Beat 1, Saturday (afternoon) October 16.

Enterprise, Beat 6, Monday (forenoon) October 18, and Cooper, Beat 14, Monday (afternoon) Oct. 18.

The Board will sit at the court house in Clanton, October 19 to the 26th inclusive. Electors from any part in the county may register at any of the above appointments.

Everybody is urged to take notice of these appointments and arrange for the women to register at some one of these places. Do not overlook the fact that any person from any part of the county can register at any one of these engagements.

Rev. J. M. Graham, president of Thorsby Institute, was a visitor to Clanton last week, in attendance at the Teachers' Institute.

Prof. Griffin, principal of the Verbena Public School, was in Clanton last Thursday and Friday attending the teachers institute.

J. R. Robinson of Salem was among the visitors to Clanton last Friday.

Elbon B. Popwell of Thorsby was a visitor to Clanton last Friday.

Mrs. L. O. Vickers has been issued a teachers certificate and will begin teaching at Highland soon.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The music furnished last Sunday by Mrs. Clint Jones, who is visiting her parents, and solo rendered by Miss Roberta Curry, was much appreciated by all present. A fairly good congregation was present at the morning service, and a good congregation at night. The Pathe Phonograph rendered some fine music of a sacred nature at the night service and the sermon on "Almost a Christian" was listened to with good attention by all present. The services will be held next Sunday as usual. Morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:30 p.m. The Sunbeam Band will meet at 3 p.m. and the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. The Senior B. Y. P. U. will meet at 6:30 p.m. Quite an enjoyable social occasion was spent at the home of Mrs. A. N. Miner when the B. Y. P. U. Seniors were entertained. Delightful refreshments were served to the guests present.

There are two interesting services to look forward to in the near future. At the night service next Sunday week a B. Y. P. U. Wedding will be observed. An Automobile Service will also be inaugurated two or three weeks from now. Look out for further announcements of these two services.

The regular church conference will be held at the close of the morning service next Sunday.

We regret to have to announce that for the present, owing to the slump in business and the price of cotton, the building enterprise is postponed. We trust it will not be very long.

If you are a member of the church and negligent in your attendance at its services we urge your hearty cooperation and support with your presence and gifts, a duty which you owe to your Master, and His church and Kingdom.

Everyone is cordially invited to the services of this church.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH

The Sunday School at this place is doing fine with a fair attendance every Sunday. We meet at 10 o'clock every Sunday morning, and all visitors are welcome any time.

Prayer meeting is held every Sunday night at 7 o'clock, which is full of interest and enthusiasm. We are always glad to have every one attend these services who can.

Aside from the program last Sunday night, Rev. J. L. Hand was present and delivered an excellent sermon. We were very glad to have Bro. Hand with us as he is a fine preacher and Christian man.

If you live nearer Friendship than any other church, we invite you to join us in our work here.

MINERAL SPRINGS

There will be an all day singing at Mineral Springs Sunday, October 17. we will have with us Miss Betty Jackson of Birmingham and other good singers. Let's all bring baskets well filled.
